Have you paid for the paper you are reading. Mrs. Adams of Aurora, Ill., was in the city last week. I wish everyone would attend the prayer and class meetings.

I hope every one will turn out next Sunday to elect the Sunday School officers. Mr. G. Townsend will leave for Chicago Saturday to take a position in P. D. Armour's office.

with this work in the various shops where she was almost as constant in attendance as those at work that General Armstrong detailed her to write the industrial report of the year for Hampton.

Miss Van Rensselaer also took up a part of General Armstrong's most arduous work of raising funds for the institute, and went to New York where she presented the needs of Hampton in such a way as to enlist the sympathies of the teachers, and Hampton Institute to form an association for the purpose of endorsing the industrial department and save it from the annual deficit which now exists because of the training in the shops where labor must be developed before it can be skilled.

Miss Mead, a sister of Larkin G. Mead, the sculptor, and Mrs. W. D. Howells, has spent much of her time here in the work for the colored people in the country and teaching them better ways of living. Mr. Eli Whitney Blake, of Brown University, is another of the volunteer corps and young ambitious graduates from Yale as he is, he has given his first year to hard work in Hampton, teaching and acting as disciplinarian for the Indian boys. These volunteers work in the way that results, they are able to produce, are a few illustrations of how the great work at Hampton appeals to those who once get into its atmosphere and understand how great are the needs and how practical are the methods of General Armstrong. It has had a greater appeal to the people in the last year, because of the sudden illness of the late Dr. W. D. Howells, presenting the needs of his work to the people.

The Need for Help. When the mighty energy of the man, who has for a quarter of a century carried on this great work, was suddenly checked by disease and threatened incapacity the people who had responded to his appeals for so long began to realize that Hampton must be put on a substantial basis where there would be no necessity for a great "man power." The school is maintained at a total annual cost of about $150,000. Deducting the labor pay of about 2000 students (say $55,000) $100,000 is the net annual cost to the public. Of this amount $10,000 is received from the State of Virginia as interest on the State Agricultural College land fund; $20,000 from Congress for the maintenance of 120 Indians; $10,000 from the endowment fund, and about $20,000 contributed by the people in the North, who understand something of the great need for such a work. This heroic work of raising $60,000 a year for the school is what has been told on General Armstrong. The effort is now being made to secure an endowment for the institution that will place it above want. One million dollars would do this, and the $300,000 endowment now held before Congress by more than $700,000 before Hampton last year will be secured for the future and above the necessity of making its annual appeal for help from those who have had their changes in the world and have profited by the course of the century. The object of a pathetic appeal by the contrast presented in the commander. In other years his command military figure was the center of all in the school, but in the present the object of every movement of his army of negroes and Indians. At this commencement General Armstrong was also the center of interest as he sat in the front of the platform, a man of delicate features and a fine devotion to his graduates, pupils, and visitors. He is, however, rapidly recovering here among his own people, and in a few months he expects to be in command of his old-time vigor and his ability to carry on the great work of education and a new civilization. Fast Running. The subject of quicker transportation of passengers has attracted wide attention of late. An electric railway has been talked of between Chicago and St. Louis, to run at the rate of one hundred miles an hour. One of the popular magazines lately had a symposium of articles from high railroad authorities on the possibility of a train a speed of more than sixty miles an hour. Theorists are divided, but here are some facts with which our readers may content themselves until faster time is actually made: Oct. 24, 1883: Chicago, Burlington & Northern (Burlington System) St. Paul to Chicago, 482 miles, 11 hours, 10 minutes, excluding stops, 9 hours, 40 minutes.

Nov. 7, 1888: Chicago, Burlington & Northern (Burlington System) St. Paul to La Crosse, 131 miles 2 hours, 10 minutes, excluding stops, 2 hours, 3 minutes. Speed 62.88 miles per hour.

Oct. 25, 1891: Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs (Burlington System) St. Joseph to Pacific Junction, 111 miles, 1 hour, 58 minutes; excluding stops, 1 hour, 44 minutes. Speed 63.8 miles per hour. Six miles of this distance was covered in 15 seconds, or at the rate of 88 miles per hour. When you want comfort, take the Burlington.
