Advice to a Broken Hearted Young Lady.

A broken hearted young lady writes to a weekly paper as follows: "About three years ago I became acquainted with a young gentleman, and although he never paid me any particular attention, he would often accompany me to and from church, etc. But lately I noticed a great change in him. He avoided me as much as possible, and starts if I address him. Can he have ceased to love me? If I know he had, it would break my heart. Perhaps he is in love with some other girl, but as we know exactly what should be done with the young man, we feel as if we ought to speak out. Do not attempt to reason with him or cajole him or pacify him. The next time he calls take a monkey wrench, fasten it securely upon his nose, lead him off to the dungheap, and ask him what he means. If he won't answer, take a brick and throw it at him. If he should head up against the stove or the mantelpiece until his nose is displaced. If he says he has ceased to love you, let your fingers daily with his ringlets for a few minutes, and then suddenly lift out a couple of handfuls, and give an Irishman a land to come in and sit on him while he is down on his hands and knees, and then let him go, and commence your arrangements to rope in a fresh man. You can not afford to rope in your young man upon such a wretched basis; and when he hears you will not throw to heart, or soul to soul, the best thing to do is to continue the nose at you."
