change which is apparent to all present. The fact that the Senate of Louisiana is presided over by a man of my race, who has ever been the object of the animosity of progress which has taken place in the Southern States...

There is no one present more anxious than I am to see the State of Louisiana restored to the Union—not as it was, but as it is. Previously she was in the Union, and she will be free to do as she pleases, but her freedom was confined to one class. Now she is going under a republican form of government, granting civil and political rights to all.

As to myself and my people we are not seeking social equality; that is a thing no man can govern. We all have our preferences, and we will have them. We will have no legislation can select them for us. We ask nothing of the kind. We simply ask to be allowed an equal chance in the race of life with our white brethren.

I am truly happy that we are about to return into the Union, for as much as any of you object to military rule, I believe that there is ability enough in the State to govern itself. I hope that the harmony will exist among us to such an extent that no interference of military power will be necessary on the part of the general government.

Gentlemen, I thank you for the kind courtesies and the leniency you have extended toward me. If any action of mine has been considered, I hope that the feeling will be removed and that the Senate will believe I acted under my conscientious convictions of duty, for my sole object has been to do just what I thought right.

I shall use my utmost endeavors to preside impartially over this honorable body, and to promote harmony and dignity in its deliberations.

MOTIONS. Mr. Ray moved that Senator Day have leave of absence until Tuesday next.

Adopted. Mr. Ray offered a motion that the order of the day be called and taken up at one o'clock P. M. each day.

The motion was adopted after an amendment that the time of the day should be at half-past one o'clock P. M.

Mr. Bacon moved that the "previous question" be not hereafter used in the Senate.

In the Senate on Thursday the following debate was had upon a bill: Mr. Blackman spoke at some length, opposing the passage of the bill. He said he did not oppose it in any factional spirit, but yet opposed it on its merits.

He said that he had no means of judging of its merits or demerits. He said that he had no objection to its being brought up for discussion. He regarded the bill as one gotten up for political purposes, and he should oppose any partisan measure, whether emanating from his own or any other party.

Mr. Jewell followed Mr. Blackman, and said the bill was intended as a rebuke to the Legislature. He said that he was not a partisan, and he would not be. He was opposed to making him or anybody else a dictator, and he would say openly and freely what he thought of the people of New Orleans would never submit to such legislation. He regretted that these revolutionary measures have been inaugurated, and he feared they would be productive of trouble. He appealed to the majority to be cautious, and not to go too far.

Mr. Lynch said that he had not intended to speak on this bill at the present time, but he had hoped it would pass, and that our deliberations would be uninterfered with. He said that he was not a partisan, and he would not be. He was opposed to making him or anybody else a dictator, and he would say openly and freely what he thought of the people of New Orleans would never submit to such legislation. He regretted that these revolutionary measures have been inaugurated, and he feared they would be productive of trouble. He appealed to the majority to be cautious, and not to go too far.

Standing here on this floor, saturated with the blood of loyal men who were butchered by a mob police in 1865, I will assert the right of free man whatever may be the consequences. I am not here by the courtesy of any gentleman on this floor, and am not to be intimidated in the discharge of my duty by such remarks as those made by the last speaker. I will assert the rights of a free man and revolutionary war my duty whatever may be the consequences.

What is this bill that has created such excitement and been so violently assailed? Simply one which will allow the Governor to appoint Peace Commissioners, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. What is there objectionable, tyrannous and revolutionary in such a measure? I regard it entirely unnecessary to discuss it, and move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.
