A TURKISH APARTMENT.
From Miss Parol's "Beauties of the Bosphorus."

"The novelties were prodigiously rich Sofas, twas half a sin to sit upon, So costly were they; carpets every stitch Of worshipping so rare, that none but wish To see such gifts o'er them like a golden fish."

Nothing can exceed the beautiful cleanliness of a Turkish harem, save its order; not a grain of dust, not a footmark, sullied the surface of the several apartments branch off in every direction, while the furniture of the rooms themselves is always fresh, and scrupulously arranged. The ceilings are elaborately ornamented; and in the houses of the rich, where the apartments are of great size, a curtain of tapestry is frequently used as a means of reducing their extent. The widows are always closely set together, and very numerous; and where the room chances to be situated in an angle of the building, the three unconnected sides have very much the appearance of a lantern.

At the lower end of the apartment are large closets for the reception of the bedding (for none are appropriated exclusively to sleeping chambers,) and the slaves of the household no sooner ascertain that the visitor has risen, than half a dozen of them commence removing every vestige of the couch, and depositing within the closet the mattresses of embroidered satin, the sheet of gauze or worked muslin, the half dozen pillows of broad silk fringe, and the padded coverlets, rich with silver fringe, and of various parti-colored silks, which have warmed the bed. A low sofa or divan runs round the other three sides of the apartment, luxuriously supplied with cushions, and richly covered with cut velvet or embroidered satin; and the floor is invariably spread with soft and handsome carpets.

It is an amusing fact, that an idea of impropriety is attached to the very name of a harem; while it is not less laughable that they can never give a reason for the prejudice! How little foundation exists for so unaccountable a fancy must be evident at once, when it is stated that the harem, or woman's apartments, are held so sacred by the Turks themselves, that they remain inviolate even in cases of popular disturbances, or when the violence of the mob has suffering their violence to betray them into an intrusion of the wives of their victims; and the search after a fugitive ceasing the moment that the door of the harem separates him from his pursuers.

It is also a fact, that although a Turk has an undoubted right to the company of his wives at all hours, it is a privilege of which he rarely if ever avails himself. One room in the harem is appropriated to the master of the house, and therein he awaits the appearance of the individual with whom he wishes to converse, and who is summoned to his presence by a slave. Should he, on passing to the door, be slipped at the foot of the stairs (a token that a female visitor is in the harem) he cannot, under any pretence whatever, intrude himself into her presence; it is a liberty which every woman in the empire would resent; and when guests are on a visit of some days, he sends a slave forward to announce his approach, and thus gives them time and opportunity to withdraw.

Every good harem has a commodious bath, and a garden gay with flowers and fountains attached to it, where the women may wander at will among the leaves and birds, or dream the sultry hours in their pretty kiosks, overlooking the Bosphorus, where from behind the shade of their artificial casements they can breathe the cool air from the water, and mark the arrowy speed of the graceful caiques, as they fly along the channel.

The amusements of the harem are few and simple; the bath is the greatest luxury, the remainder of the day being spent in lounging on the divan; listening to the music of the zembek played by one of the slaves, and accompanied by the voices of others; in the arrangement of the jewels worn upon the turban; in playing with the birds whose gilded cages glitter upon the walls; in spoiling all the children within reach; in eating sweetmeats and drinking water, or amid the cool fountains, and listening to the fall of the fountains and whispering of the leaves, or listening to the wondrous tales of the Majalidje, ever a welcome guest in the harem, where her marvellous narrations are received with a deep attention and a perfect faith eminently inspiring. Then there is the nanez or prayer, five times a day, never neglected, when all the women, who deeply veiled, as unworthy to appear before Allah with a bare brow, they spread their prayer carpet, and turning their faces Meccawed, they humbly and earnestly perform their devotions. These are their home occupations; but it is a great folly to imagine that Turkish females are like birds in a cage, or captive slaves far from it; there is no public festival, be it Turk, Frank, Armenian, or Greek, where they are not to be seen in numbers, setting upon their carpets, or in their carriages, surrounded by slaves and attendants, eager and delighted spectators of the revel. They have their gilded and glittering equipages, they are normally manufacturers, they are, probably, no women actively trammeled in the world; so free to come and go unquested, provided they are suitably attended; while it is equally certain that they enjoy this privilege like innocent and happy children, making their pleasures of the flowers and sunshine, and reveling like the birds amid the summer brightness, profiting by the enjoyment of the passing hour, and reckless or thoughtless of the future.

From the Richmond Whig.
"The humbug of the Standing Army, and the details of the Militia Bill, have particularly operated upon us with a tremendous force." The details of the bill, and the insidious use which has been made of them, have contributed, more than any other cause, to snatch a brilliant victory from our hands. But the day of delusion is rapidly passing away. The time is coming, when it will be shown, upon the highest authority, that the President has not sanctioned the Secretary's bill. The details of the measure were called for by a resolution of the House—addressed directly to Mr. Poinsett, and the answer was sent directly by him to the House.
Such was the uniform practice of the Government in similar cases. The Secretary makes propositions.—[Richie's Preface to his Book against Gen. Harrison.]
"What a fall is here, my countrymen! What a change since the days of the Hero of two wars and forty broils! Then, the doctrine was, that the President was alone responsible for the acts of his Cabinet Ministers. He was the only member of the Executive Department known to the People.—his Cabinet were his mere creatures and hiredlings, and he was answerable to the country for whatever they said or did. He did assume this responsibility, and made it the justification of many a high-handed measure. He and his men contended that the opposite doctrine was the one recognized and practiced in the monarchies of Europe. There, the Kings were as amenable to the People, but their Ministers, by whom they acted, were. The "Old Hero" prided himself in acting in opposition to this principle of European despotisms. He assumed the responsibility. But now his puny successor takes the opposite tack —he skulks from all responsibility. His creature, who holds office but at his beck and nod, has prepared a plan, the President recommends it—but when the People discover it to be Federal and monarchical, and threaten to eject him from office—O! he never says it, and certainly never approved it.—It's all the work of my Secretary—I wash my hands of it. This is the aspect in which the Editor of the Enquirer would present his friend and patron, Mr. Van Buren—a dastard and a hypocrite—a compromiser of his friend to subvert his own interests.
If Mr. Van Buren shall be mean-spirited enough to occupy the position assigned to him by his advocate, or if the Secretary of War shall consent to be made a scape-goat to screen his master, at the expense of truth, unluckily for both, the selfish meanness of the one, and the truckling subsidiency of the other, will avail neither of them any thing better than an enlightened public.
The past cannot be recalled; the records of the country cannot be obliterated. It is written, and cannot be denied, that the Secretary, in his annual report in December last, gave the outlines of his military scheme, and added:
"The plan of the latter has been left subject to regulation—a plan of which I am prepared to submit to you."

We ask especial attention to the pharosical He was then prepared with his plan, which plan upon a call of the House, he afterwards submitted to Congress in the shape of a bill. But this plan, which was at that time prepared, and which was laid before Congress three months afterwards, was thus endorsed by the President in his annual message:
"The present condition of the defenses of our principal seaports and navy yards, as represented by the accompanying report of the Secretary of War, calls for the early and serious attention of Congress; and, as connected with this subject, I cannot recommend too strongly to your consideration the plan submitted by that officer for the organization of the militia of the United States." Can any man deny but that the President designed the plan, understood as approving, and actually did approve of the plan, which was the bill, and which was then prepared?

The effort of the President and his friends to shuffle off the responsibility, under such circumstances, for every man whom it may impose upon, will, by its mingled falsity and cowardice, disgrace twenty others. We may continue to respect bold frauds in error, and even forgive heroes; but when he seeks to screen himself by cowardice and falsehood, the original offense becomes aggravated, and he deserves only scorn and detestation.

BANK BILL.—The following is a synopsis of the bill introduced into the Legislature of Pennsylvania on Tuesday last, from the Committee on Banks.
1. Abolishes proxies, and prescribes the mode of conducting bank elections.
2. Not liable to hold any stock, except of this State and of the United States.
3. Reserves legislative power to alter, amend or repeal bank charters, and to lay taxes, at any time it may choose.
4. Repeals conflicting laws.

A DIALOGUE TO BE TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS.— There is nothing better than this in Lucian. We advise every Whig paper to publish it, as a specimen of a good deal of truth in a mighty small nutshell. We copy it from the Geneva (N. Y.) Courier.
Whig. Why did you not nominate a Vice President at Baltimore?
Loco. Because we are strong enough to elect one without.
Whig. Oh!—And why, then, did you nominate a President?
Loco. Because—because—Whig. But really, why did you nominate a Loco?
Loco. We preferred to leave the people unbiassed in their choice!
Whig. Let me see; why did you nominate a Loco?
Loco. Why?—why—really—why, because—because—I say, what will you take to drink?

TERROR TO QUACKS, AND THE VEis an infallible remedy for the effectual extirpation of all species and symptoms of the V.—L. disease.

They have long been in general use by the public, and executed with reasonable success, it is scarcely the power of scepticism to doubt its virtues, or of envy to deny them. It has achieved an ascendancy of reputation, and received the approbation of the most pretensions, and has secured a conspicuous station in universal favor, by intrinsic worth alone.
