THE STATE HOUSE.

Both houses of the Legislature resumed business in earnest yesterday.

The Senate was called to order at twelve o'clock, remained in session until about four in the afternoon, and then took a recess until half-past seven, for the purpose of holding a night session.

After receiving reports of committees, the consideration of the amendments to the election law was resumed, and several sections passed upon.

The extended discussion on the proposed amendments to this law have rendered night sessions necessary, and they will likely be found requisite for the balance of the term, if members are not more brisk in explaining their views.

Shortly after the House had been called to order yesterday, Mr. Faulkner rose to a question of privilege. He said he handed to the Clerk, on Saturday last, a certain "notice," that had been sent him in the shape of a threat.

He desired to have the Clerk read it for the information of members, and he would also ask to have it spread upon the journal of the House.

Mr. Carr objected to having the indisputable message inserted in the journal. It was finally agreed, however, that the Clerk should read the "notice." The following is a copy of the precious document, minus the choice embellishments:

To A. W. Faulkner, of Caldwell parish: We are hereby notified that if you do not cease your attempts to have the State House bill postponed, you will be finished quietly, but surely. Be warned. So help you God.

The reading caused a good deal of merriment among members, and the whole subject was finally laid upon the table.

On motion of Mr. Matthews, the following House bills on their third reading, as they appeared in the printed calendar of yesterday, were finally acted upon:

House bill No. 305 (Mr. La Salinier), relative to criminal proceedings.

House bill No. 306 (Mr. Marvin), to amend section 357 and 357 Revised Statutes.

House bill No. 307 (Mr. La Salinier), fixed salary for parish judges.

House bill No. 323 (Mr. Kinsella), to prevent carrying and drawing concealed weapons.

House bill No. 368 (Mr. Bentley), to incorporate the town of Columbia.

House bill No. 129 (session of 1871), relief of the heirs of J. H. Wisner and his deputy, H. G. Dobson.

House bill No. 227 (session of 1871), to incorporate the St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church Association of Shreveport, Louisiana.

House bill No. 370, introduced by Mr. Harper, of St. Charles, creating an additional district court for the parish of Orleans, with jurisdiction in criminal cases, was recommended to the Judiciary Committee.

House bill No. 392, introduced by Mr. Garstkamp, to repeal the charter of the New Orleans, Metairie and Lake Railroad, was laid upon the table subject to call.

On motion of Mr. Dewees, the report of the city educational conference committee was made, and adopted by a vote of fifty-three yeas to twenty-four nays. It is favorable to the city tax of five-sixteenths of one per cent for the support of the public schools of New Orleans.

On motion of Mr. Matthews the House then went into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering bills referred there, to be taken in the order in which they appeared in the printed calendar of Monday, February 19.

House bill No. 31, session of 1871, introduced by Mr. Buckingham, for the relief of W. H. Vaughan, was considered, and recommended to be submitted to the House.

House bill No. 316, introduced by Mr. Quinn, of Orleans, for the relief of taxpayers in the overworked districts of this city, was recommended to be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Oplatsek strenuously opposed this

THE LOUISIANA PAPER MILL.

A paper mill is new in this city. Many enterprising citizens, at different times, have projected such an undertaking, but if memory serves this reporter aright, it never went along further than to find out what was wanted and then stop.

It was attempted to form an institution of this kind in Chatawa, near Magnolia, Mississippi, to be run by water power of the Tangipahoa river, which has, where it was proposed to locate the works, a fall of thirteen feet within a mile.

The works got so far as the erection of the ground floor, the brick being manufactured on the spot out of the rich beds of clay in that neighborhood, but then a play fell upon it, and the sheriff came in, hoisted his red flag, and sold out the whole concern.

These works are at present in a beautiful state of decay. Hence there is all the more reason to congratulate the founders of the present enterprise in having got so far already as to have the Louisiana Paper Mill, as it is called, in thorough operation, and in the actual business of turning out paper.

The machinery has the capacity of manufacturing 2000 pounds of any quality of paper except writing paper every day, and combines in itself all the "modern improvements" which, from year to year, have been added to the art.

Yesterday was the first time that the mill made paper. For some time the projectors of the plan have been busily engaged in putting it into operation, in spite of the usual difficulties that seem to attend all manufacturing enterprises (except whisky distilling) in New Orleans, and that they have finally succeeded, and are actually working to the profit of the stockholders, the view taken of the works yesterday affords sufficient evidence.

Paper making is simply a process of digestion, as there are knives to operate as teeth, lime water to serve as saliva water, and a gradation of rollers to perform the functions of the chyliferous organs.

To begin with the process of deglutition. In a wide, large room, consisting as yet of only the bare board walls, through which the light comes in dimly by installments, one finds various piles of rags, which have first to be sorted into mixed cotton, soft woolen, hard woolen, white paper, manilla rope and manilla paper, and (according to what style of paper is to be made), the rags having been sifted, are placed in a machine to be cut. The rags pass thence up an elevator into a cylindrical sieve, which, rapidly revolving, cleanses them still more, when they go thence to a revolving steam-boiler, descending through a man hole, where they are treated to a dose of steam and lime water, which operation renders any more cleaning entirely unnecessary and the work of deglutition is complete. The rags are now literally "chewed up," and are transferred to the three stomachs of this monster to undergo digestion. These are similar to the mash tubs in a brewery, and the rags, in different stages of emulsification, pass from one to the other, into one and out of the other, until they reach the biggest tub of all (getting there by a rotary pump, this being like a beer vat, and once in this the rags are reduced to a fine pulp, or rather "soup.")

The operation of rolling over one roller, under another the pulp being "spread" by machinery on a canvass bed, and then "going through the mill" until it gets to be paper at the further end of this series of cylinders, where it is "cut according to order" and then baled. All the kinds of paper are made by this process, the varieties in color, consistency and quality being produced as occasion demands or necessity requires.

The present mill is located at No. 237 Liberty street, and runs to No. 245, only stopping short at the marble yard, on the corner of Girod street, opposite the cemetery, which latter abode of the departed, those who are cheerfully inclined can overlook from the windows of the mill. In common with the stockholders and gentlemen assembled there yesterday, who wished, over a glass of wine, prosperity to the company, the reporter welcomes the enterprise as one which if it does not succeed in the future, will not be owing to the want of good wishes from those assembled yesterday. A handsome collation was provided in honor of the event, and the representatives of the city press, besides Messrs. Sauvnet, Heath, Clarence, Pemberton, Meyer, who are officers of the company, and Messrs. W. A. Weed, N. Schmidt, J. W. Schoenecker, C. F. Buck, S. Keifer, S. Delassize, Aristide Marie, Professor Williams and others.

And the above is about all the reporter knows about the Louisiana Paper Manufacturing Company.
