

HUMOR FROM OHIO.

A Unique Set of Rules in a Buckeye Hotel.

They were sitting in the lobby at Murphy's, talking about the striking peculiarities of some of the hotels they had seen up against in the course of their travels, says the New York Herald.

In the party were a red-headed drummer from Arkansas, a traveling railroad man and a spindle-shanked man who sells oil out of Pittsburg. The deal got around to the man from Arkansas, and what he had to say was this:

"I've had to stand for some queer rules and regulations in my time, but the most unique code of rules governing a hotel I ever had sprung on me was at the Tallawanda hotel, in College Corner, O. I remember each one of them distinctly to this day. They were posted in this order:

"1. Board, $50 per week, meals extra.
"2. Breakfast at 5, dinner at 7, supper at 7.
"3. Guests are requested not to speak to the dumb waiter.
"4. Guests willing to get up without being called can have self-raising flour for supper.

"5. The hotel is surrounded by a beautiful cemetery. Hearses to hire, 25 cents a day.

"6. Guests wishing to do a little driving will find a hammer and nails in the closet.

"7. If your room gets too warm open the window and see the fire escape.

"8. If you are fond of athletics and like good jumping lift the mattress and see the bed spring.

"9. If your lamp goes out take a feather out of the pillow; that's light enough for any room.

"10. Any one troubled with a nightmare will find a halter on the bedpost.

"11. Don't pick a quarrel with the clerk. His brother is the chief of police and his father the mayor of the town.

"12. Don't worry about paying your bill. The house is supported by its foundation."

A BORING ALLIGATOR.

Said to Have Made a Hole in a New Orleans Levee.

The high wind that prevailed did considerable damage to the levees along the Algiers shore, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat of late date. The wind after sunset blew especially hard against that side of the river. The waves were blown over the retention, and in some places did much damage to the earthworks. The guards were very active. They reported promptly all washings and where the occasion demanded it the damage was promptly repaired.

One of the curiosities of the flood in this section developed at the Morgan railroad wharf early one morning. There has been trouble there for some days with seepage and a force of men has been employed closing the crevices and cracks through which the water percolated. There was an unusual quantity at one place Thursday night and the foreman of the gang, in going over the spot the other morning to ascertain the reason, announced the hole had been caused by an alligator, which had burrowed through from under the wharf. His trail could be plainly seen in the mud and the workmen, in speaking of it to Sergt. Cologne, commanding the Algiers station, said that they judged he must have been at least four feet long. They think the water covered all the resting places that he might have had under the wharf and he decided to bore a hole through the bank and thus mix his time between dry land and water.

Soap of Pompell.

Soap has been in use for 3,000 years and is twice mentioned in the bible. A few years ago a soap boiler's shop was discovered in Pompell, having been buried beneath the terrible rain of ashes that fell upon that city 79 A. D. The soap found in the shop had not lost all its efficacy, although it had been buried 1,800 years.—San Francisco News Letter.

To Stop Lying.

Columbus, Ohio, June 16.—The National Anti-Mob and Lynch Law association has been incorporated by the secretary of state. The purposes of the organization are declared to be to discourage mob and lynch law, within the United States, and to agitate public sentiment with a view to securing legislation as will suppress such practices by providing adequate punishment for violators. It is proposed to form branch associations all over the United States.

THE VALUE OF GOOD TEETH.

But for them a Montana Prospector Would Have Perished in the Snow. It isn't often that a man owes his life to a good set of teeth and yet to Thomas Robbins of Cooke City belongs that distinction. Ex-Sheriff J. Henry Jurgens, who is managing the Daisy mine, in a letter to his family tells how it all happened.

Robbins is a prospector, and like all the men of that section, is a hardy mountaineer. On the morning of Jan. 21, he left Cooke City for his prospect, which is located about six miles from the camp. The snow in the mountains about Cooke City is unusually deep and that means a great deal more of it than most mining camps of considerable elevation in Montana have. Robbins, however, was not to be deterred by the snow. Strapping on his skis—long Norwegian snowshoes—he set out and reached the Daisy mine, where he stopped and ate dinner with ex-Sheriff Jurgens. After dinner he started on to his property. About a mile from the Daisy, west of there, on the divide sloping to the Stillwater side near Crown Point, he was caught in a snowdrift on the mountain and carried down a considerable distance. He was alone and covered with snow for several feet. He had a heavy pack on his back which, because of the weight of the snow upon him, interfered with his movements, and, try as he would, he was unable to make any progress. His arms were pinned, but at last a brilliant idea came to him. He would gnaw through the rope that held the pack. His teeth were good, and in time he broke the rope that held the pack. Then he was able to take off the skis and finally, after much effort, forced his way out of the slide. It was a narrow escape, indeed, for Robbins.

There are a number of such accidents in the mountains about Cooke City every year, but they do not always result so fortunately as did Robbins' mishap. Mr. Jurgens says that the men as they plow through the snow on the side of a mountain cut a line that often causes a slide of hundreds of feet. The line gives a chance for the snow to break and when it does it may carry the unfortunate man who is responsible for it down with it.

Advertisement for Miniature Locomotive. 'Expensive Toy Built for a Mexican Land owner. There has just been completed at the locomotive works a locomotive and tender that would please the heart of any boy of a mechanical turn, says the Philadelphia Ledger. In every respect the locomotive is a complete one, but it is distinguished from most others by its size—about one-third that of the engine familiar to travelers. Fernando de Teresa, the owner of a large plantation in the suburbs of the City of Mexico, is the man for whom the locomotive was built, and it is his intention to use it on the plantation for the amusement of his friends.

The weight of the engine and tender is 21,000 pounds, and the cylinders are six by ten inches. Only in size, gauge and details of finish does the engine differ from the American standard and in every respect is fully equipped with brake lubricators, etc. The boiler is twenty inches in diameter.

In regard to finish there is nothing wanting. All the bright parts are nickel plated, the wheels and running gear are painted red and the cab and tank are Prussian blue. The name Susana is painted upon the cab and on the tender is the fanciful name of the railroad, F. C. Taebaya. The gauge is within three-eighths of an inch of two feet.

Special designs are made for this locomotive, and its building occupied about two months. Such a length of time was taken because the owner was not in a hurry, though similar engines have been built at the works in eight days.

One Forgotten. They were talking of figures of speech. "Have you ever noticed," said one, "how fond people are of vegetable metaphors when they are dealing with a woman? Her cheeks are 'roses'; her lips are 'cherry'; her hands are always 'lily' hands; her mouth is a 'rosebud'; her complexion is 'like a peach' and her breath is 'fragrant of honey-suckle.'" "You have forgotten one," said the cynic. "What is that?" "Her tongue. It's a scarlet runner."—Pick-Me-Up.

their husbands may shoot them away with rifle balls, or one woman who for several seasons was in the habit of nightly standing against a board screen while her husband dexterously threw knives around her until she was pinned in so that she could not move from her position, when the slightest deviation from his wonderful skill would have meant that one of the knives would pierce her flesh and doubtless kill her.

Chiquita, in Mexico, used to stand in the center of the bull-ring and face fearlessly the maddened animal, which was induced to charge upon her, her sole hope of escaping a horrible death depending upon the precision with which her husband should throw his never-failing lasso. And yet she died a natural death, for the lariat in her husband's hands never failed to turn the bull in time, and it was not an infrequent occurrence that he was so drunk when he mounted his horse to perform the act that he had to be assisted in the saddle. There are thousands of cases of the kind, and they are taking place every day right before our eyes, the strange part of it being that we do not realize the truth when we see the several acts performed.

Who, for instance, in viewing the closing scene of a beautiful parol dance at the opening of the third act in a popular opera pauses to think of the extraordinary confidence in her husband's strength and agility which the woman must possess when she permits herself to be turned in the air like an animated cart-wheel, and in a manner which, if she should make one miss, would certainly result in broken limbs, if not a fatal accident.

It is interesting to know how this act originated. The husband describes it in his own words, as follows:

"I had been out to a dinner party after the performance one night and did not get to my room at the hotel until after 2 in the morning. My wife was in bed, but she had to get up to let me in, and we were chatting about the performance, when suddenly the idea for the turn which popped into my head. 'Come here,' I said to her. 'Stand with your back to me and stiffen every joint.' She didn't ask a question, but stood just as I said, and I grabbed her and gave her the turn just as you have seen me do it on the stage. She had no idea of what I was going to do until it was done, but when she landed on her feet after the flopper she looked dazed for a moment, and then she said: 'Don't you do that again, Sam!' But all the same I have done it every night on the stage since that time, and I regard it as one of the best acts I ever originated."

Becky and Marcella. If the author of "Vanity Fair" had treated Miss Rebecca Sharp with some little generosity in the matter of an allowance, she would have descended to such acts as concealing that £1,000 note of Lord Steyne's or becoming "a valuable attendant during sickness" on her stout friend Joe Sedley? Are not her many sins on Thackeray's soul, since it would have been the easiest thing in the world to have allowed her a small stipend?

Potent indeed was money in the philanthropies of Mrs. Ward's "Marcella." Without it could that "divine busy-body," as somebody has called Lady Maxwell, have experimented with the woes and labors of humanity? We wonder, however, if in Marcella's case Mrs. Ward's generosity was not a little misplaced. There is reason to think that it might have been better for Sir George Treasady, certainly for the comfort of relatives and friends, and most undeniably for Marcella herself, if she had been forced by poverty, or rather by moderate means, to spend more time over her housekeeping. The eternal presence of things about a house which need reforming might have consumed some of that tireless energy which even wore upon that long-suffering figurehead, Lord Maxwell. Money, however, is a necessary factor in the housekeeping affairs of even heroines; otherwise, would that charming hostess, Diana of the Crossways, have turned traitor to a guest when George Meredith failed to allow her an income sufficiently large to meet her household expenses?—Lippincott's.

How Public Men Write. W. C. P. Breckinridge of Kentucky writes a hand that does the soul of the printer good. Speaker Reed writes a fairly clear hand, but he sometimes fails in spelling, a fault of which he is almost morbidly conscious. The late S. S.
