out that it would pay for the trouble to go to Boudreaux's and other first-class places over the way. A ride to the Lake on the antediluvian old Pontchartrain road has been for years regarded as a serious, if not dangerous trip, and as a pleasure excursion is seldom thought of twice. It is high time this city were emancipated from this old monopoly.

The natural route to the Lake is by the New Canal, on the lower side. The subject of constructing such a road has already attracted the attention of capitalists, and we learn that application will be made to the Legislature next winter for a charter. A well built track out Delord or Julia street from some point near the levee, stocked with new, clean cars, and with good engines, properly managed would probably receive a liberal support.

The fare should be ten cents each way, and not twenty-five cents, as by the old road, unless the passenger returns the same day by the same road. The lake end of the New Canal is by far the best point near the city for a business place. It is nearest to the commercial part of the city, affords a good harbor, and is already the centre of the greater part of the lake trade.

RAILWAY WORRYING TO THEM. The disorderly characters in and around Pontchartrain having heard of the brilliant exploits of their friends in Claiborne parish and in Alexandria in the newspaper smashing business, have felt rebuked that they should have permitted a few numbers of a loyal paper to appear in their community without acting with becoming vigor.

In order to make up for lost time, they began at once to look for the printing office, but so far have been unable to find it. The editor, who chances to be the Mayor of Pontchartrain, this assists them in the search. A great many curious individuals are almost distracted because they can not find out where our office is, and unless definitely decided whether or not to cancel the paper, will be at the expense of burying some of them, inasmuch as they will die of anger. Gentlemen, our office is at Pontchartrain, but our types and presses are where you will not detect them as your Klan is in the habit of doing in other localities. When you become sufficiently civilized to be trusted with a printing office we will show you one. We will wait a while and watch the current opinion.

THE HOMER ILIAD. Blackburn will not die. He insists on publishing that I had just as long as he sees it, and the chances are he will do it. It is something like the fabled giant, who increased in strength each time he was thrown to the earth. He published an advertising supplement on a neighbor's press, and says: To whom it may concern.—Our office has again been moved—this time entirely ruined—so that we are only able for the present to publish the "Advocate" and "The Republican" of our neighbors at the address of our office, to issue a supplement or advertising sheet. This will enable us to fulfill all our contracts and obligations of an official character, until it shall be definitely decided whether a freeman, in and free country, shall be permitted to publish a free and outspoken newspaper, secure from the spoliation of outlaws and assassins. Meanwhile, we call upon all good men to sustain us in the right, and trust our legal rights. We know our rights; and knowing, shall maintain them. And we will be assisted, if necessary, by all the powers of this great Government.

LETTER OF HON. THOMAS W. CONWAY. On Mixed Schools and Compulsory Education. In your issue of the fourteenth instant, there appeared a communication signed "Republican," in which I am requested to give my views concerning "Mixed Schools and Compulsory Education."

I had hoped, since the election of General Grant, to hereafter avoid public discussions, yet it would seem as if your correspondent's request should be complied with, especially as the subject is one concerning which all classes of citizens feel a deep interest.

It has been alleged, and extensively believed that I was inexorable in my desire to have the constitutional provisions on education enforced, even at the hazard of having no public schools whatever, in the State, and some have undertaken to say that it was my purpose, in case the children of the State were not sent to public schools, conducted on the mixed principle, to go to their homes with an armed posse, seize them, and bear them away for me. Some credulous persons have probably credited this foolish fabrication, while others, knowing better, felt obliged to go in order to serve some political or partisan end. The constitutional provision in which mixed schools are authorized, is one that has my indisputable sanction, and I have no doubt of its practicability so long as the white population of the State arrays itself almost wholly against it.

That we can establish any schools for colored children and secure the voluntary consent of the white citizens of the State to their continuance and support indicates a degree of progress which warrants the belief that, in a few years, those privileges now either entirely denied, or held in abeyance, will be fully enjoyed by all citizens irrespective of race or origin.

While every philanthropic mind in the State would be pleased to see the same rule of justice applied to the public schools, that is adopted and practiced in the courts, at the ballot-box, and in the holding of office, I do not doubt that willingness to forego that pleasure for the satisfaction of seeing the children of the commonwealth of all races and conditions educated.

If portions of my theory of an educational system are deemed unwise at this time, would have them appropriately modified. If those who are in favor of taxes for the support of schools desire a different system from that which I would have put in operation I would pay due regard to their wishes, but the interests and wishes of the people should be held paramount to all other considerations. And if the white children of the State would all remain away from the public schools, because of the presence of colored children in them, thereby giving to the latter class the exclusive benefit of the public school funds, I would deem it best to have separate schools for the children of each race, till such time as public sentiment will tolerate the presence of both under the same roof, and in the same apartment. Mature deliberation will, it seems to me, convince any reasonable mind of the correctness of this view. I consider the education of every child in the State as the chief object to be gained. Obstacles impeding the progress of efforts looking to that end should be removed, and even personal aims and prejudices should be set aside when the interests of public education can be promoted by so doing.

The proposition advanced by me concerning compulsory education, has been misrepresented by the newspapers, and consequently, misunderstood by the people generally. It aimed at the adoption of the principle that the welfare of each citizen, and the good of the people at large, required that each child should be instructed in the rudiments of a common education, in public schools or otherwise, and that, in certain cases, the State might use compulsory measures to secure that end. In no word, the intention was to adopt, in this State, the compulsory feature of public education which has operated so long and so successfully in Prussia and other nations of Europe, as well as in some of the Northern States of our own country.

To some this principle may seem cruel, anti-Republican and despotic, but in truth it is one of true liberty, exalted statesmanship and genuine benevolence. THOMAS W. CONWAY, State Superintendent of Public Education.

THE KU-KLUX WAR OF "DEATH TO CARPET-BAGGERS AND SCALAWAGS" is nothing new. It only illustrates that instinctive aversion to radical freedom and progress manifested by conservatives in all ages. The mottoes, "Americans must rule America," and "This is a white man's government," were of the same spirit. Shall our American policy be to "vex the stranger," and to rob the laborer of his hire?

The carpet-bagger is the immigrant, the embodiment of enterprise; the scalawag the laborer, the bone and sinew of the nation. The carpet-bagger is hated partly on account of his oddities, but mainly because of his cordial alliance with the scalawag. On the other hand, the scalawag is hated for his sympathy with the carpet-bagger. Both are cordially hated by their liberal opinions, and the terms carpet-bagger and scalawag illustrate Conservative contempt for the stranger and the laboring man.

Before the war the colored scalawags were slaves. During the war all white scalawags were cruelly conscripted, but to their glory be it said that they honorably deserted the Jeff Davis army whenever they had an opportunity. Thousands of them were the blue, as also most of the carpet-baggers. The genuine scalawag is never backward in changing his course when convinced of his error. The stupid conservatism glories in being unchangeable as antediluvian fossils. Since the war Conservatism has been busy persecuting carpet-baggers and scalawags of every color.

Conservatives know they can never overthrow radicalism by fair means, and hence they resort to foul means through the odious Ku-Klux Klan. But still will carpet-baggers and scalawags co-operate all over the world, and triumph and universal progress will mark their course. The lowly Jesus with his humble followers preached the Gospel to the poor. The Jewish Ku-Klux cried out: "Crucify the Nazarene carpet-bagger!" Nevertheless, apostolic carpet-baggers have made Christianity the universal faith. Columbus was for years a wandering scalawag and carpet-bagger. Millions of the same sort followed him to redeem this new world from barbarism, and still they came and yet there is room. Peter the Great (who was not ashamed of being a scalawag ship-carpenter) by fair means and foul parts of Europe, and by their aid civilized his army, civilized his subjects and established the mightiest empire on the globe. Bonaparte was a carpet-bagger from Corsica. Hereditary monarchy and aristocracy were overthrown, and by this the plebeian (scalawag) Emperor, Louis XVIII, the scalawag rail-splitter of Illinois, was a carpet-bagger from conservative Kentucky. From the good old foggy State of South Carolina have issued many noted carpet-baggers, including the adventurous Fremont and "Hickory" Jackson, who, "by the Eternal," ruled the nation and curbed the nullifiers. Franklin, the carpet-bagger philosopher, was once a poor Boston scalawag. Maximilian, who was lately so gloriously Conservative, papers, was an Austrian carpet-bagger by fair means, and the tripartite carpet-bagger of the last century. These papers seem to be: A Monarchical carpet-bag government on this continent is a blessing; a Republican carpet-bag government is a curse. Finally, almost all great men were originally poor scalawags and a great number became carpet-baggers to better their condition.

Inasmuch as we need millions of carpet-baggers to reclaim and beautify vast regions of wilderness, and as nearly all the useful labor is performed by scalawags, let us not be prejudiced against these two classes. Conservative fanaticism, which classifies the whole of the world into European and American, and oppresses the scalawag, Radical European and American civilization welcomes the carpet-bagger and cherishes the scalawag. Civilization has made progress in Europe and America during the last fifty years than in Asia during as many ages. But British carpet-baggers are fast regenerating India, while the carpet-bagger, A. P. Durkheim, representing China with her 400,000,000 people, is on a mighty mission to the Christian world, which will open the celestial empire to carpet-baggers and progressive civilization. Meanwhile, will American Conservatives persist in persecuting the enterprising carpet-bagger and the laborious scalawag? "SCAL."

Mr. Conway's Letter. We publish to-day a letter from Mr. Conway, in which he gives his views in reference to some points of the long agitated school question. As will be seen, Mr. Conway's wishes and purposes have been largely misrepresented, and the public have not felt inclined to credit him with the catholic views he here sets forth. His communication deserves a careful perusal, because of its high character and its noble spirit.

The New York Commercial Advertiser condemns the proposition of certain radical Republicans out of the city to secede from the State, and create another State government. "Think," that journal says, "of the cruelty and injustice of the proposition—abandon your Republican friends of the city to the tender mercies of the Democratic Arabs of the sum of New York." "Democratic Arabs" is good.

The weather has cleared beautifully, and a bright sun and bracing atmosphere infuses life and spirit into all promenade. The planters are thankful for this sunny opportunity to gather their crops, and are improving it to the utmost. Colfax wants to borrow a Fairbanks' scale. He is going to have Nelly Wade.
