One of the Family.

It may interest some of our readers to glance through this short characteristic sketch of James Seymour, born in London in 1702, which is more strongly impressive than many longer memoirs. The fact that he displayed a fondness for drawing and painting in boyhood, and subsequently gained celebrity by his skill in designing horses is too well known to comment upon. Once the proud Duke of Somerset employed Seymour to paint a room at his seat in Sussex with the portraits of his running horses. Having admitted the artist to his table, he one day drank to him, saying:

"Cousin Seymour, your health." The painter replied: "My lord, I really believe that I have the honor of being of your grace's family."

This hurt the pride of the duke so much that he rose from the table and ordered his steward to pay Seymour and dismiss him. Finding, however, that no one in England could complete the pictures begun, he condescended to send for his cousin. The painter responded to the message in these words:

"My lord, I will now prove that I am of your grace's family, for I won't come."

History on a Watch Face.

Almost the last work of the Belgian astronomer, Houzeau, recently deceased, was an article in which, while arguing in favor of a decimal division of time, he pointed out the origin of the double set of twelve hours represented on our watch and clock faces. The ancient inhabitants of Mesopotamia chose the number twelve as an arithmetical base because it has four divisors, viz.: two, three, four and six, while ten has only two divisors, viz.: two and five. They counted twelve hours in the day and twelve in the night, measuring the day by the progress of the sun, and the night by the progress of the stars across the sky. This system, prevailing over all others, has come down to us, and so our watches bear on their faces a souvenir of those ancient days when the sun served for a clock-hand half of the time, and the stars the other half.

A Curious Advertisement.

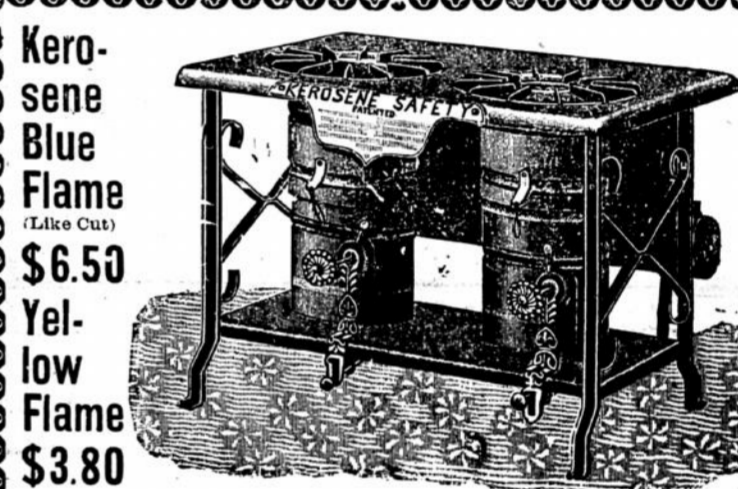

The following curious advertisement is copied from a recent number of a daily paper:

She has left me in spite of friends and church; She has carried with her all my shirts. Now ye who read this paper, Since she cut this tickles caper, I will not pay on single fraction For any debts of her contraction.

Raising Peppermint in Michigan.

Work was begun in the latter part of April in the fields of southwestern Michigan, where a large acreage has been planted of late years with peppermint. The English, or black, mint has been the chief crop for several years, but better prices are to be offered for the American plant, and that is to be the leader this year. Greater areas also are to be planted this year than heretofore.
