

SUES FOR DAMAGES.

Mrs. Julia Guthrie Sues the Great Northern for $5,000 Damages.

In the district court an action has been commenced by Mrs. Guthrie, as administrator of the estate of the late Archie Guthrie through her attorneys, Calhoun & Bennett, against the Great Northern railway company for $5,000 damages for the death of her husband, October 15, 1895. It will be remembered that the deceased was employed as brakeman on the Great Northern and was killed while switching in the yards at Bridgman on the Hinckley line. The tender of the locomotive ran over him, killing him instantly. It is contended by the complaint that the engineer and fireman of the locomotive in question did not observe the signal given them to slow down nor did they give Guthrie any warning of their approach at such a high rate of speed. The company is held to be liable for his death and the full amount under the Statute is asked by the widow and her three children.—Journal-Press.

How Many Ruins?

The Minnesota legislature meets next month for the regular 90-day biennial session, and we would like to know how many ruins will be left behind. Not a session was ever held that did not leave a few moral and political skeletons bleaching by the wayside.

Members from the rural districts are not always proof against the new life they come in contact with, their old habits are abandoned, and when they return to the farm or country town their hearts are filled with a vague unrest. They are apt to have passes on the railroads for the first time in their lives, and nothing else is so subtle as a pass for transforming common clay into chunks of statesmanship.

Then they must make frequent trips to St. Paul to keep up old friendships and see that the country stays saved. They are impatient of the prosy life that once was filled with real though humble joys, and freed with aspirations they can never realize, they waste their time and substance chasing some ignis fatuus, a torchlight of folly, an illuminated miasma, that only gives them a shake and a chill in the end.

Nor are these evils visited upon members only, but descend to the whole life saving crew, sutler's gang, camp followers, and all that brood that seeks the same coop and roosts close to greatness.

But the sacrifice must be made, and already the lambs are bleating for the slaughter.—Bede's Budget.

A Coming Marriage.

December 31 will witness the marriage at Sauk Rapids of Miss Mary Martin, sister of City Clerk Jas. A. Martin of this city, and Dr. C. E. Caine of Elbow Lake. The interesting event will be solemnized at the home of the bride's sister in that village, Mrs. Fred Brown, and they will reside at Elbow Lake, where Dr. Caine is a successful practicing physician. Miss Martin is quite well known in this city and is a popular young lady of many graces. Her soon-to-be husband is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and is highly spoken of by his acquaintances.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

Burlington Route Excursions.

For the Non-Partisan W. C. T. U. and National Anti-Saloon League Conventions at Washington, D. C., Dec. 8th and 14th, all Burlington ticket agents are authorized to sell tickets at rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip. A great opportunity to visit the National Capital while congress is in session.

For the annual meeting of Federation of Commercial Teachers, at Chicago, Dec. 28th to 31st, all Burlington ticket agents will sell at rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip.

The St. Paul Dispatch has the following to say of the Foley Bros., who have long been interested in the county and this week have entered business in Princeton: "The Foleys are self-made men in the truest sense of the word. They came to Minnesota from Canada several years ago and located at St. Cloud. Here they began a general contracting business, and by dint of perseverance, boundless energy and native ability, they soon worked their way to the front until to-day, when they are counted as the most substantial business men in the State. They have extensive pine and lumbering interests at St. Cloud, Milaca, Bridgeport, Cold Springs and other Northern Minnesota points. They have constructed hundreds of miles of railroads in this and other states, and have flouring mills and general stores scattered all through Minnesota.

FORESTON BREEZES.

FORESTON, Dec. 22, 1896.

John R. Robideau is quite a hustler and makes a good landlord.

J. O. Baker, of Milaca was over on official business last Monday.

O. A. Guslander's two months old baby died at Foley last week.

The primary department of the school closed here last Friday.

Mrs. Ed. Larkins and J. L. Townsend are visiting Mrs. E. E. Price of this place.

O. W. Swenson is very busy these days looking after the logging business for Foley Bros.

Foley Bros. mill has started up for the winter with a Mr. Clark, of Elk River, at the throttle.

E. N. Bacon has gone into the cordwood business this winter with P. A. Robideau as head push.

There will be a Christmas tree in the Malone's hall Christmas eve for the benefit of the little folks.

John Kennedy purchased a fine team of horses last week of E. Mark and has sent them up to haul logs for Foley Bros.

Fred Clinch will run the Milaca shingle mill this winter. Fred is a good shingle maker and we wish him good luck.

Miss Julia Livens, formerly of this place, but now a resident of Mora came down to stay with Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Racon and attend school here.

The Mallette store is again stocked up in fine shape. People will do well to call as Henry intends to put prices down to bedrock for cash only.

John M. Neuman, formerly engineer for Foley Bros., seems to be doing well in his new occupation as merchant. John is an honest fellow and we wish him success.

We see the smiling face of Konek back to our village again. Frank has been out to his home in Benton county while the mill was shut down. Frank is the lumber grader at the Foley mill.

C. A. Lewis is the busiest man in town these days. If you want your life insured, an accident policy, a piano, organ, or anything in this line give him a call. He is chuck full of it.

The Grammar department of our school closed here last Tuesday. Mr. Parsons has taught a good school and is very well liked by the scholars. The question is who will teach the next term in this department.

John English is still going round on wooden pegs, from an accident of a month ago, caused by his foot slipping into a bad place in the sidewalk. John claims damages from the corporation and will sue for it if the council does not come to reasonable terms with him. Can't blame him, for the sidewalk should have been fixed long ago but it is not fixed yet.

It has been reported that D. T. Calhoun, a prominent attorney of St. Cloud has commenced suit for damage against the G. N. Ry. Co., for the life of Archie Guthrie killed at this place by an engine backing on to him in the Foley Bros. mill yard one year ago last fall. Mr. Calhoun is a shrewd attorney and we wish him success in securing a liberal amount of damage for the widow and his children.

J. AND F.

Rev. Mooney held services at the Catholic church Sunday.

Mrs. E. C. Ringrose, of Hancock, visited with her sister, Mrs. Annie McClellan last week.

Mrs. Jason Carter and children of Isle Harbor, are visiting with her mother, Mrs. English.

The knowing say Mr. Chas. Malone of the lake has bought the James McLain place of Mrs. Murphy and the old couple will move up to the lake near their daughter, Mrs. Malone.

A notable feature of the Hungarian millennial celebration was the formal opening of the Danube in the portion which has so long obstructed navigation.

The Iron Gates of the Danube were a series of rocks that made its channel extremely dangerous for steamers for a distance of five miles in one portion of its length. For six years the Hungarians have been blasting out these rocks. It was an enterprise larger even than clearing East river at Hell Gate. But the work is done, and Emperor Francis Joseph himself formally dedicated the channel, amid the cheers of thousands of his subjects. The Danube is now open from the head of navigation to the Dardanelles.

Centenarians need not now hesitate to learn to ride the bicycle through fear they are too old. Gladstone will be 87 in December, and Gladstone is to learn to ride the wheel so as to accompany his favorite grandchild, Dorothy Drew. The sight of the greatest statesman of modern Europe, aged 87, scorching along the road on a bicycle will be not the least of the impressive sights of this strange end of the nineteenth century.

A Cuban patriot general declares that within his certain knowledge as many people, strictly noncombatants, have been slain in cold blood by the Spaniards during the present war in Cuba as have been put to death by the Turks in Armenia. All civilization is howling at the Armenian massacres, but no word is spoken in protest against the atrocities in Cuba.

Do not let anybody else do your thinking for you—nor your preacher, doctor or even your editor. Think it all out for yourself.

Life and Half Life.

It is frequently necessary to the gaining of daily bread that a human being stay in one spot for a term of years. It should not be always, however. The individual who is rooted to one spot and sees no more of life than is manifest among the neighbors and chums who are exactly like himself is mentally and spiritually a dwarf. He grows full of prejudices and cranky notions. Actions the most innocent in themselves appear to him full of all wickedness, because they run counter to his stiff and narrow prejudices. The little ailments, gossip and infinitesimal events in the lives of his acquaintances assume gigantic proportions.

To an outsider the person who has taken root in one spot affords material for infinite amusement. The ruralist visiting the city, the narrow lived city dweller visiting the country have been subject for joke time out of mind, and small blame to those who laugh at them.

Only the person who has traveled, who has seen life and nature in many phases, is well rounded and really intelligent. It does men and women good to get away from their own little cabin now and then and take in the fact that there are people handsomer, more graceful, learned and gifted than themselves and their neighbors. They learn that the matters which seem mountains to them at home are really pinheads in the grand round up. They become tolerant, wise, broad minded, better mannered and better looking.

There is really and truly no education like travel. Our race is by instinct a race of wanderers, and it is best that we should be so during intervals of our lives at least. Most people even succeed better financially away from their childhood home.

Millionaire and Pauper.

A comparison of some census figures shows startling effects in the distribution of wealth to population in this country. Rhode Island as an agricultural section is perhaps the poorest part of the Union. Yet the gain in wealth made by Rhode Island between 1880 and 1890 was $41,000,000 greater than that of Mississippi, South Carolina, Indiana and Illinois all put together.

The same condition holds good of every part of New England, which is the poorest section of the country agriculturally. Massachusetts alone gained in wealth $11,000,000 more than ten of the southern and western states gained unitedly, although these states have nine times the population of Massachusetts. New York gained in wealth $7,000,000 more than the combined increase of 16 of the most productive agricultural states of the Union. All the northern Atlantic states made a like tremendous gain as compared with the rest of the Union.

The other side of the picture is that in the very states which grow in wealth so rapidly pauperism increases just as rapidly. The state of New York is so wealthy that year before last its riches increased more than $100,000,000. Yet this same New York contains nearly one-seventh of all the paupers in the country. In the three states of New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, where the largest fortunes of the country are concentrated, the pauper rate is twice as high as in the agricultural states. Splendid wealth and abject poverty walk hand in hand and with equal step. One grows as the other grows.

Charles Cavill will be notable as the man who swam the Golden Gate at San Francisco this autumn. Cavill is an Australian, and it is to be regretted that no American was found to perform the feat, but that does not take away from the credit of the performance itself. The distance straight across is only 1 1/2 miles, only half the width of the historic Hellespont, which Leander swam to meet Hero and finally went once too often and was drowned. But the currents in the Golden Gate swim make it exceedingly difficult to accomplish. Cavill started out bravely enough, but a quarter of a mile from shore he met the ripple of the outgoing tide. Experienced swimmers agree that it is useless to attempt to swim against the tide. That pouring out through the narrow Golden Gate channel was like a mill race. The Australian turned and let it carry him out till he reached a point where he took advantage of a current from the opposite shore. Then he completed the long and heavy swim. It took him one hour and a quarter to do the whole distance. Cavill uses the right side stroke.
