Terrible Sufferings of the Planters Who Went to Brazil—A Picture of Despair, Depravity and Destitution—An Intelligent Planter's Opinion of Brazil and His Venture—A Sensational Story Related.

Immediately after the collapse of the great rebellion hundreds of adherents of the "Lost Cause," some of whom had been soldiers in the armies of the defeated confederacy, were led to believe that in Brazil they would find a climate and country suited to their luxurious tastes, and a land flowing with milk and honey.

But, a number of very estimable gentlemen among whom were to be seen from Virginia, cotton planters from the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, and extensive sugar planters from the provinces of St. Paulo and Espirito Santo, were attracted to the brilliant prospect of reaping their depleted fortunes, emigrated with their families to the provinces of St. Paulo and Espirito Santo.
