Third race—Post-stake for all ages, two mile heats, race-purse $100 $500 added, second horse to receive $300; third to save stake.

Senator Harris commented upon the victory over the Customhouse-Democratic alliance as the salvation of the party in Louisiana; eulogized the late Oscar J. Dunn in eloquent terms, and stated that this alliance was deliberate treachery to the teachings and principles of the deceased Lieutenant Governor.

Senator Harris introduced Senator Harris to those whom he had not previously met, and took advantage of the opportunity to heartily endorse his consistency and earnestness as a Republican throughout his public career in Louisiana.

Senator Hunsaker and Noland followed in a similar strain, and added to the enthusiastic feeling already existing.

It was well into the morning when the party dispersed. All felt and expressed the conviction that a new lease of power had been won for the Republican party in this State, and that they could afford to transcend their usual regular habits a little.

REPUBLICANS ON A JUBILEE.

Serenade to Lieutenant Governor Pinchback and Senator Harris. The jubilant feelings of the Republicans of New Orleans, consequent upon the victory in the Senate yesterday, over the combined forces of the factionists and Democrats, found vent last night in a most enthusiastic demonstration.

After two or three airs had been played, Mr. Pinchback made his appearance, and in his usual felicitous and happy manner, thanked those who were testifying their respect for and confidence in him. He regretted that painting and the repairs which his residence was undergoing prevented him from inviting his friends therein, but he quaintly suggested that he knew where refreshments for the inner man could be procured.

This suggestion resulted in an adjournment to the rooms of the Louisiana Progressive Club, where wine and wit flowed freely, and patriotic sentiments, including "continued confusion to the immaterial coalition," were quaffed in bumper.

A motion to extend the serenade to include Senator A. B. Harris, of Concordia parish, who is temporarily residing on Rampart street, near Barracks, was cordially acquiesced in, and headed by the band, discoursing martial strains, the whole company proceeded thither. The welcome was as hearty and cordial as the Senator's reputation warranted his friends in expecting, and toasts and speeches soon again became the order of the occasion.

Governor Pinchback introduced Senator Harris to those whom he had not previously met, and took advantage of the opportunity to heartily endorse his consistency and earnestness as a Republican throughout his public career in Louisiana.

Senator Hunsaker and Noland followed in a similar strain, and added to the enthusiastic feeling already existing.

It was well into the morning when the party dispersed. All felt and expressed the conviction that a new lease of power had been won for the Republican party in this State, and that they could afford to transcend their usual regular habits a little.

Report of Commissioner of Agriculture—Bill to Amend Election Act—Amnesty Bill Out of Order—Appropriation Bill (considered—Resolution Offered in the Klux Committee—The Clark and Gidding's Contest.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—The Report Commissioner of Agriculture, in his report accompanying the President's message, speaking of the needs of Southern agriculture, says: "It must be conceded that the course of agriculture in the Southern States has not been conducted with that care, skill and regard for ultimate results which have characterized the operations of farmers in other States. While their lands are continuously devoted to cotton and tobacco until they are worn out by exhaustion, those of the North are continually improving by a rotation of crops, which is absolutely essential to the life of the soil itself, and without which farming and planting had better be abandoned. These impressions have induced me to turn my attention to these States to seek some mode by which the influence of the department may be directed to benefit them—to find out whether their implements, and especially their seeds, may not be greatly improved, and how in the distribution of seeds and plants we may best reach those to whom they may be profitably sent."

The commissioner says that the Southern States suffer greatly in their interests for the want of seeds, and that their productions would be greatly increased by rendering a rotation of crops necessary. Clover, with its deep roots, and rye grass, a strong grower, will well endure the heat of the South, and will be a valuable addition to the rotation of crops.

Referring to the distribution of seeds, he says: "I am satisfied that the mode heretofore pursued is erroneous; the quantity sent is entirely too small to even an experiment. A part of wheat, oats or other cereal can not be successfully grown, and such experiments almost uniformly fail because the quantity is too small. I need not state that the quantity of seeds which the result is manifest to those who have tried the experiment. It would be far better to put a half or whole bushel of seed into the hands of one conscientious and careful person than to divide the same quantity among ten or twenty."
