Spare the prairie chickens. Wait until they can fly.

Soule & Co.'s planing mill on Washington avenue is now running at full blast.

A neat sidewalk has been laid on the east and north side of the court house block.

Judge Dickey is bargaining for the sale of his residence and lot to a German, but the trade has not been consummated.

Some rowdies from Princeton, assisted by home talent, made the welkin ring in the vicinity of the Young school house in Baldwin on Friday night.

S. P. Woodman has just completed one of the best barns in the county. It is 32x85 feet with 16 foot posts, with a capacity overhead for 50 tons of hay.

Len. Pratt returned from Elk Park, Mont., last week, where he had been visiting his son, Venus. Len. is decidedly of opinion that there is no place like Princeton.

Mrs. R. B. Newton's fine new house in Dunham's addition will soon be ready for occupancy. When the finishing touches are administered it will be one of the handsomest residences in the village.

The potato starch company has determined to make some necessary repairs to its factory and get it into shape to do good work this fall.

The northern part of the village, nicknamed "Canada," is getting right to the front. It is a village in itself. There are many fine building sites over there, and it is surprising to us they were not picked up long ago.

The excavating for W. H. Townsend's mammoth brick block, on the northwest corner of Main and First streets is about completed and the bricklayers have commenced operations. When completed it will be the finest block in Princeton.

Riley Soule, who has been west for over a year, is home on a visit and will leave for North Dakota again tomorrow. Riley is an enterprising young man and is bound to get along in the world.

Grace: You can't cover blackheads, pimples, red spots on the face with powder, they're bound to be seen. Why worry and spoil your temper? Take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea—'twill banish them through the blood—the only sure way. 35c. Tea or tablets. C. H. Jack Drug Co. Adv.

An Editor's Tribute.

There are innumerable persons who would re-echo the opinions of Editor C. N. Lund of the Sevier Valley Call of Salina, Utah, as expressed in a recent issue. His words, we hope, will sink into the soul of the perpetrator of one of the meanest of crimes—if such a man has a soul:

The little girl's dog is dead.

He died Sunday morning just as the sun was kissing the sky into day.

He died at the hands of an assassin who fed him poison.

The dog was not much out of the ordinary, but the child loved him and he loved the child. That was enough.

He was a big, bright-eyed, large-hearted, gentle, companionable dog—the playmate and friend of the girlie whose tears fell like rain and whose heart nearly broke over his death.

And we must confess that we mingled a tear with hers. Yes, we are glad to have a soul big enough to weep with a little child over a dead dog.

The child will miss the dog that used to meet her and romp with her. The loss of his companionship justifies her mourning, for a fine, faithful friend, as true as the stars, has gone out of her life. There will always be something missing as she comes and goes from school and play—the kind, knowing look, the tender sparkling eye, the wagging tail, that mutely told his love.

Love is scarce and friendship is scarce, and so they are worth while even in a dog.

The eye of the dog was brighter and kindlier than the eye of his destroyer. The heart of the dog was whiter and purer than the heart of the one who killed him. The soul of the dog was bigger and more worthy of immortality than the soul of the poisoner. The tears and sobs of the little girl were a bigger tribute to the dog than humans will ever pay the assassin.

Nature will not be just if she refuses immortality to the dog and confers it upon man, his master, for the dog very often outstrips the man in devotion and love and loyalty.

It will be very well indeed for many a man if he can stand erect at the last day before the great white throne and have it said of him that he has loved and lived as truly and as decently as his dog!—Our Dumb Animals.

A League of 24 Nations.

Twenty-four nations of the world are working together for the sole purpose of compelling the German to mind his own business and let that of other people alone. That seems to sum up in a sentence the objects for which we are waging this war. The world is not specially interested in what the German people allow the kaiser to do to themselves. If they choose to endure it it is no concern of ours, only if ever there is a peace it must be indorsed by the German people in some form, for nobody will trust the lying house of Hohenzollern. If the Germans submit to the orders of the autocrat it is proposed to deprive him of all power to impose his will on Belgium, the Poles, the Slavs or any other people.

For the accomplishment of this purpose it is proposed to form a world league, the charter members of which shall be the 24 nations now more or less at war with Germany. It will be for them to say what other nations shall be admitted. Germany can doubtless be elected to membership whenever its people shall agree to the conditions. Until that country is admitted to membership it will be treated as a rank outsider, with which respectable nations will have as little as possible to do.

The purpose of this league, as suggested, seems to be merely an agreement to be decent to each other, trading with each other on equal terms, each nation safeguarding its own resources and standards of living as may seem best to its people, but not discriminating one against the other. There may be some agreement as to the way they will all deal with outsiders.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Valuable Dog.

Wife—You will have to give that horrid dog away. He has killed my cat.

Husband—Well, I'll give him to my neighbor. His wife has a cat, too.

Land Opportunities.

First time offered for sale, 4,000 acre tract of timber, meadow and cut-over land, located in southwestern Aitkin county, Minnesota, within three to ten miles of Mille Lacs lake, on or convenient to good roads, schools and in a rapidly developing community. The soil is rich timber loam with clay subsoil and is very productive, especially adapted to dairying and diversified farming. Some of these lands have enough mixed hardwood timber to pay for them. These lands will be sold in tracts of 40 acres up at prices from $9 to $20 per acre, $2.00 cash and balance in five yearly payments. Can show these lands at any time from Princeton by automobile. Don't miss this opportunity to get a good piece of land at a reasonable price and on easy terms. 27-tfc Robt. H. King.

Their Friend is Dead.

In the death of John Mitchell, the editor of Life, not only the dog, but all the animals as well, have lost a staunch and uncompromising friend.

And they know how long and how fearlessly he had championed their cause, all the animals of the world would mourn his going. Nothing more tells the story of our lives than the character of those who grieve because we have gone. Are they only the strong, the rich, the prosperous, or, with them does there stand a multitude of the weak, the despised, the friendless?—Our Dumb Animals.
