

New Orleans Republican.

OFFICIAL JOURNAL OF THE UNITED STATES OFFICIAL JOURNAL OF NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 10, 1876.

As the hull goes, so goes the ship.

Wait a little longer and weigh it well.

Swamp land should be bought at pool sales.

Who says we are a white league and not a nation?

There is some consolation in the advance of consuls.

Men are not what they seem unless they seem foolish.

A hem-stitch in time saves wonderful fraying out.

The tenor of too many dispatches is base with truth.

There is to be a revival in Rio:mond-of the Enquirer.

Prince Arthur has gone to Dublin with his regiment.

Not any public can take the deposition of a railroad man.

You can not expect a dull fellow to keep a sharp lookout.

The fishermen of Nantucket were clamorous for reform.

Bushels of perimmons down, and cords of poles to hear from.

All latter day saints put their goodness off until the last day.

The speaker in stocks is always ready to "bear" them in mind.

A soft voice is a beautiful thing when it says "yes" at the right time.

A big six boy says Moses in Egypt avoided the father of Liza.

Marion Harland, author of "My Little Love," has gone to Europe.

Most people are now waiting to hear if anybody has been heard from.

A very soothing syrup is made of—lump sugar, 1; whisky, half wine glass.

The man caught in the act was trying to get over an act of the Legislature.

The Senator that holds over is much better off than one who runs or goes under.

Of the Centennial there is left memories of the exhibition and the poem of Lamer.

A decided man in the Fourth District has determined to have pure milk or no whey.

The Count Joannas writes his recollections of the late William Wheatley and himself.

The political race has been won; nothing remains but to compare the watches of time.

Facts of street boys are of matchless color; that is discovered when the patches are set in.

Politeness is cold and brutality is too warm; but for all that the mean disposition is not best.

Yes, yes, Commodore Vanderbilt and the Pope are better; but that is not what we want to know now.

A posthumous novel of George Sand has been discovered. It is the custom of publishers to find such works.

Charitable acts need not be published. Those who receive know of the debt, and for the rest the account is kept above.

Damage suits are generally fictitious. What a man suffers in his mind, according to his ideas, is too frequently all in his eye.

The Boston young ladies who cook for their dinner parties are getting along splendidly. There is always room at the table.

Potter Palmer has undertaken to raise cobblers on the roof of his hotel, and he telegraphs to the Democrats that Illinois is all right.

The Danbury News man is known in Paris. The Journal des Debats refers to him as "E. M. Barley, the newswriter of Danbury."

It has been settled that the pyramid of Obops was erected by butchers, probably in honor of the man who founded the free market system.

An Omaha paper says: "Society in the East no longer rises to greet you with a salute on." It should tell us how the son of society sets in the West.

When coal dealers appear cold in manner, and reply to questions by freighting remarks, remember only that it is their business to bring on a cold snap.

Darwin's doctrine would seem to indicate that man is as far removed from the monkey kind as possible, though a few men have undoubtedly been left nearer.

The Woman's Journal says: "Queen Isabella has had her photographs distributed among the soldiers of the Spanish army." The soldiers will knapsack her image.

Rev. Dr. Butler, who was to have lectured at Ames' Methodist Episcopal Church last evening, did not arrive, but telegraphed that he would be here on Friday, and would speak in the evening.

Joachim Miller's new play is founded on "The First Families of the Sierra." "It would be an Aminabad Sloop plan," says Jones, who has a cold in his head, "to call it the 'Serious Family,' and be done with it."

Parting words at Philadelphia will soon be said; consuls will take the hand of consuls, and the city resident will say to him of the country, "We shall be glad to see you when another centennial comes round. Come and stay with us again then."

The Saturday Review says: "There are men of taste, men whose natural refinement leads them to enjoy contact with whatever is good and beautiful, who yet are quite unable to form an opinion on a picture or to know whether two colors harmonize. And, in like manner, there are men who, having the evidence of music with the greatest acuteness, are not distinguished by any special aptness to an organ or trumpet."

WHAT MAY HAPPEN.

The suppression of free opinion, the factitious flattery of figures, or the confident assumption of triumph, have no effect upon the stern judgment and inexorable will of the American people.

The want of a majority of the whole number of electors appointed may throw the election into the House of Representatives, and that body, voting by States, shall determine the presidential choice.

The editor of the New York Herald, basing his judgment upon actual advices received from correspondents, states his belief to be that the Republicans have carried the State by 2600.

The political barometer in one of the Gulf States—Louisiana, for instance—had a falling tendency yesterday, denoting a probable storm.

Suffice it to say that everything renders it proper to maintain the order and obedience to law which have distinguished the conduct of the campaign.

There is little or no doubt that the Republicans have carried Florida by about two thousand majority.

When Broad street, in Charleston, was full of black and white rioters on Wednesday, and the white people threatened with defeat, "the companies of United States troops double-quick to the scene and dispersed the crowd."

The colored people of this State have just given us an example of fortitude and fidelity which is worthy of all emulation.

We have carried this State by a large majority, even admitting the bulldozed and notarial parishes of East Feliciana, Lincoln, Ouachita and Morehouse.

FLORIDA.

The election is so uncomfortably close that neither party is willing to overlook Florida, with its four votes.

Senator Gordon evidently believes the Democrats have captured the flag which they fought against for sixteen years.

The dispatches which came in late last night confirm our most hopeful anticipations about Florida.

The political barometer in one of the Gulf States—Louisiana, for instance—had a falling tendency yesterday.

Ladies are invited to call early and make their selections while the assortment is complete and fresh.

All parties in interest are hereby notified that at the expiration of thirty days from and after the first publication of this notice, a final dividend and distribution of the remaining assets of the Delta Insurance Company of New Orleans, in liquidation, will be made to the creditors.
