

THE SECOND ONE.—Charles Williams, the one numbered two, was committed to stand trial for severely assaulting and cutting Ernest Martin, on Tchoupitoulas street, last Sunday week.

Charles Williams, the No. 1, having no fear of the law before his physical or moral courage, permitted himself to steal such valuable articles as shoes from the store of P. Goldstein, No. 185 Poydras street. Recorder Houghton gave him a ticket to interview a jury, and yet he is not happy.

Local Intelligence.

A KIDNAPPER.—On the eighth ultimo Ann Turner called on Superintendent Badger to inform him that some one had stolen her infant son, only four months old, from her residence on Dryades, near Delord street. A description of the woman who kidnapped the baby was obtained, and the police force instructed to arrest her on sight. It was ascertained that her name was Mary Dumont, lately of Baton Rouge, and as it was likely she would return to that town, instructions were forwarded to the authorities. The woman soon afterward appeared around her old haunts, with the child, and was arrested, when she stated that a citizen of Baton Rouge had offered her one hundred dollars to steal a child for him, as his wife was extremely anxious to procure an heir at all hazards. Mary thought that New Orleans would be a good field for such operations, and at once came here. She did not wait long for an opportunity presented itself at almost every turn; she saw children innumerable, many of them apparently fatherless and motherless. Seizing Ann Turner's, she thought the reward as good as earned, and returned to claim the reward from her employer. The authorities learned who the employer was, and arrested him also. An officer, accompanied by the bereaved mother, left last evening to secure the child and its kidnapper. There is far more sad reality than romance in this case.

ONE BACK.—George Martin, the man who suddenly fled from Monroe, in this State, taking with him a few trifling articles belonging to one of his fellow-citizens, was arrested in this city, and started on his return last evening a prisoner. Among the trifling articles in question was somebody's wife, but her husband reclaimed her several days ago.

A lady was run over by a horse and buggy last evening near the corner of Canal and Basin streets. The fall was so severe that some of her bones were broken.

William Weisheimer, charged with having shot his brother-in-law, in the Third District, was released on bonds yesterday. The brother says that he will not prosecute.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME.—The entertainment at the Odd Fellows' Hall for the benefit of the Children's Home last evening, was a success. There does not exist a charity more worthy of public encouragement than the one in question. The REPUBLICAN acknowledges with thanks a delicate reminder, emanating from the "Flag Table," preceded over by Miss M. C. W.

James H. Scott, the festive young lawyer who owns to many other names and several wives, was convicted of forgery in St. Louis on the seventeenth and sentenced to the Penitentiary. One of his wives is a resident of this city, respectfully connected Scott ranged from New York to Buffalo, Western cities, and here also, in each place committing some crime sufficiently enormous to consign him to prison for life. The police of this city first drew the official halter that brought him to justice. Perhaps the New York police will claim the credit, as they did when our officers captured Van Eton, the forger.

Between seven and eight o'clock last evening, Miss Gertrude Mounier was promading on the levee, head of Hospital street, when she accidentally fell into the river. Officer Pascal heroically rescued the maiden from a watery grave and sent her to her home on Gallatin street.

Mr. Peter, keeper of a saloon on Rampart street, near the New Basin, was last evening nearly killed by a boat running over him on Poydras street. Some of his friends hoisted him to position by pulleys. This injured painter was closely watched by hundreds of people, who stood in constant expectation of seeing him fall to earth a mass of crushed flesh and bones; but he didn't fall worth a dime.

OUTRAGE.—Lizzie Felinger, residing on St. Philip street, not far from Bayou St. John, yesterday made affidavit before Recorder Stoes, accusing a man, whose name is unknown to her, with having attempted to outrage her. She had been in the suburbs, gathered a basket of dewberries, and was selling them, when the fellow induced her to enter his house, his wife being absent. She thinks he is a policeman. Captain Rey will look up the accused.

QUEER BURGLARY.—Henry Hopkins, Pierre Joubert, Eugene Rogeaux and A. Roman, out on a little rack, paid well for their excesses, by being locked up. They had been engaged searching for two diamonds who are employed in a beer-house. The rattlers searched with too heavy hands, and even went so far as to break a door, when the row commenced. Officer Wood took them in, but the diamonds declined to prosecute; yet the patrolman does not forget that one of the men drew a revolver on him.

CANADA BILL AGAIN.—This notorious king of three card monte and swindler generally has just been making himself notorious along the Jackson railroad. He victimized the quiet people of Amite City to a considerable time, and although there are a number of warrants issued for his arrest by Judge Bradley of Amite, he effected his escape by jumping out of a three-story window. Bill knows too much and is too well known here to trust himself in New Orleans. He has undoubtedly sought a new field for his operations.

COMMITTED.—The steamboatman, Major Robinson, charged with having kicked and otherwise maltreated his wife, causing her death on the twenty-seventh ultimo, was yesterday examined before Recorder Houghton, and as the testimony was tolerably conclusive, the papers were sent down to the Criminal Court. Coroner Creagh makes the charge—murder.

DROWNED.—At half-past six o'clock, yesterday morning, the body of a colored man, identified as Charles Parker, lately a Customhouse inspector, who was drowned on the eighteenth instant, was picked up in the river, at the head of Erato street. Mr. Shields, who found the body, notified the police at Poydras street, and Coroner Creagh held an inquest.

CEREMONY.—The case of Adolph B. Pearson, charged with manslaughter, in shooting and killing Conrad Creed on the evening of January 1, 1871, in front of No. 220 Bourbon street, was continued, and the accused remanded to the Parish Prison.

The case of the colored boy William Johnson, charged with murder, in shooting on the twentieth of July, 1869, at the corner of Dryades and First streets, a white boy, four years old, named Nicholas Ryan, was also continued. The latter case is a new trial, he having been convicted of man slaughter and recommended to the mercy of the court on the thirty-first of March, 1870.

William Leake, attorney at law, from Bourbon county, Kentucky, charged with larceny of $15, by Julia Kelly, did not appear, and his arraignment was continued.

A QUESER CRAFT.—The Mobile Tribune thus describes a queer-looking craft: "For several days past there has been floating in the wharves, foot of Esplanade street, discharging a cargo of ice for Messrs. Taylor & Co., a strange looking vessel, whose peculiarity of rig, and long, narrow, general rakish appearance has attracted curiosity to the people down that way to take a look at her."

She bears the name New England, is a four-masted, square-rigged schooner or barkentine, her hull is of iron. She measures two hundred and eighty feet in length over all, one hundred and ninety feet between perpendiculars, one hundred and eighty-six feet keel, twenty-five feet wide, fifteen feet four inches depth of hold, and registers 462 tons.

The New England, or the Cambria, as she was first called, was built by and in the city of Dublin in 1860, and has had a most beautiful career. Sailing out of that port in the first place as a small steamer to cross the Atlantic, she was afterwards converted to the conclusion that she was not exactly suited to that business, and she was sold, a party of Confederate States merchants becoming her purchasers. Under the Confederate flag she had a successful career, and made six successful trips out of Wilmington, North Carolina, as a blockade runner. On the seventh trip she was run ashore and captured by the federal fleet, her crew either fleeing or being killed.

After this the federal put her to duty as a gunboat at the mouth of Wilmington bay, to break up the very traffic in which she had so lately been engaged, and by reason of her speed succeeded in making several captures. When the war was over she was carried into one of the navy yards for the purpose of being broken up as no longer serviceable, but an examination of her hull showed that she had a value considerably above that of a junk, and she was consequently ordered to be sold. Her new purchasers stripped her of all her machinery, sidewheels and other appliances of a steaming vessel, added six or eight feet to the upper part of her hull, and finally set her about again in her present shape.

Thus we find she has sailed under three flags, performed four distinct lines of duty, borne three names, and from a war steamer has finally settled down to the more regular work of a merchant sailor. The quality of speed for which she was famed as a mail steamer and a blockade runner and gunboat still adheres to her, and as we are informed by her commanding officer, Captain Baxter, the only drawback to her is her length, which, though no disadvantage out at sea, makes her a little cumbersome to manage in narrow streams and about the docks.

A Washington dispatch says of one of the most faithful officials at Washington: "General Spitzer received from his late superior officer, Captain Baxter, a General American Mission, with a view of recruiting his health, but declined. The suggestion was subsequently made by the President, and concurred in by Secretary Boutwell and other members of the Cabinet, that his presence and advice in Europe, in connection with the new loan, would be of great value to the government."

Accordingly, General Spitzer has consented to visit Europe on that mission, and will visit the principal cities, including London, Frankfurt-on-the-Main, Vienna and Berlin. He will leave this country toward the last of the present month. Assistant Secretary Richardson will also visit Europe on similar business, after the new bonds shall have been prepared.

The Clinton Democrat says: "A meeting of citizens was held on Monday evening, at the rooms of Dr. Knapp, for the purpose of consulting in regard to building a railroad. There was but one opinion expressed, and that was we must, and that we should have a railroad. The subject of the railroad was the thing, first, last, and in the middle. On comparing notes, the feasibility of connecting our town with the Mississippi river by a first-class line was so manifest that many of the present members of the committee admitted that light was breaking. We have been waiting for the backbone, the marrowbone, to build us a road, and we have waited in vain; now let us all go to work and say we will build it, and the thing is done. One hundred thousand dollars raised by East Feliciana parish will give us railroad facilities. It will and can be done!"

The Houston correspondent of the Brazos Eagle writes: "In parenthesis, I must remark that New Orleans may contribute to support and yield to the demands of her pet monopolist, 'old Morgan,' and delay the extension of a railroad into Texas just so long as she pleases. It will make no difference to the citizens of Houston, or to the citizens of the State. As soon as communication with St. Louis is opened, Texas will have but little if any interests in common with New Orleans. The suicidal policy pursued by New Orleans in matters of transportation, has turned the attention of the people of Texas in other directions, and just as soon as railroad communication is opened the people will follow their intentions."

This is from the Bay St. Louis Gazette: "A few nights ago the cars on the Chhattanooga railroad ran over an ox and killed him, some five or six miles west of Bay St. Louis. Strange to say, the night following the conductor of a freight train from Mobile to New Orleans found near the same place a slight obstruction to the track, and he reported the shape of a cross the laid across it, and when he slackened speed to have it removed, a double load of buckshot was fired at him from the bushes near by. Of course it was too dark to see the perpetrator or to pursue him, but we hear that there is some slight clue, and that the criminal will probably be brought to justice."

A bill has been introduced in the Texas Senate providing for a division of the State, and the erection of a new State west of the Colorado river. One of the Texas Democratic papers, while not approving a division, says that if the bill passes, as it thinks it will, and goes to the people, those of the north and east of the State are so decidedly in favor of division, and their popular strength at the ballot-box is so great, that they will accept the division with the boundaries submitted to them rather than postpone the division to a more distant day."
