REPUBLICAN DOCTRINE FIRMLY ESTABLISHED.

Step by step the amendments of the constitution advance to establishment as the undisputed doctrine of the whole nation. There was an affected reservation of a sort of God save the sovereignty of the States in the swaggering of the Democracy, but even that has been hidden away with Confederate bonds and currency for the very forlorn chances of future redemption. We must say, even in the midst of a commotion personally perilous to the Republican officials, that Louisiana is the banner corporation in the abjectness of surrender.

A gentleman claiming to be the representative of the sovereignty of the State of Louisiana summons his militia, organizes and arms his army of State soldiers, and proceeds to inaugurate his official authority by expelling by storm or siege an executive and Legislature which he proclaims to be—in his opinion—illegal. Having, with this State army, captured some police stations, some cannon and a court or two, the State army is on the march to the main object of its expedition. On its martial way, it is met by an orderly in blue uniform. He has a dispatch in the belt of his blouse. This he presents to the commander-in-chief. It informs him that a Federal officer in command of a small force at this point countermands the order to march on the State House. It orders the gentleman claiming to be the Governor of a sovereign Southern State to desist from his warlike purpose and disband his men. Wonderful to relate, this claimant of executive power kisses the order, bows his obedience to the firman of the Federal government, and obeys. Not another step is made on the march, not a shot is fired, and the assumed representative of State sovereignty abjectly obeys the order. Had such a fact existed in the high days of State sovereignty the Democracy at the South would themselves have pronounced against the pretensions of any one claiming to be a State rights Democrat who should have surrendered to a Federal order at discretion. The decree by which the State rights claimants endeavor to keep up a standing army in time of peace by calling the soldiers "police," is rather translucent. It admits the supreme authority of the Federal government, yet endeavors to achieve its sovereign purposes by insurrection. For years past we have heard the unanimous cry of the State rights reformers that six hundred policemen were more than was necessary to execute the corporation laws and ordinances. What means, then, the "Times" assertion, "the new Metropolitan police now numbers sixteen hundred?" We would infer that the so-called militia, having been ordered to disband, has reappeared under the name of "new Metropolitan." Nothing could be more abject than the abstract abdication of State sovereignty, except, perhaps, a deceitful attempt to snake in the sovereign army under another appellation. It is clearly inconsistent to usurp the name and the law, under which so much condemnation has been heaped on the Republican party, and it is hoped that when the Metropolitan force is established in undisputed authority we shall hear no further objection to it. We have given this surrender of State sovereignty and stigmatized evasion of Federal authority as a signal example of the general surrender of the doctrine. The Northern Democracy have long since abandoned all resistance to the Republican principles. They submitted to military drafts, entered the Union army, accepted contracts, purchased military substitutes and contributed as much as they could, with due regard to their personal safety and pecuniary profit, to the subjugation of the Southern sovereigns.

With this unconditional surrender of the sovereign banner of Louisiana, there seems no further open disaffection; the supremacy of the Union is admitted. If Sergeant Hays can make arrangements to reduce the pawn ticket by which, it is stated, his national banner has been hypothecated, he may take the grand rounds of the Union. At his approach, every State pension and banneret will be dipped, in token of submission, and none lovelier than that upheld by the so-called representatives of the sovereignty of Louisiana.

THE PATRIOTS.

There are stories of persons supposed to be dead, who are, however, only in an actual or affected trance, and so we see and hear everything going on around them. In such cases they are supposed to witness astounding revelations between promotion and practice. When for a few days it was supposed by the revolutionaries that their military force would be permitted to "clean out" the State House, the steady and greedy heirs expectant rushed forward and demonstrated the nature of their pretended respect for law. They have also had an opportunity to let the people see how far they have been actuated by an ardent love of right and inspired by that lofty and disinterested contempt of office and its compensation, of which we have heard so much. No wonder was it believed that the role of the slugs was established, that there began a pressure upon the chief of the reconstruction totally without precedent, even at our City Hall, where the Democratic lawyer applicants may have been proscribed upon the first would-be bill of office. As the head of these lawyers and reconstruction politicians, the Democratic

SENATOR SAULSBURY AS AN ATTORNEY.

Messrs. McDonald and Salsbury turn out to be nothing more than partisan attorneys seeking to deduce testimony favorable to the Democratic party, or arrant the effect of that which would excite the best horror of civilization against the barbarous acts of the Democratic bulldozers. The whole course of questions asked by Mr. Salsbury on the cross examination of Chief Justice Ludeling, show a purpose to impair the effect of his testimony by means of legal impediments. Thus Mr. Ludeling is reminded that he can testify to nothing which has not come under his own vision or hearing. He is informed on awaking one morning that his horse has been beset by armed guards, that the roads have been picketed leading to the town of Monroe. He is informed of this by negroes too much afraid to approach near enough to identify the men. He sees that his fencing had been taken to build fire, and finds the tracks of horses near these fires, but, asks the attorney triumphantly—

Question—Do you know that as a fact from your own knowledge?

Answer—I know it from having been told so by colored men, who said they could not come into town, and were compelled to go back.

Question—That is also a matter of information?

Answer—Certainly, it is upon information that I got from them.

Question—It is not a matter within your own personal knowledge?

Answer—Only in this way.

The public will be as well satisfied from the testimony what was the actual state of society at the place and period spoken of as if the colored persons quoted had been present and the committee of Congress had personally inspected the fire-chunks and horse tracks referred to. The Democratic sub-committee which visited the scene of murder and mutilation in Colfax, determined from the surroundings that there had been no political significance in those horrible deeds. The Democratic attorneys who come here with the same partisan intentions will establish similar deductions from the surroundings of affairs at Monroe.

Having, however, endeavored to act aside the circumstantial evidence and logical deductions of Mr. Ludeling, because not seen or heard by himself, Attorney Salsbury strikes one concluding blow, as he thinks, to the practical feasibility of the witness. He asks—
