GOVERNOR KELLOGG FIRED AT. THE SHOT GRAZES HIS NECK. A CONSPIRACY FAILS OF SUCCESS. THE MISCREANT RECOGNIZED. About five o'clock last evening, Governor Kellogg had occasion to visit the office of the Morgan Steamship Company, on Magazine street, corner of Natchez alley, and was driven thither in company with Mr. Norton in his cab. He left his team standing before the door and went into the building, remaining there some little time. On coming out he noticed quite a number of persons standing around, and one of them, Colonel Charles R. Bailey, a party holding a commission from McCreary as tax collector of the First District, stepped up to the Governor and asked him if he was Mr. Kellogg. The Governor replied that he was. Colonel Bailey then addressed some offensive remarks to the Governor. The latter replied, "I do not know you, sir," and stepped down into his carriage. The driver started the team, but it had gone a few feet before a shot was fired through the leather top of the buggy, the ball grazing Governor Kellogg and clipping the hair on his neck. The driver immediately drove at a rapid pace through St. Charles street to the St. Charles Hotel, where the Governor dismounted and dismissed his team. He subsequently visited the headquarters of General Emory. This dastardly attempt upon the life of Governor Kellogg created a profound sentiment of horror and indignation among all classes of people, more especially since it subsequently transpired that this was a part of a conspiracy which had been concocted to inaugurate an era of assassination closely upon the heels of riot and pillage.

THE SEQUEL TO THE NIGHT BEFORE. How many people were foolish enough to go to Morgan's ferry yesterday morning to see Ellis, Smith, Lingan & Co., emigrate to St. Martinsville, do not say. If the majority of the rioters would go away and let the city be governed by the law, it would be well to state. Of course E. J. Ellis had no idea of going, but it was reasonable to suppose after the haranguing and howling of the previous night some of the deluded would start. Two did arrive with guns, and were promptly arrested, disarmed and locked up. The evening Herald is responsible for the statement that Mr. Ellis came, saw, and went away again. But no other paper had any such damaging reflection on its customary prudence. It is fair to believe the excitement of the night before caused him to remain in the arms of Morpheus until later in the day.

GENERAL EMORY AND THE RIOTERS. The enterprising Herald sent its reporter yesterday to interview General Emory on the present situation. The reporter's labors were rewarded, about half past five o'clock on Tuesday evening, by finding the old veteran at his headquarters. The following clear expression of opinion was obtained from the General in his blunt and honest way.

REPORTER-By which route, sir, by Morgan's railroad? General Emory-I have not fully decided yet. I am not restricted to that route, and I hear the steamers have been withdrawn that ply between Brashear and New Orleans. Now, sir, do you know what I have heard, and suspect it may be correct, inasmuch as the Metropolitan sent to reinforce General Badger have been compelled to remain at Brashear?

REPORTER-They are fully aware of that fact, General. They fully appreciate the danger of your serious, but what would they have them do-submit quietly and passively to a government they do not recognize as having any foundation in right or law?

GENERAL EMORY-Submission does not necessarily imply pusillanimity. You can maintain a resistance before the courts. Reporter-The courts of the State are effectually closed against us, and are notoriously in the interest of the Kellogg government.

GENERAL EMORY-There are the United States courts. Reporter-They are closed, too, to all intents and purposes. The Supreme Court has postponed the consideration of our case, expressly, as it seems, to remit the whole question to Congress.

GENERAL EMORY-Well, sir, you will find that Congress will not be inclined to take your case into consideration if there is any more Colfax affair.

INJURY MEN. One of the most witty of American newspaper writers is shortly to pay us a visit. Mr. A. B. Griswold, whose general originality is as often quoted as the eccentric writings of the "Dunbar" in "The Saturday Evening Post" and "The New York Tribune" is to be here on Thursday evening. Next Tuesday he will delight an audience at the Varieties Theatre with the humor of his tales, and every one who enjoys a hearty laugh and many of them should be there.

TRAMPS TO BE FURNISHED IF WANTED. Governor Kellogg has been notified from Washington that any requisition for troops made by him in compliance with the constitution will be complied with-to punish offenders and to use in anticipation of violence as well. He is instructed not to hesitate to call for forces in case, in his judgment, their services are required.
