Mark's September Sale.

The next regular sale of the Mark Horse company will take place on Saturday, September 2d. A special effort has been made to procure for this sale a line of horses that will meet the demands of farmers and those wanting light teams and single horses for drivers. The draft horses will be among the best obtainable and will be fitted for fall work. Special attention has been given to western horses and the supply will be large and the best to be had in the market. As usual at these sales there will be offered bargains in harness, wagons, buggies, furniture and a thousand other things useful to the farmer. No work will be spared to make this sale a hummer. Frank Smith will be auctioneer and things will be lively.

The Latest in Airships.

The Pathfinder says, "a noteworthy voyage in the air was made by the Lebaudy airship a few days ago. The vessel was steered from Nantes to Meaux, some sixty miles, against the wind, and later fifteen miles farther dead against a strong head wind. Santos-Dumont, a great rival authority on airships, says this is the greatest achievement toward proving the practicability of aerial navigation yet reached. The Lebaudy craft is built on the same principle as Santos-Dumont's; that is, it consists of an elongated steerable balloon propelled by a gasoline motor."

Remembering Dates.

Johnny—I just can't remember them blamed hist'ry dates. How do you do it, Bill?

Bill—It's dead easy. Why, if it's 1824, fer instance, I jest remember the time when de Giants beat de Athletics 18 to 4.—Council Bluffs Nonpariel.

Quick Relief for Asthma Sufferers.

Obstacles in Poetry Writing.

The following should have the effect of deterring ambitious youths from going into the poetry business:

The amateur poet scratched his head.

"It must be somewhere," he murmured, "but where is it?"

"Where is what?" asked his friend.

"Why, I'm writing a verse and I want a rhyme, but I can't find it. I want a rhyme for the word 'twelfth.'"

"Good reason" replied his friend, "there's no such rhyme in the English language. That isn't the only unrhymed word. According to Tom Hood there are just a score of them, although he forgot to include that word. His list includes bilge, chimney, coil, crimson, culm, cusp, fugue, gulf, have, kiln, microcosm, month, oblige, rhomb, scarce, scarf, silver, widow, and window. Some of these words may be rhymed by two others combined, such as did, oh, for widow, but none can be rhymed with another single word."

Minnesota Wolves.

The wolf bounty law has cost the State of Minnesota nearly $29,000 during the year ending June 30, 1905. The county auditors of the various counties have sent in vouchers for 5,314 wolves for which bounties have been paid. This represents a total bounty of $28,799.00. The State pays the bounty of $7.50 for each full grown wolf and $1 for each wolf cub. The bounties are paid by the county auditors, who in turn collect from the State. In some counties wolf hunting is highly profitable. In Beltrami county a bounty of $16 is paid for each female wolf killed. Of this amount the county pays $7.50 and the State a like amount. Itasca county drew the largest amount during the past year $1,729. Otter Tail county received $1,673 and Kittson county $1,664.—Red Lake Courier.

Emmet's Cyclone.

Emmet Mark of Princeton was in Isanti Monday afternoon and put a stock of goods in the Eastlund & Danielson building. The business is managed by Louis Finn, known as "Cyclone Lou, the bargain giver." Mr. Finn has a way of his own to draw a crowd to the store, and yesterday he went through the country advertising the big sale, the team being well supplied with bells, and Finn and his companion were dressed in costumes that would do credit to circus clowns. From present indications there will be something doing while "Cyclone Lou" is in town.—Isanti News.

Looked Too Aged.

"What became of that women's church that was started here a while ago?"

"Broke up in a row."

"What was the trouble?"

"Squabble about the distribution of offices. The deacons were elected all right, but not a single woman in the bunch would accept the office of elder."—Chicago Tribune.

If you are troubled with dizzy spells, headache, indigestion, constipation, Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well and keep you well. If it fails get your money back. That's fair. 35 cents. C. A. Jack.

The Power of Water.

"It's wonderful," said Uncle Allen Sparks "to see what can be done with water power these days. I know a man over in the next county, the stingiest man that ever lived, but his wife can get anything she wants from him by doing a little judicious weeping."—Chicago Tribune.

It will wash and not rub off
This complexion all envy me,
It's no secret so I'll tell
Take though Rocky Mountain Tea.

OLD TIME DENTISTRY.

Queer Instruments in Harvard Dental School's Collection.

Like many other of the "new" professions, dentistry is a very old one. It is known that 400 years before the beginning of the Christian era Egyptian dentists filled teeth with gold, but no trace of their methods of doing their work has ever been found. Aesculapius, the patron of physicians, was the first famous dentist in Roman history, and the old Romans used a toothpick very much like the little wooden one that is made today. The Arabians ages ago produced a dentifrice, but it soon seemed to be very generally used.

The story of dentistry is told in the instruments it has employed. As they are known today they had their beginning in the sixteenth century, but their evolution has been slow. In the Harvard Dental school in Boston there is a collection of instruments used by dentists in the first half of the last century. One of the formidable tools it includes is what was called a key, doubtless from its peculiar shape, which was used for extracting teeth, the process being to slowly and painfully twist and pry the offending molar out of its place. In order that no mistake should be made the dentist began operations by hammering and prodding one tooth after another with a sort of bludgeon until he had satisfied himself—not to mention the tortured patient—that he had found the most sensitive one and therefore the most likely candidate for extraction.

The grandfathers of the delicate steel tools that lie in rows on the modern dentist's table were small in number, but large in awfulness. There are in the Harvard collection chisels and mallets, rude forceps for removing the teeth, miniature crowbars used to repair cavities for filling, files for sharpening the cutting and grinding surfaces of teeth and one particularly horrid instrument, known as the pelican, with which teeth were "lifted."

How rapidly and recently dentistry has become one of the important sciences appears in the fact that in the middle of the last century blacksmiths were doing their best—or worst—to relieve the victims of the toothache, while today institutions like the Harvard Dental school attract students from all over the world. Besides, while it was sure torture to go to the dentist in the so called "good old days," such a visit now is comparatively comfortable, so far has the profession gone in the direction of performing its operations without causing pain.

BITS FROM THE WRITERS.

There is nothing in life worth making a secret of—except one's income.—Seton Merriman.

Civilization means universal civility, and to be civil to everybody argues a great power of telling lies.—Eden Philpotts.

How exquisite in life is the art of not seeing many things and of forgetting many that have been seen!—James Lane Allen.

Truisms, whether they lie in the depths of thought or on the surface, are at any rate the pearls of experience.—George Meredith.

Have you never observed that if you conscientiously neglect to do your work it somehow manages to get done without you?—Henry Harland.

Relations, as somebody said, are disagreeable acquaintances inflicted upon us by Providence. But it is no use losing one's temper about what they say. It only pleases them.—Richard Bagot.

An Interesting Experiment.

A vessel containing a certain white powder is placed upon the table, when the operator advances, waving his wand and uttering some magic words coined by himself, when, lo, of a sudden the room is lighted up with a brilliant light, so effulgent that it dims the eyes of the spectators. The secret is this: The powder is composed of equal weights of loaf sugar and chlorate of potash, separately reduced to fine powder and then well mixed together. This is placed in a cup, and when the powder is touched with the least drop of sulphuric acid it will instantly burst into a flame. The end of the glass rod should be dipped in the acid immediately before use.

Carefully Led Up To.

"Yonder," said the party of the first part, "is the house in which I was born. We lived on the first floor. McBooth Rantington, the great tragedian, occupied the upper apartments. He was not only a famous actor, but a singularly fortunate man."

"Then," responded the party of the second part, "you were born under a lucky star, eh?"

N. B.—The management begs to state that it considers this one of the most elaborately worked out jokes we have produced this season.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Woman's Presence.

What a consoler is woman! No presence but hers can win a man from his sorrow. The soldier becomes a light-some boy at her feet; the anxious statesman smiles himself back to the free hearted youth beside her and the still and shaded countenance of care brightens beneath her influence, as the closed flower blooms in the sunshine.—American Queen.

Depends.

"Do you believe the old saying, 'There's no place like home?'"

"That depends."

"Depends upon what?"

"Upon whose home you are referring to."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

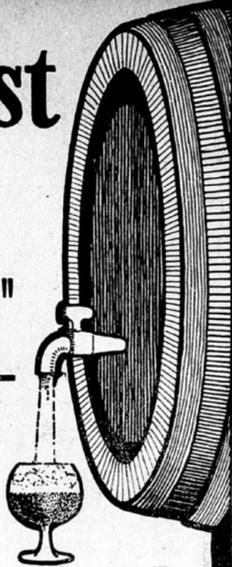

There's music in all things, if men had ears.—Byron.
