Now that the bonding proposition has carried, McMillan and Dunn stand ready to assign every option they have secured on real estate along the lake road or any other road in the county for a very reasonable consideration---five cents each. Wasn't that option story a cheap and clumsy fabrication?

County Auditor Doane was an interested spectator at the Minnesota-Illinois football game Saturday. Two years ago Mr. Doane witnessed the downfall of the Gophers at the hands of the Illinois team, and he had dreams of a fitting revenge this year. Illinois upset the dope, however, by grabbing the long end of a 14 to 9 score.

It is a good plan to throw a few shovelfuls of earth close around the trunk of young apple trees, at the same time clearing all the grass and trash away. After the first fall of snow tramp well, close to each tree. This treatment will discourage mice from nesting out the tree and knocking the bark under protection of the snow.

The married folks of the village had a dance of their own Friday evening at the Armory, and according to reports it was some event. Pleasing music was discoursed by Anderson's orchestra, supplemented by a trap drummer from Minneapolis. The light fantastic was tripped until one o'clock, and even then S. E. Vandevanter and others wanted to continue until morning. The probabilities are that another dance, with the same limitations as to those eligible to attend, will be given in the near future.

WARSHIP FIGHTING TOPS.

They Are Now Mainly Used For Sentry and Signaling Work.

Lord Nelson was killed by a musket ball fired from the cross-trees of his French antagonist. Because of this fighting tops came into existence and, being developed to keep pace with other parts of naval construction, continue to be a traditional feature of the world's navies.

A century ago, when fighting men---marines, boarding parties, gun crews---crowded the upper decks of a warship, a sharpshooter posted aloft picked off many a man. But a big battleship in action today shows not a mark to the man in the fighting top.

In the days when it still remained possible for boatloads of armed men to swarm up the sides and board a fighting ship plunging shots were dropped from the fighting top. But with great steel walls overhanging the waves and never an accommodation ladder swung out for their welcome it is impossible for uninvited guests to set foot on the modern deck.

The captain of the fighting top is usually in control of flag, semaphore and heliograph signaling, leaving the wireless to an invisible operator interned somewhere in the ship's vitals. He is the sentry against small inquisitive craft and may enforce his orders by the rattle of a light quick firer.

He has the outlook, reports and questions passing ships and has virtues as a detective against spies. His functions, however, are limited. He is not high enough placed to see the submarine creeping along a score of feet beneath the surface or to note its wake of broken water.

The fighting top is in big cruisers quite a massive affair and no longer the tiny framework behind which the picked riflemen of the ancients knelt. A duplicate set of range finders is usually kept there and used to check off the work of the experts in the fire control tower. There are light quick firers and machine guns, possibly also a high angle gun or two for use against air craft---Pearson's.

Original Home of Welshmen.

Jutland was probably the original home of our Kymric ancestors, as well as (at a later period) of some so called Saxon invaders. It was peopled in classical times by the Cimbr, identified by ethnologists with the Cymry, or modern Welshmen. The Germans magnanimously declined to annex Jutland with Schleswig-Holstein. It was then considered a worthless waste of moors, sand dunes and marshes. But the industrious Danes have transformed what one English traveler styled "a forsaken wilderness" into the most prosperous pastoral countries of western Europe.---Westminster Gazette.
