

Poetry.

LOVE THE OLD.

BY L. VIRGINIA SMITH.

I love the old, to lean beside The antique, easy chair,
And pass my fingers softly o'er
A wreath of silver hair;

To fold the pale and feeble hand
That on my youthful head, Has lain so tenderly, while The evening prayer was said;

To cheer the old, and bless The wasted heart-strings with a stream Of sunshine tenderness.

Thou treadest now the path of bloom,
And thine exulting soul Springs proudly on, as tho' it mock'd
At Time's unfeeling control;

But they have marched a weary way,
Upon a thorny road;
They soothe the toll-worn spirits, ere They pass away to God.

Yes, love the aged—how before The venerable form
So soon to seek beyond the sky
A shelter from the storm.

As I listen to the strain,
Which is played upon the strings
Of the soft rain overhead.

Every tinkle on the strings,
Has an echo in the heart;
And a thousand dreary fancies
That long have been forgot,

Then in fancy comes my Mother
As she used to, years ago,
To survey her darling sleepers
Ere she left them to the dawn;

When my little seraph sister
With her wings and waving hair,
And her bright eyes cherub-brother—
A serene, angelic pair,

That in fancy comes my Mother
As she used to, years ago,
To survey her darling sleepers
Ere she left them to the dawn;

When my little seraph sister
With her wings and waving hair,
And her bright eyes cherub-brother—
A serene, angelic pair,

That in fancy comes my Mother
As she used to, years ago,
To survey her darling sleepers
Ere she left them to the dawn;

When my little seraph sister
With her wings and waving hair,
And her bright eyes cherub-brother—
A serene, angelic pair,

That in fancy comes my Mother
As she used to, years ago,
To survey her darling sleepers
Ere she left them to the dawn;

When my little seraph sister
With her wings and waving hair,
And her bright eyes cherub-brother—
A serene, angelic pair,

An Accommodating Judge.

The following story—only the concluding portion of which we give—is told by Judge J., of Jackson, Texas, and John Rolfe, a backwoodsman. Rolfe, a tall hunter, dressed in deerskin, and armed with a revolver, rifle and bowie-knife,

"You see, Judge, early day before yesterday morning, I started for this place, and as I wouldn't chisel, I went without eating the whole day. I got in the woods, and yesterday morning I got up as hungry as a panther; and as I walked along, thinks I, what am I to do?
I never see game so scarce; there wasn't so much as a squirrel to be found. I'm above cheating any man out of his dinner, but I felt that a dinner I must have. Just then a fellow comes riding along the road, I talked to him, and tried to borrow, swearing to pay, at any place he might name, in a week; but the critter told me he paid his way out of his own pocket, and he'd too little to di-

"How much have you got," said I.
"Two-fifty," says he.
"Now, thinks I, that is too little to divide.
So, while he's looking another way, I shoots him thro' the head, and gin him as decent a burial as I could under an old log, and took the two dollars and a half. But it won't do; my conscience misgives me. I'm sorry for it, and wish the feller had his money back, if he could be alive. Between you and me, as it's late for that, I think that I ought to be hung."

The judge called his little black boy, ordered three papers of tobacco, and we smoked in silence.
"Then you really think you ought to be hung?" he said with compassion, as he whiffed a cloud of smoke toward the ceiling.

"I do, in fact," answered Rolfe, emitting a similar volume of vapor.
The judge smoked, and considered again.

"Well, we'll try to hang you," he added.
There was an expression of gratitude in Rolfe's eyes as he replied.

"Thank you. That will ease my conscience."
The judge again knocked the ashes from his pipe, and spoke:

"Well, come here in half an hour.
I'll try to get a jury."
Rolfe and myself having our pipes on the table, were about leaving, when the judge asked us to take a drink, which having done we bade him good morning.

At the expiration of half an hour, we returned, when we found some twelve men drinking and smoking with the magistrate, awaiting us. We were politely requested to sit down.

"Now," said the judge, addressing himself to Rolfe, "tell the gentlemen what you have already told me." Whereupon Rolfe repeated the statement he had before made.

"Now, gentlemen," continued the first speaker, "I wish to say if this gentleman —Mr. Rolfe your name is eh? well, there's some fine old brandy; make yourself perfectly at home, gentlemen, you find John Rolfe guilty, or not guilty of murder.
In addition to what he said, I will observe for your information, that I have sent out and found the body just where he stated it to be."

The jury smoked, rose up, took a little brandy and water, and then sat down again, and smoked in silence for some time. At last one of them who appeared to be the foreman, said:

"The case is tolerably clear, and rather we think he's guilty."
"Here's more tobacco on the table," said the judge to Rolfe. "The best you can find anywhere. You have heard what these gentlemen have said. Well," he continued, a little uneasily, "I don't like to tell you in my own house."

"Let that be no hindrance," said Rolfe, filling and lighting his pipe.
"Come here at ten o'clock to-morrow morning, and I'll have you hung."

Rolfe looked discontented, and apparently mortified at the idea of asking a favor.
"Come here at ten o'clock to-morrow
morning, and I'll have you hung."

"You—you have been so kind to me," he said, hesitatingly, "that I hardly like to ask you for anything more."
"Not at all," replied the judge. "Out with it; you are welcome to it before you ask."

EVERGREEN NURSERIES,
Situated one Mile from the Court House,
CANTON, MISS.
THE undersigned have this day formed a partnership under the style of T. J.
DRANE & CO. for the purpose of carrying on the Nursery business in all its branches.
It is the intention of the proprietors to propagate in the Fruit Department, choice varieties only, and such as are well adapted to the soil and climate of the South, opening the succession over the fruit season. Consequently, purchasers will be positively protected against disappointment.

Every new variety of fine fruit shall be added to our catalogue, as soon as tested and proved to be suited to the climate.
All trees and plants will be carefully labeled and packed in the best manner for any part of the South, for which a moderate charge will be made; and no charge will be made for delivery of packages at the railroads.

It is requested that explicit directions be given for marking and shipping packages, but in all cases, when shipment is made the articles are at the risk of the purchaser.
All orders from unknown correspondents must be accompanied with a remittance, draft, or satisfactory reference.
Our customers are requested to notify us immediately of any error that may be committed in filling their orders, in order that we may at once make amends.
Catalogues will be forwarded to all who apply, post paid, and enclose a stamp to prepay the postage.
