Putting It to the Test.

"Well, Pat," said Bridget, "what kind of a bird have you brought home in the cage?"

"Well, it's a raven," replied Pat.

"A raven. And what did you bring home a bird like that for?"

"Well, I read in a paper the other night that a raven has been known to live for three hundred years. I don't believe it, so I am going to put it to the test."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Potato Association Meets.

The Foley Potato Shipping association held its annual meeting in the court house Saturday afternoon. This meeting was well attended and very enthusiastic considering the fact that last year was the worst year possible in potato marketing.—Foley Independent.

Girl Drowned While Bathing.

Ethel Johnson, aged 14, of Wausau, Wis., was drowned in the Mississippi river on Tuesday evening just after 6 o'clock while bathing with two friends at a point near the first island north of the city on the east side of the river. The girl was a good swimmer, but seems to have become exhausted swimming against the current, which is very swift at the point where she sank. The depth of the water is about 18 feet and the place is the same at which 10-year-old Howard Huggar of East St. Cloud was drowned a year ago.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

Cambridge Organizes Ball Team.

A meeting of baseball fans was held at the city hall Friday evening and an organization was perfected to put a ball team in the field at once.—North Star.

Extending Electric Lines.

The Elk River Power & Light Co. is now making extensions of its electric lines into the nearby farming country. Already lines have been extended to the farms of Gust Nord, J. W. Playle and E. W. Dickey and a line will soon be built to the Specht farm. This will give these farmers the opportunity to use modern electrical conveniences as well as plenty of light in their homes and barns.—Elk River Star News.

Auto Plunges Over Bank.

Six persons, members of a touring party from Mason City, Ia., had a narrow escape Sunday when the auto in which they were riding plunged over a 150-foot embankment on South Lake drive into Fountain lake, near Albert Lea. One of the occupants of the car, who was pinned beneath the machine at the bottom of the lake, was severely injured, but his recovery is expected.

The Stealing of Automobiles.

Because of the alarming increase in automobile thefts, insurance companies furnishing protection against such losses have announced that hereafter no policies will be written covering the full value of cars. Instead the owner must accept a reduced valuation and assume part of the risk himself, although the premium remains the same. In effect if not in name this amounts to an increase in rates.

Probably the insurance companies cannot be blamed for this action. There seems to be no place where an unguarded automobile is safe. No lock yet devised has proved entirely adequate. Laws for the protection of automobiles, both state and national, seem to be even less adequate than locks. Most of these have been aimed at the thief by providing punishment for him if caught. Massachusetts, however, has devised a system which makes thievery unprofitable by hedging about with many restrictions the sale of used cars. Under its operation the number of cars stolen in Boston was reduced from 1,080 in 1919 to 460 in 1920, and a very large part of those taken last year were traced to so-called joy-riders and not to professional thieves.

Under the Massachusetts plan all dealers in used cars must obtain a state license, revokable for cause. A regular state inspection of their stocks, books and records is provided for and they must report in detail as to all cars accepted for sale and give notice of sale as well. Individual owners disposing of their cars to dealers or others must also follow this rule. The administration of this act has been perfected to such an extent that it is said to be nearly automatic in the detection of a stolen car, and the state records now show absolute continuity of ownership of every car registered in Massachusetts from the time it first was sold until it is junked or sold out of the state. Dealers are very cautious in receiving cars for sale, for if caught with stolen automobiles their licenses will be revoked instantly. Because of this and other causes 500 persons who were registered dealers in 1920 are not listed on the 1921 records.

Stealing automobiles has thriven in the past because those engaged in that business have had an unlimited and unrestricted market for their goods. Closing up the market and making it difficult to dispose of a stolen car seems a better way of reaching the evil than the mere catching and conviction of the thief who is willing to take a chance with the courts if he can be sure of a good profit if he succeeds in his undertaking.

It is certain that some drastic steps must be taken by every state to protect private property in automobiles. The Massachusetts system is well worth studying in this connection.—St. Paul Dispatch.

This Will Fix Cutworms.

Poisoned bait is the best exterminator of cutworms. For a small garden mix 2 level tablespoons of white arsenic, arsenate of lead, or Paris green into 5 pounds of dry bran. Add from 4 to 6 quarts of water, in which half a pint of sorghum or cheap molasses has been mixed. After the mash has stood several hours scatter it thinly over the garden or put a small quantity at the base of the plants. Put the poison on late in the day so it will be moist during the night when the cutworms feed.
