pencil heated over a lamp chimney, and she placed above one ear three or four large artificial roses, taken from an old hat of her mother's, which she had found in a trunk in the storeroom.

It was in the Pike dressing room that the change began to come. There was a big cheval glass at one end of the room, and she faced it when her turn came—for the mirror was popular—

She went away from the mirror and pretended to be busy with a hanging thread in her sleeve. Ariel sat in one of the chairs against the wall and watched the dancers with a smile of eager and benevolent interest.

Once or twice between the dances she saw Miss Pike speak appealingly to one of the superfluous, glancing at the same time in her own direction, and Ariel could see, too, that the appeal proved unsuccessful, until at last Miss Pike approached her leading Norbert Filtcroft partly by the hand, partly by will power.

She caught her partner making a burlesque face of suffering over her shoulder and, turning her head quickly, saw for whose benefit he had constructed it.

"Perhaps we had better not try it again," she laughed. "Well, I should think not," he returned, with the frankest gloom.

After a long time she arose and, laughing cheerfully to Mr. Filtcroft, who was standing in the doorway and replied with a wan smile, stepped out quickly into the hall, where she almost ran into her greatniece, Jonas Tabor.

Jonas was breathing heavily and was shockingly pale, though his eyes were very bright. He turned his back upon his grandniece sharply and went out of the door. Ariel turned from him quite as abruptly and re-entered the room whence she had come. She laughed again to her fat friend as she passed him and, still laughing, went toward the fatal chair, when her eyes caught sight of Eugene Bantry and Mamie coming in through the window.

She gave way all at once to a gust of sorrow and bitterness. She bent forward and caught his hand and laid it against her wet cheek. "Oh, Joe," she whispered brokenly, "I think we have such hard lives, you and I! It doesn't seem right while we're so young! Why can't we be like the others? Why can't we have some of the fun?"

He withdrew his hand with the embarrassment and shame he would have felt had she been a boy. "Get out!" he said feebly. She did not seem to notice, but still stooping, rested her elbows on her knees and her face in her hands.

"I'll tell you something," Joe whispered, chuckling desperately. "Gene made me unpack his trunk, and I don't believe he's as great a man at college as he is here. I opened one of his books, and some one had written in it, 'Prigmaloo Bantry, the Class Trito-Be!'"

He considered this for a moment. "Yes," he answered thoughtfully; "I am. But I wouldn't think about him differently on that account. And I wouldn't talk about him to any one but you."

She coughed loudly. Eugene and Mamie Pike had come to the window, with the evident intention of occupying the veranda; but, perceiving Ariel engaged with threads in her sleeve, they turned away and disappeared.

They made three false starts and then got away.

Other couples looked out from time to time and, finding the solitary figure in possession, retreated abruptly to seek stairways and remote corners for the things they were impelled to say.

And so Ariel held the porch for three dances and three intermissions, occupying a great part of the time with entreaties that her obtuse and reckless companion should go. When for the fourth time the music sounded, her agitation had so increased that she was visibly trembling.

"No; I haven't," he chuckled. "They haven't even distributed the supper yet." "And you take all the chances," she said slowly, "just to see her pass that window a few times."

A colored waiter, smiling graciously, came out upon the porch bearing a tray of salad, hot oysters and coffee. Ariel shook her head. "I don't want any," she murmured. The waiter turned away in pity and was re-entering the window, when a passionate whisper fell upon his ear as well as upon Ariel's. "Take it!" "Ma'am?" said the waiter. "I've changed my mind," she replied quickly. The waiter, his elation restored, gave of his viands with the superfluous bounty loved by his race when distributing the product of the wealthy.

"For a time there was silence. From within the house came the continuous babble of voices and laughter, the clink of cutlery on china. The young people spent a long time over their supper. By and by the waiter returned to the veranda, deposited a plate of colored ices upon Ariel's knees with a noble gesture and departed.

"No ice for me," said Joe. "Won't you please go now?" she entreated. "It wouldn't be good manners," he responded. "They might think I only came for supper."

"Hand me back the things. The waiter might come for them any minute." "Take them, then. You'll see that jealousy hasn't spoiled my appetite!"

Ginger' of West Point.

The man who graduated at the foot of the class that year (1890) had been six years at the Point and had just squeezed through at last—Harold S. Borland, commonly known as Ginger on account of his hair being the exact color of ground ginger.

She did not seem to notice, but still stooping, rested her elbows on her knees and her face in her hands. "I try so hard to have fun, to be like the rest, and it's always a mistake, always, always, always!" She rocked herself slightly from side to side.

"I'll tell you something," Joe whispered, chuckling desperately. "Gene made me unpack his trunk, and I don't believe he's as great a man at college as he is here. I opened one of his books, and some one had written in it, 'Prigmaloo Bantry, the Class Trito-Be!'"

Largest Crab.

In the American Museum of Natural History in New York is a wonder of marine life. It is a gigantic Japanese crab, measuring twelve feet across, making it the largest in the world.

State News.

Two men were killed by lightning in St. Paul on the Fourth.

Alderman John Hilgers, a pioneer settler of Shakopee, was instantly killed on July 4 by catching hold of a live electric wire.

The present growing weather promises to bring Minnesota crops to maturity away ahead of the frosts, and though grain got a late start the outlook is becoming better every day.

Joseph R. Clements, the Preston banker who was committed to the state prison under a sentence of ten years from Houston county, was discharged on July 8. He has served his term, less almost three years allowed for good time.

Short shift was made of the two cracksmen who robbed the bank of Bingham Lake and were caught at St. James and a large part of their booty recovered. Robert White was tried and convicted and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary at Stillwater.

George Chester, his pal, pleaded guilty and was sentenced for nine years.

It is reliably reported, and judging by present grading operations there is foundation for the prediction, that inside of a year or at the utmost two years, James J. Hill will have a doubletracked road between St. Paul and Minot, N. D. This has been decided upon to relieve the present congestion of freight trains which often affects traffic on the system.

Notice has been issued from the agency office that the grand council of the Mille Lacs band will convene at the White Earth agency on Monday, July 15, to determine what Indians are entitled to participate in the distribution of the $5,600 deposited by Gus H. Beaulieu in the Merchants' National bank at St. Cloud, Minn., following the settlement of the suit between himself and the Mille Lacs Indians.

The Chippewa Indians celebrated the Fourth at Old Agency, four miles from Walker, in grand style. The celebration was participated in by several hundred Indians, who contested in games of skill. Lacrosse matches, pony races by young bucks and canoe races by squaws were features.

There was a grand dog feast, cooked by a campfire, of which whites were reluctant to participate, although cordially invited, and war dances in the evening by the Indians, young and old, in war paint.

Is the popular cry throughout European countries; while in America, the cry of the present day is "Long live Dr. King's New Discovery, King of Throat and Lung Remedies!" of which Mrs. Julia Ryder Paine, Truro, Mass., says: "It never fails to give immediate relief and to quickly cure a cough or cold."

Mrs. Paine's opinion is shared by a majority of the inhabitants of this country. New Discovery cures weak lungs and sore throats after all other remedies have failed; and for coughs and colds it's the only sure cure. Guaranteed by C. A. Jack, druggist. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Our Irish Immigration. The fact that more than eight out of every 1,000 inhabitants of the old sod emigrated to this country last year shows that our charms are still superior to those of the Irish Antimigration league.

Nearly as many people as now inhabit Ireland have left its shores for other lands during the past forty or fifty years. Doubtless the most of these emigrants were impelled by the desire to better their condition, but the future historian when he is called upon to deal with the subject will be apt to attribute the steady desertion of the island by those who can get away from it to oppression and misgovernment.

In no other way will he be able to reconcile the fact that concurrently with the steady flow of Irish emigration Great Britain has enjoyed a degree of prosperity which should have had the effect of making all parts of the kingdom a desirable place of abode.

Compared with the flood tide of immigration to the United States the showing in recent years has declined in bulk, but for the very good reason that there were fewer to emigrate. Fifty years ago, when this country received about 90,000 Irish immigrants annually, the population of Ireland was more than double what it is now.

When the annual immigration averages about 37,000. And all who leave Ireland for the western world do not enter the United States.

It is now declared that Ralph Waldo Emerson originated the Baconian theory of Shakespeare's writings. Anyway, it is more sensible to discuss the authorship of the theory than the authorship of Shakespeare.

One of the most thrilling points of the Harriman revelations is as to the country's narrow escape from having Jimmy Hazen Hyde as its diplomatic representative in France.

Mark Twain rejoices at his seventy years because he can take a rest. If Mark gets any rest while building that new house and licking his abandoned farm into shape he must be an easy toes.

The Charming Woman

Is not necessarily one of perfect form and features. Many a plain woman who could never serve as an artist's model, possesses those rare qualities that all the world admires: neatness, clear eyes, clean smooth skin and that sprightliness of step and action that accompany good health.

A physically weak woman is never attractive, not even to herself. Electric Bitters restore weak women, give strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvety skin, beautiful complexion. Guaranteed at C. A. Jack's, druggist, 50c.
