THE HOME TOWN PAPER
By Edmund Vance Cooke
A dozen times I've said it!
Some warm word to its discredit,
Some derogatory adjective beginning with a "d."
"It's a soporific session!
"It's the ultimate transgression!
"It's as newsy as an epitaph of eighteen sixty-three!"
"Its editor's a moron!
"He's a man I'm always sore on;
His head's a Faber Number Two and paste is in his veins."
"His sheet's an anaesthetic,
Tempered by a mild emetic;

It has every sort of childishness, excepting growing pains."

Yes, it's "sad" and it is "sloppy,"
But when I find a copy,
When on some sad vacation far away
From home and biz.,
O, my comrades, what a capture!
As I seize on it with rapture,
For the dear, old home town paper is the only one which is!

So here I light a taper
To the good, old country paper,
And I lay upon its altar praise, apologies and such;
May the old sheet hang together
Braving every wind and weather
And may its readers multiply like rabbits in a hutch!
