

LOVED BY HIS OWN

Catholics Unite in a Grand Demonstration

TO WELCOME BISHOP RICHTER

Flour Display Made by Marching Lancers—Addresses—Address of Welcome and Reply.

The Roman Catholics of the city turned out over 1,500 strong last evening to welcome the return of the Rt. Rev. Bishop Joseph Henry Richter of the Grand Rapids diocese from his official visit to Pope Leo XIII in Rome.

The bishop quietly entered the city last Thursday evening to avoid any public demonstration by his parishioners, but the various Catholic organizations immediately planned to give him a grand "social welcome" last evening and it was done in a manner highly gratifying to the bishop and those who participated in the demonstration.

The various societies met at the Casino on Turner street at 8 o'clock and formed in line. The column was headed by William Hevener, Joseph Hogger and Thomas Keating as marshals, mounted on horseback, and were followed by Wenzel's band; Knights of St. John, thirty in number, with J. J. Howell, commander; St. Andrew's society, branches Nos. 15, 21 and 25, C. M. H. A., Swedish band, St. Joseph society, St. Mary's congregation, Polish societies, four in number, and St. James' congregation.

Line of March

The procession moved from the Casino about 1,000 in number, to Bridge street. Both bands were playing their sweetest music and every person in the ranks was carrying an illuminated Chinese lantern. St. Andrew's society carried a transparency containing a life-size picture of the bishop and on which was printed "Welcome to Our Bishop." The procession went down Bridge street, through Monroe to Fulton and to Sheldon, where the vast multitude stopped in front of the bishop's residence. At the intersection of Canal and Bridge streets the procession was joined by about 20 more persons, who followed to the end of the route. While the procession was moving along the line of march Greek fire was flashed in large quantities at intervals in the vicinity of the transparency containing the bishop's picture.

Beautiful Effects

The red and green colors cast reflections on the blocks and the multitudes that lined the walks throughout the course of march and made a pretty display. Several of the societies carried banners, and at intervals the stars and stripes fluttered over the heads of the marching columns. When the line moved of Canal on to the incline of Monroe, the picture presented by the undulating multi-colored lanterns was picturesque. The fifty glows of the electric lamps and the mellow glow of the kaleidoscopic line of fire and made a scene of unsurpassed beauty. To one standing at the corner of Pearl and Monroe the trail of lights resembled a moving column of spirits, whose luminous faces reflected the dramatic glories of the rainbow. It was an inspiring spectacle, and despite the heat, cheers and plaudits rang out from the admiring throngs as the illuminated procession glided by to the strains of well-timed music.

At the Bishop's House

A surging crowd had congregated on the court fronting the bishop's residence before the procession reached its destination. As the marching multitude drew near the bands resumed their music, and more Greek fire was burned. The men halted in the street when the center of the column had arrived opposite the residence. The bishop sat on the veranda, surrounded by Father Newman, Troy, Pogganini and Schmidt, and happily his last recognition of the people bestowed upon him. The Arion Glee club opened the formal ceremonies on the walk leading to the residence by singing "In Silent Mead." After this selection, which was beautifully rendered, Edward O'Hara stepped from the crowd to the first step leading to the porch, and in behalf of those who had congregated, read a brief, but appropriate address of welcome to the bishop, who arose and held his hat while the address was being delivered.

Mr. O'Hara's Welcome

Mr. O'Hara began his address by stating that it is a well known fact that the bishop does not seek notoriety nor court such public demonstrations from the people in his behalf, but his parishioners could not refrain from showing their respect and esteem for him in view of recent events. This honor was shown him in consideration of the sacrifice he has made for the welfare of his diocese. He had taken a trip to Rome, the fountain head of the church, in the interest of the spiritual welfare of his people. After consulting with the holy father and receiving his blessing the bishop had returned to continue his able work for the diocese. The members of the Arion Glee club felt that it was their duty to extend to him a cordial welcome on account of their great respect for the church in whose interest he is laboring and the respect which they have for the bishop in person. The address closed by bidding the bishop welcome in their midst, with all their hearts.

Bishop Richter's Reply

The bishop feelingly replied to the kind address of his church, speaking sweetly and impressively. He said he thanked them for their kind words and the demonstration of the evening. He demonstrated their loyalty and affection for the church. He said he did not think he was deserving of such a demonstration even if he had done something for the welfare of the diocese. It is his sacred duty to use his power for the good of the diocese which God had entrusted to him. He considered it to be the demonstration of loyalty to the Catholic church, in the same sense that he went to Rome to show his loyalty to the church. He found hundreds of bishops there who had gone to visit the father in the seat of his papacy. They look their looks with them that they might see the holy father and commend him. While there he wished that he too could have taken the members of his diocese to the Vatican that they might express their loyalty to the holy father. It was a consolation to the bishop to be able to say to the father that in the west thousands of miles away he had many loyal children. The bishop explained to him the growth of the church, Catholic institutions, increasing number of priests and schools and gave a full report of the condition of Catholicism in his diocese. He viewed the great Christian temples in Rome and

St. Peter he assisted in a grand ceremony in honor of the Pope. The Pope, he said, is 83 years old, slight in stature, his shoulders are stooped with the work of many years, but his voice is strong and firm and his mind unimpaired. The Pope asked him many questions concerning the work in the Grand Rapids diocese, and was greatly interested in the welfare of the flock in this territory. The great crowds of pilgrims in Rome who went there to visit the Pope, impressed on the bishop's mind the solemnity of the ceremony of the great family composing the Catholic church. When he arrived there, there were delegations and bishops from Holland, Germany, Austria, Malta, China, Italy, Greece, Poland, and other countries, who had come to receive blessings from the sovereign pontiff. The bishop closed his response to the speech of welcome by pronouncing the blessing which the Pope had instructed him to do upon the large concourse of persons present. After the blessing had been pronounced, the choir sang "The Star Spangled Banner," and three rousing cheers for the bishop were given by the crowd and it then dispersed.

He said he was the boy who broke into Harris' paper house on South Ionia street Saturday night with Orville Reed, whom Detective Reed arrested in the store. Vincent gave himself up on the advice of his older friends. He had a bag containing 147 pennies which he took from the money till on the first floor. He said he took some money from the cash register in the office on the second floor, from where he escaped down the fire ladder. He did not know the amount taken and had spent it. CHOLERA IS UPON US

Miss Keannally Says to Expect It in the Fall.

ITS GERMS CAN BE CARRIED

Cases at Hamburg Last Year Demonstrated That, but the Danger Comes From France at Present.

New York, July 9.—Miss Annetey Keannally, appointed judge of the hygienic section of the world's fair by the ladies' committee of the royal commission, arrived here yesterday on the steamship New York from Southampton. Miss Keannally is widely known in medical circles. She is a lecturer on technical education to the British county councils and has contributed many important medical papers to different journals.

"You need not be a bit surprised if you have cholera right at your doors in the fall or before. You were very fortunate last year in escaping it, but I fear you cannot this year. What I say to you may be unpleasant, but it is best to be warned in time. There already 2,000 cases of the disease at Mecca and it is getting a big foothold in France. You have been told here that it is impossible to contract the disease unless you receive the germs in your stomach. Experience in the Hamburg epidemic proved the fallacy of this proposition. I acted as a nurse in a hospital where there were 2,000 patients. We noticed that every Monday morning there was an alarming increase in the number of new cases.

It soon became evident that these were largely due by the congregation of persons at churches, beer gardens and other resorts. So was asked, this became the authorities that they ordered the people to avoid assembling so far as possible. The churches were closed and so were the other resorts. There was a diminution in the number of cases at once.

"I would like to ask those who contend that cholera cannot be contracted through the digestive organs to explain how it used to take six months for caravans to bring in the disease from India. The germs of the scourge can be carried in the clothing. Of that abundant proof was furnished at Hamburg. True it is that filth and bad water and food helped to increase the number of victims."

"Do you think cholera germs have lain dormant in this city during the winter and are likely to set upon persons at any time?" she was asked. "This is the case the authorities that they ordered the people to avoid assembling so far as possible. The churches were closed and so were the other resorts. There was a diminution in the number of cases at once."
