Henry Ward Beecher says in the Christian Union: "To build a theology solely by the logical faculty is as irrational as to try to make a flower with the chemist's tools. But this is what men have done from the time when Paul wrote to the Corinthians against 'enticing words of man's wisdom' down to the latest expositor of Jonathan Edwards."

On Saturday next, our readers will bear in mind, occurs the drawing of single number tickets in the Louisiana State Lottery. The capital prize is $20,000, and the whole number of tickets 10,000. The managers of the lottery make a point of inviting the public to witness the drawings, which will commence in this instance at twelve o'clock precisely.

Colonel Carter has just returned from Washington, where he has been for several weeks, endeavoring to assist Senator Pinchback in his contest for his seat. The Colonel carries with him all his hopefulness, and expresses himself with confidence, and even optimism, that everything will yet turn out right. He confirms nearly everything that has appeared in the REPUBLICAN as to the situation in Washington.

The Catholic priests of Memphis offer unusual inducements to those of their people who will abstain from indulging in the pleasures of Mardi Gras, and recommend religious exercises instead. One of them says: "I sincerely hope that by means of this devotion many will be prevented from participating in the pleasures of the carnival, and I and my brethren bind ourselves to remember in a special manner, by prayer, those who avoid these unholy amusements."

Penny Kemble was once telling some clerical friends a story of Sir Harry Smith, who commanded a troop of horse at Waterloo. He knew nothing about the fortunes of the day; the Duke rode up with his staff and said, "Come, sir, get your troop in motion!" "Which way, sir?" asked Sir Harry. "As the grave the Duke's reply was like a raven, a raven, and with clenched hand shouted, "Forward, sir, by God!" The clergymen were somewhat startled.

A POINT OF ORDER.

In parliamentary language the REPUBLICAN rises to a point of order. It may be briefly stated thus: That the present ill-timed agitation about a new election, which nobody of any consequence seems to want, ought to be postponed until the more important business in hand is disposed of. This is our point, and there are plenty of reasons to sustain it.

The Legislature is in session for the purpose of transacting the duties annually devolving upon the law making and unmaking power. Measures of vital importance are pending in which one way or another every person in the State has an interest. The General Assembly is shorthanded in both bodies. The political agitation has kept about twenty members of the House and a half a dozen members of the Senate away from their duty. This desertion increases the burdens of those who remain faithful to their trusts. Such a dispensation can be borne with a commendable degree of patience, and we have heard no complaints from any one. But the other annoyance of circulating exciting rumors having no foundation in fact, to the effect that the paramount government is already crouching for the spring that is to wipe out the whole State government, and remit us back to the condition of vassalage which the earlier settlers enjoyed under the benignant reign of the Grand Monarque and his sensual successor, is damaging to public business. Excited politicians talk of nothing else but a new election, and will not let others think of anything else. The sixty days allotted for a session are being frittered away without any adequate results. The daily journals, the telegraph, the entire public attention is monopolized by the crazy election schemes of a score of crack-brained politicians, who are urging their demands upon Congress and everybody else, for no better reason than we know of than that their party was caught at cheating, and no one has been punished for it. They want to try it again perhaps. At any rate, they have nothing to lose, and are sure to gain something in case of a fresh excitement. Adepts as they are at passing around the hat, in which they put nothing, of course, they would be sure to make a handsome raise of funds for campaign purposes, which would be put where they would do the most good. Of course, there will be no election in this State till next November, and not such a one then as these malcontented desire to see.

In the meantime, the important business of legislation languishes. There are bills embracing a great variety of objects before the two houses. One measure of great importance has been pressed through, chiefly in consequence of the strenuous exertions of Governor Kellogg. This has, naturally, changed the whole financial policy of the State, and auxiliary laws are needed to assist its enforcement. A number of our citizens wish to have a change in the sanitary laws; others are urging reform measures in the matter of fees to public officers. A bill to establish another criminal court, much needed, is on the calendar of one of the houses, and a very large amount of other business awaits attention. It may possibly be to the interest of our enemies to distract the public attention so that little or nothing can be done at the present session, for the purpose of urging the delinquency against our party next fall, as a reason why the Republicans should be defeated. We wish to say to the Republican members of the General Assembly that the question of a new election, or none at all, has nothing to do with the duties in hand. They may possibly do something to avert it by going to work in earnest and passing wise and popular laws. If they do this, they will be gainers in any event; for the man who is true to his obligations, either expressed or implied, and discharges them with fidelity and ability, is always in demand, and would have nothing to fear if there were an election every day. All of the members of the House, and more than one-half the Senate, are serving out their last days of legislative duty. There will be an election for their successors next November in regular course. They are, therefore, making history, which, in a few months, will be used either for or against them.

We hope our friends will think of these things, and not permit themselves to be swerved from their purpose to do right by the sensational rumors of the advocates of a new election either here or in Washington. They have more important business to attend to, and have no time to waste in the consideration of questions over which they have no control.

REDUCTION OF BURDENS.

The Legislature has acted nobly in relieving the people of heavy burdens. In doing so they have but exercised an undoubted power. The holders of public securities insist that no liquidation of the debt can be valid without their assent. They even assume to demand that taxes shall be imposed, and how they shall be applied by the disbursing officer of the State. This is equivalent to putting a State into the hands of a receiver, or forcing it into liquidation at the will of one or more creditors. The condition of our State is a sufficient reason for its inability to make good its debt. The business of New Orleans is stagnant. The sugarplanting interest has declined, and factors are unable to add to the planters. It has been difficult to enforce the collection of taxes, and the disturbed condition of the interior prevents immigration. This estimate of ability is confirmed, and, indeed, was suggested, by the report of a commission of men of unimpeachable integrity, who assessed the ability of the State to make good its debt at even less than has been awarded the bond creditors.

If it were in the power of one or more creditors to demand that the State shall maintain the face obligation of her debt, who can compel her to make or maintain a tax law. The principle upon which the reduction of face debt has been made is inability to pay the whole debt, and a determination not to pay that which is believed invalid. It would be as unreasonable to object to an act under such necessity as to insist that a merchant whose obligations were worth but sixty cents in the dollar should be compelled to go on toiling at his counter simply because an inexorable creditor demanded it.

But one charge of the opponents of the funding bill is, that the Legislature relieves the people by confiscating the rights of those who have loaned money to the State, while it makes no abatement of the burdens imposed by the collector, the assessor, and the sheriff, and entertains demands for money on private bills; all of which will, in the end, leave, it is averred, but little economy. The Legislature is charged with refusing to pay the debt of the State, that it may keep the money to spend itself. Is this true? By no means. The Legislature is indisputably Republican. To it will belong all the credit of the important reforms enacted and expected. It is relieved of influences which have heretofore pressed the adoption of objectionable measures, and left the Republican party to bear the responsibility to the taxpayers. The Republican party has unloaded, not merely its own unscrupulous advisers, who would have mortgaged the honor of the party to raise money for themselves, but it has unloaded also the Fusion copartnership, which pocketed the gains of any bad act, and left the burden of its shame upon those who, as was alleged, ought to have prevented it. The Republican party will look back and see that the very money made by this Fusion copartnership has been employed to defame the Republican party. The Republican party has thus staked both sides of the game, and is bound to lose, let the game go as it may.

The Republican Legislature will be on their guard, and will not permit indefensible measures to slip through the House. The opposition is exhausted. The corrupt cement which united the elements of Fusion has lost its tenacity. The next question before the people of Louisiana will most probably be, who is the best Republican? Who is the safest, most honest, and most capable Republican? In such case the record of every man who has been in public life will be scrutinized like the State obligations, and a "fraudulent or tainted" representative, like a bond of the same character, will be repudiated by the people.

Our representatives will take care. There is an immense and exclusive responsibility upon them. They are, we know, able and willing to meet it, but they can not be too vigilant, in protecting themselves, individually and collectively, against the next movement of the opposition. The best certificate upon which any candidate can go before the people will be that he has labored effectively to reduce the burdens of the people. With due proof of this, the Republican party and its members will be invulnerable.

SOME OF THE RESULTS.

The Pheasant, with its usual early information regarding all movements of the enemies of the funding bill, which scales the debt and reduces taxation, was first to announce that an attempt had been made in the United States Circuit Court to overthrow this plan for bringing the liabilities of the State down to the capacity of the people to pay. Of course, it plants over the possible impediments this suit may throw in the way of a Republican administration bent on accomplishing reforms which can but fix its popularity to the hearts of the people; but all of its partisan appeals and spiteful statements must fall to hide from the public the evils which will result from the success of this application to the courts. As a sop, the Pheasant does hint to taxpayers that they will probably have the satisfaction of knowing that they will be able to retain the five and a half mill interest tax in their pockets for an indefinite period; but it fails entirely to explain that, granting the prayer to act aside the present comparatively moderate tax levy is accompanied with a demand to assess an "increased rate solely in behalf of the bondholders."

There is another point in this case of special interest to delinquent taxpayers, and to which we can not fail to here call attention, knowing that in many cases these delinquents are deserving of all possible legal relief. The funding bill authorizes the payment of back taxes in Auditor's warrants, which now rule in the market at fifty per cent discount. Few of our unfortunate citizens can afford to lose this favorable opportunity to clear the clouds from the title to their property, and to have a bill of exchange drawn on the Legislature and executive. Yet it is within the bounds of possibility that the Pheasant and its legion of bondholders may shut this door of escape in their faces. We hope and believe their machinations against this truly needed reform measure will be defeated, yet we should fall in duty not to suggest that the procurement of a tax collector's receipt at the earliest possible moment is the policy of prudence and wisdom.

TAX EXEMPTIONS.

As yet a move has been made in the right direction, and to Senator Harris, of Concordia, must be given the thanks of the people therefor. We only hope it will be promptly followed by some more general measure of relief. A proposition was pending in the Senate to incorporate the "Protective Longshoremen's Association," and Mr. Harris succeeded in having struck from the bill the section exempting from taxation whatever property the organization may acquire. It is a matter of small moment to the excellent and deserving citizens who compose the society to be chartered, except as it furnishes a most valuable precedent and new departure in a matter which adds immensely to the tax burdens which grind down themselves and their fellow-citizens. What they lose in their associate capacity will be made good to them tenfold if the principle thus inaugurated be properly carried out. A beginning in this direction had to be made, and Senator Harris shows his honesty and courage in seizing the first opportunity which arose, especially as the parties affected are almost to a man of his own political faith—good and true Republicans.

In this connection, we may refer to the fact that the Catholic society which owns the St. Elizabeth Asylum, on Magazine street, corner of Josephine, has made arrangements to turn that immense structure into stores and residences. We have been shown, by Mr. John Henderson, the architect's proposed alterations, and assure our readers that their execution will add materially to the tax rolls, as well as to the business prosperity and facilities of the vicinity. This is a most commendable move, indeed. Why can not similar steps be taken in regard to the St. Anna's Asylum, on Prytanian street, and other unutilized or half-used institutions of the sort?

OUR SENATOR AT WASHINGTON.

The following mention of the hospitalities dispensed by the estimable lady of our Senator in Washington is made by the National Republican, of the sixth:

Among the many Thursday receptions, none was more delightful than that of Mrs. Senator West, at her beautiful home on Fifteenth street. The hostess, assisted by her always agreeable and ladylike daughter, receives visitors with true Southern hospitality, and while she entertains them in the most pleasing manner, at the same time never forgets perfectly at ease, would that many more of our leading society ladies patrolled after Mrs. West.

Louisiansians, sojourning in the capital, speak in the highest terms of the hospitalities of General West, and his accomplished lady and daughter; the latter the wife of our gallant friend, Captain Luke O'Rielly, of the Nineteenth Infantry. No social circle in the capital is more esteemed, and at none is a more genial welcome extended. The social life of Washington, in the days of Sibley and Benjamin, is remembered, almost, as a golden dream of the past; but their successor is doing much to render that dream a living reality to-day.

In this connection it is only proper to say that the movements of the advocates of a new election in Louisiana, have been constantly parried by the vigilance of Senator West, and their plans frustrated. The combination has assumed at times dangerous proportions, but our Senator has been equal to the emergency all the time. But for his unflinching adherence to the local Republican government of Louisiana, there would, doubtless, have been far different results.

The New York Herald, in a recent article on the subject of the President's proposed message on Louisiana affairs, says, in recognition of this fact:

"DOWN BREAKS"

When the general principle of common sense of justice the General Assembly authorizes the payment of duplicate sets of members from a number of the parishes, we are at a loss to divine. In the cases now pending, not even the exercise of honest differences of opinion as to the result of the question can be fairly set up; in fact we see no motive in the proposition to thus squander the people's money, unless it be to reward a few needy gentlemen who have exhausted their private means in an endeavor to overthrow the Republican government and drive from the State the very men who now propose to vote them such generous benefits. To their return good for evil may be a very excellent rule for individual guidance, but to reward treason and fee the inciters of domestic violence is a suicidal policy in governments, leaving in the present instance an already overburdened and impoverished people made to be plucked of the means to do it with.

Mr. Stewart, of Texas, has taken a bold and honest stand against this outrageous raid upon the treasury, and we hope when the question is brought up again to-day a majority of the House will be found at his back. The gentlemen who served in the McEnery organization drew their pay from the revolutionary committee of Two Hundred, and have no claims upon the State treasury, either in law or equity. Let our Representatives and Senators bear in mind, too, that in the coming campaign the people will pass upon the results of their exercise of power. The Democratic beneficiaries will not then be held to account for the needless squandering of a hundred thousand dollars (which is Mr. Stewart's estimate), but all the odium must rightly be cast upon the Republican Legislature which authorized and permitted it to be done. Look to the result in season.

OLD NEWS.

The long sensational chapter on the overrating Louisiana question, which appeared in the telegraphic columns of the Pheasant yesterday morning, was dated Washington, February 11, and entitled "the Herald." As no such document has appeared in the New York Herald, up to and including the seventh instant, we conclude it was taken from the Washington Sunday Herald, if it ever appeared in any paper at all. There is some reason to believe that it was not sent by telegraph at all, but came by hand. No other city paper except the Pheasant snapped at that hook.

We can assure the Times that the reply of Governor Kellogg to the bondholders was published in the Intercommence exactly as it was prepared by his excellency. Nothing was left out, nothing was interpolated. It may be possible—hardly possible—however, that the words about which there is a difference, may have been deemed by the Governor offensive to the Times for special reasons, and to the Pheasant also, which led him to give them a copy which did not contain a suggestive charge against one or both journals. If the Times is really ignorant of this matter, and wishes for enlightenment, we will not refuse to come to its assistance. We are always ready to instruct the ignorant.
