THE STATE FAIR.

There was a general attendance Sunday, and visitors found thousands of chances not only to interest but to improve them.

As the sky threatened rain yesterday, many people feared to trust themselves out. Although it rained in the Fourth District, not a drop fell on the Fair Grounds.

The great stove test will take place today, and there will be a trial of speed of private horses to harness, best two in three, owner to drive.

Mr. Dobear's champion specimens, executed by a pen ball all kinds of visitors. These scrolls and penmanship are quite above criticism—perhaps the finest in this country.

Let it be remembered that, in order to accommodate persons who can not attend early in the day, the grounds and buildings will be brilliantly lighted to-night and to-morrow night.

Mr. J. L. Power, secretary of the Mississippi State Fair, on the grounds yesterday, informing exhibitors that there will be a fair in Jackson on the fourth of December.

In a quiet place is located the Morse adjustable brackets for shelving, particularly useful in laboratories, cabinets, libraries, hotel houses, stores and dwelling houses.

Remember that visitors will have an excellent opportunity to-night and to-morrow night to examine the several portable gas machines, as they will be in full gear.

The brick building is still the centre of attraction, and every person who visits the grounds is sure to go through that department. One day is insufficient to examine even a moiety of the articles on exhibition.

THE CITY HALL.

Our reporter interviewed the Mayor yesterday, for the purpose of ascertaining whether anything of importance had taken place under his official cognizance.

As the Mayor's official cognizance, and found him in social confab with Administrator Alfred Shaw, confabing to that gentleman copious extracts from "Poor Richard's Almanac."

Having been, in his infancy, christened by the name "Benjamin Franklin," he naturally resorted to imitating his illustrious namesake by adopting his parsimonious habits.

After the Mayor had grown to man's estate he left Philadelphia, came South, and being still poor, notwithstanding his economical habits and the precepts of Poor Richard, engaged in the laudable occupation of school teaching.

His school teaching experience of the Mayor antedated the time when Mr. Shaw became a teacher in the public schools of this city.

Mr. Carter, superintendent of public schools, gives notice that the schools will be closed on Thursday, the thirtieth instant, the day set apart by the President and the Governor as Thanksgiving day.
