Bars Rock and Rye.

The collection of internal revenue tax from the manufacturers and retailers of alcoholic beverages sold as medicine, which was to have begun Dec. 1, has been postponed by a special order from the treasury department. The manufacturers' tax will go into effect Jan. 1, but the retailers will not have to procure licenses until April 1. This ruling was made to permit the dealers to dispose of stock laid in before the original order was ssued.

Another ruling in this connection sounds the death knell of the travelng patent medicine vendor. It holds that the retailer's license is strictly local and that one will have to be taken out for every place in which a sale is made. This would bankrupt the itinerant venders of cough medicines, bitters and other thinly disguised alcoholic beverages who now are doing a thriving business through the country districts.

Another ruling in the current decisions will be a severe blow to the people who hold "rock and rye" in high regard as a medical beverage. This ruling holds that while it is permissible for a retailer not holding a rectifier's license to compound the soothing mixture as it is called for, he cannot make it up and keep it in stock. It has been the practice of druggists and retail liquor dealers to make up a considerable quantity and keep it on hand. The new ruling will practically retire "rock and rye" from the list of bar drinks.

She Was Easily Satisfied.

He was unshaven and unclean, seedy and very shabbily dressed. He stood disconsolately on a street corner where the nickels and dimes would flow more plentifully. As he was about to cross the street he noticed a kindly, motherly-looking woman approaching. Assuming a most woebegone, destitute expression he took his stand on the curb and tentatively proffered his greasy palm. She proluced a nickel and said:

"Now, I want you to understand that I am giving you this, not because I think you may be starving or from any foolish notions of charity, but simply because it gives me pleasure to do so."

"Well, mum," he replied, "if you ook at it that way, why not make it dime and have a real jolly good ime?" - San Francisco Chronicle.
