POLITICAL GLEANINGS.

There was considerable activity and no little feeling, branching out in various directions, manifested among the Independent Republicans yesterday.

Our friend Mr. Reynal and others took heart from the temporary pique and ill temper displayed by defeated candidates to the parish convention, and construed their idle and thoughtless assertions of an intention to build the party as the sober second thought which will not come upon them before noon today.

We doubt if the Greeley and Brown Independent Liberal Parish Committee would have a dozen recruits as the consequence of Friday's lively struggle.

A distinguished member of the Liberal Republican State Committee has demanded a meeting for the purpose of laying before them this proposition: The results of "fusion" being the ostracism of the Republican element, it becomes the duty of conservative reform citizens to unite upon a State ticket, composed of good men, and for that purpose ignoring national issues, and such a ticket is presented as follows:

For Governor—W. P. Kellogg. For Lieutenant Governor—D. B. Penn. For Auditor—James Graham.

For Secretary of State—Samuel Armstrong. For Attorney General—A. P. Field.

For Congressman at large—George A. Sheridan.

The proposer feels sanguine of carrying through his programme, and in winning strong conservative support. His plan also contemplates the ratification of the Republican-parish and city nominations. What next?

Here is a candidate for suicide by starvation, judging by his card sent to us yesterday:

Andy Parle, candidate before the Democratic and Liberal Conventions for all that's left. Election November 4, 1872.

Yesterday the air was thick with rumors of impending duels and street fights. Even anti-bellum political funds were summoned from the tomb of time to add bitterness to the strife for office going on between the Democrats and Liberals; and one prominent orator of the latter party could have been seen for hours calmly awaiting the coming of his Democratic enemy in order to open a lively little ball on Common street.

Democrats damned the Liberals, and the latter returned the compliment, so that a passer-by Parle's or Foley's might have reasonably suspected those worthy caterers had purchased a stock of patent rival damning machines. Republicans stood on the outskirts of the crowds like little John Horners who had a dead sure thing or all the plans in the pie. They only are happy.

Mr. Hugh McCloskey thinks the Democratic delegates who desire to send him to the Legislature "are notoriously bad characters," "little better than freebooters," and goes into the biography of several named in a way that should make Forester and his friends tremble for their laurels. He "loathes their aid."

The Times says of both the Liberal and Democratic "colons," that they are "divisions or factions which fight for names and spoils, without principles," etc.

Yet these are the men whom Mr. McCloskey and the Times have thrust into prominence by their untruthful, unwarranted and fanatical attacks upon honest Republicans, who needed but their unbiased aid and counsel to have given satisfaction to all honest, well-meaning citizens. If this be your reform, we'll none of it.

The announcement by the Times that our distinguished, wealthy and conservative fellow-citizen, Judge John A. Campbell, who has been the recipient of high honors both from the national and Confederate governments, had written a letter favoring the re-election of General Grant, produced a profound sensation yesterday. No one can doubt but that this step is the result of solemn conviction that such a step is for the best interests of the South, and it will influence large numbers of our citizens to "go and do likewise." Such accessions to Republicanism will sweep away the blind and unreasoning prejudices which have kept so many worthy citizens from participating in our local government since the war.

The hopeless discussion now prevailing in the Democratic ranks renders a fusion with them by no means desirable by the Liberals. So warlike has this hostility become that in yesterday's Picayune Sofia Pop McCloskey throws the gauntlet of defiance full in the face of delegates Duffy, Mullen and Bannon, calling them "notoriously bad characters," and declining, in advance, their support for the Legislature. Now, this is too bad, and our soda water friend should not count his chickens before they are hatched. It is not certain that they are as seriously contemplating voting for the carboy for the Legislature, or that his election would prove satisfactory to anybody. Indeed, the community does not imagine him to be half so great a man as he doubts he regards himself. The attack upon Messrs. Duffy, Mullen and Bannon is very serious, but they may possibly survive it. In case, however, it leads to a duel, we suggest that the weapon used on one side be a carboy and on the other a shillab.

This paragraph is from the Austin (Texas) Journal:

The Missouri, Kansas and Texas cars are now running to within twenty-three miles of Red river. It is said that the Red river railroad bridge will be completed the latter part of this month, and that by the first of November the cars will run to Red River City, four miles south of the river, by which time the Texas Central cars are to reach McKinney.

A Jersey paper tells a very interesting story of a little boy in that State. He was climbing an apple tree, and when upon the topmost limb he slipped and fell to the ground. He was picked up and carried to the house in an insensible condition. After watching by his bedside through many weary hours, his mother perceived signs of returning consciousness. Leaning over him, she asked if there was anything she could do for him now that he began to feel better. Should she bathe his forehead, or change his pillow, or fan him? Was there anything he wanted? Opening his eyes languidly and looking at her, the little sufferer said: "Yes; I want a pair of pants with a pocket behind." He got them.

There are two things in this world that are not safe to trade with—a woman's opinions and the business end of a wasp.

LIBERAL PARISH CONVENTION.

The convention re-assembled at ten o'clock, Captain Stanford in the chair. Roll was called. Quorum present. Minutes read and adopted.

The secretary read the following communication:

Adjourning Session No. 2. At half-past seven o'clock Captain Stanford called the convention again to order.

A communication was read from Thomas O'Connor withdrawing his name from the convention as a candidate for Administrator of Waterworks.

A resolution, by Mr. Golding, to exclude all candidates from the floor of the convention, was referred to the committee on resolutions.

The convention then adjourned until Monday, at ten o'clock.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

This body met last evening in Turner Hall, and heard a lengthy report of its conference committee, who held a meeting with a like committee of the Liberal convention.

The committees had arrived at something very like an agreement, giving and taking, and the office of Improvements and Waterworks. This slight disagreement compelled the conference committees to report back to their conventions for approval or disapproval.

This convention approved the action of its committee, but voted not to give up the office of Improvements by a vote of 73 to 17.

This rejection assigned the conference committee to another meeting with their friends, for the purpose of informing the Liberal committee that the Department of Improvements could not be given up for the Waterworks.

Then a recess was taken to give the committee an opportunity to confer with the other body.

While the above proceedings were in progress a dispatch from Mr. McEnery was read. That gentleman urged immediate action on the part of the State and city, would surely go against them at the next election.

The suggestion did not create any enthusiasm. The fusion, as proposed by the conference committee, given this by the offices of Mayor and four Administrators, and the other offices are divided up.

The report of the conference committee was voluminous, giving the dates to hours and minutes.

The Mayor is retained, and Administrators of Commerce, Assessments, Accounts and Improvements, and criminal sheriff. The civil sheriff and the other Administrators are given up to the Liberals, for which see report of proceedings of the other convention.

The conference committee returned, and reported that the Liberals had adjourned until to-morrow morning.

Mr. May offered a resolution that this body go into an election on a proposition, the successful nominees to leave their names at the mercy of a committee.

A motion was made to go into an election of the officers elected to this body, except the Administrator of Improvements, which should be delayed until Monday. Tabled.

Mr. Collins spoke for immediate fusion.

Another motion to adjourn until Monday evening was discussed by the other delegates, who favored fusion, and mentioned that the Liberals are a strong power. Parliamentary usages were nearly ignored, and no motion prevailed.

Adjourned until Monday noon, with the proviso that there should be a straight-out nomination, unless the Liberals gave up the office of Administrator of Improvements.

The vote on this was nearly divided, the motion having a majority of less than half a dozen.

There were a dozen press reporters at the meeting, who took a very active part, and Mr. Andy Parle to adjourn to No. 44 St. Charles street and demolish a basket of champagne. Not a dissenting vote was polled.

Cotton by Railroad.

The Mobile railroad brought in cotton this week as follows:

Monday..... 1,700

Tuesday..... 1,067

Wednesday..... 1,550

Thursday..... 993

Friday..... 1,111

Saturday..... 678

Total..... 7,709

The Jackson railroad brought down during the week cotton as follows:

Monday..... 494

Tuesday..... 296

Wednesday..... 1,012

Thursday..... 1,012

Friday..... 1,012

Saturday..... 1,012

Total..... 6,238

The foregoing figures show what railroad, do for our commerce. That the Mobile road should bring to this city more cotton in a week than the old established Jackson road will certainly be a surprise to almost everybody who has not noted the figures lately. New Orleans is the best market in the South for cotton, and the facilities for shipment are superior. The railroad between the two points has diverted the cotton trade from Mobile to New Orleans, and if our merchants will hurry up their subscriptions and help build a railroad to Houston without delay, we shall have the cotton trade of Texas in general, and Galveston in particular, within two years.

A Wife with Conscienceless Scruples.

James Smith, of Washington county, Oregon, Sunday, two weeks ago, heard great grumblings among his logs near the house. Seizing his gun, he ran to the spot, and found a bear helping himself to one of the logs.

The more she thought the matter over the more she was displeased, till finally she declared "she would not remain thus unequally yoked to the ungodly," and further declared that she will pray Judge Upton, at the fall term, to grant a divorce. She probably was sorry that her husband was not killed instead of the bear.—San Francisco Call.

The Figaro says that an execution lately put into the house of a man in Paris, surprised him while he was at his toilette, and that the official saw nothing more remarkable than a set of false teeth, and he at once set them down in his inventory. The insolvent debtor protested that these teeth were sacred as a part of his person, and suing the agent to the word, he put them at once in his mouth. But the sheriff's officer, with many violent gesticulations, insisted that the teeth having been once in his possession, it was contempt of court to take them from him, and his threats forced the victim to surrender them. A court of law will have to consider the question whether such matters to the make-up of a gentleman when at hand for actual use are sacrosanct.

A cattle show at East Oxford, Maine, lately exhibited a choice collection of rural monstrosities. Among these was a calf without a leg—not the kind suspected of being kept on sale at shops where feminine haberdashery is disposed of, but the genuine bovine article, without a leg to stand on. Another was a calf or rather two calves which enclosed into one at the hips, forming a sort of animated pair of dividers. There was also a pair of lambs joined at the neck, and with one head and eight legs, and standing upright on the four hind legs, that is to say, not the fore, but the hind legs. We hope these country fairs do not encourage the raising of such stock.

DESERPTIONS FROM DEMOCRACY.

(Special to the New Orleans Republican.)

Baton Rouge, October 12, 1872.

Senator Kellogg's speech here to-day has created intense enthusiasm. Great crowds entered at all the Republican headquarters, and the ovation to be tendered to-night at the Huron House promises to be the grandest turnout of all classes of our citizens that we ever had.

Hundreds of our white people are turning over, and Liberals and Democrats unite in giving up any further opposition to him.
