We are in receipt of a private letter from a friend in Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that he has charge of a column in the Enquirer, one of the leading Democratic dailies of this country, devoted to the personal, social and general news among the Colored people of the "Queen City," for which he is well paid. We do not particularly favor the "Colored Column" scheme, with its rather odious distinction, as it is very distasteful to a large number of us, but we are pleased to see such papers as the Enquirer, of Cincinnati, and the Courier Journal, of Louisville, Ky.,—which also runs such a column—giving evidence of the fact that they are compelled to pay some attention to the Colored people, and to do something to show that they recognize the fact that they are an important factor in the composition of the cosmopolitan cities in which those journals are published. We would, however, prefer to see these great journals place some capable Colored men on their regular reportorial staffs with the privilege of reporting and publishing the same matter they do now in the proper columns, without any distinctions. We do not favor "Colored papers any more than we do "Colored columns," though we are, and have been engaged in their publication continuously, since 1879, yet, we think they have been productive of much good and have done much to elevate, and educate, and harmonize the people. When the time comes—and we hope it will not be far distant—that there will be no need for Colored papers but that all papers will be papers of the people, we will be highly gratified.

The action of the Enquirer is a step in advance of its former policy; it always furnished more news concerning the bad things that Colored people did in all parts of the country, than any other paper we know of, and we heartily approve of its efforts to furnish news of the more pleasant things they engage in. The young man who has been engaged by the Enquirer, possesses abilities superior to nine out of ten of the ordinary newspaper reporters and we would be pleased to see the great journal take another advanced step and appoint him as an all around man on its staff.

For several weeks the press of both races have scattered the tidings of the project concocted by certain Kansas gentlemen, looking to the shipping of thousands of Negroes to South America. We have refrained from giving any particular notice to a scheme so wild, foolhardy and impracticable, and would not speak now, save for the fact that some of our cotemporaries seem to be terribly excited, fearing grave consequences from this wild scheme. It may be because the frigid air of the Northwest has rendered us unduly phlegmatic; but we do not feel one tremor of excitement for two reasons: First—a dozen such organization could not coax, buy, force or dupe 50 respectable Negroes to enter into so foolish a plan. Second—There are enough intelligent men of our race scattered throughout the South, to stamp the life out of any such villainous enterprise, were it to give any indications of success.

So we rest easy, feeling assured that when the tide of Negro migration begins it will flow with the fertile districts of our own free and eden-like Northwest.
When the Industrial League speaks out, there will be a hearty, a generous and worthy response.
The Colored men of Minnesota, hope, before long, to offer thousands of acres of good and available land to the industrious Southerners.

Republicans in Convention.
In response to the call, about 500 Republicans met Thursday, Feb. 2nd, at Harmonia Hall, Minneapolis, for the purpose of organizing a State League. Nearly every county in the state was represented.
F. E. Searis, of St. Cloud, was elected temporary chairman and T. Bixby, of Red Wing, secretary. Committees on Credentials, Permanent Organization, Rules, Resolutions and Plan of State League consisting of one delegate from each judicial district were appointed. During the absence of the committees the following resolutions written by the late Gen. John A. Logan were read by B. G. Evans and unanimously adopted:

The great purpose of the people in giving the Colored race their freedom and amending the constitution of the United States, was to raise them from the condition of servitude in which they had previously stood, to perfect political equality with all other citizens within the jurisdiction of the states and nation. And inasmuch as they have been restricted in their civil and political rights in many of the Southern states by people resorting to various means in violation of law for such purposes; therefore, be it,

Resolved, That it is the duty of all good citizens, irrespective of party, to use their influence and votes in the direction that will protect these persons in all the rights to which they are entitled under the laws and constitution of the United States, and any political party or combination that interferes in any way with the rights of any citizens, white or Colored, in fairly depositing his ballot for his choice at any election shows himself unworthy of the protection of this government, and any party recognizing or sympathizing with any such course or conduct should be censured by the honest and faithful citizens of the United States.

Resolved, That the Democratic party is chargeable with the habitual sacrifice of patriotism and justice in the suppression of the ballot in many of the Southern states. Instead of promoting the purity of the ballot they have restored to all kinds of oppression and fraud against the rights of the Colored citizens in order to gain political advantages and restore themselves to power.

After the reading of these and sundry other resolutions the convention adjourned until Friday morning.
Upon the reassembling of the convention the different committees made their reports, the temporary organization was made permanent, with the addition of W. E. Lee, for treasurer and the following:

Vice Presidents—S. P. Jennison, F. D. Parker, C. A. White, John Swift, George B. Edgerton, F. A. Day, James Compton, T. C. Stover, W. R. Edwards, E. S. Hoppin, H. B. Allen, Jorgen Simmons, Albert Burk, George W. Lamphear, G. A. Whitney, O. M. Torrison.
Executive Committee—J. N. Searles, M. D. Munn, S. R. Van Sant, E. A. Sumner, B. B. Evans, W. A. Sperry, D. W. Bruckart, George M. Hulson, S. W. Hayes, C. L. Edwards, S. F. Wadhams, W. D. Joubert, S. C. Herr, George J. McManus, Justus Smith, G. H. Munro and the president and secretary ex-officio.

Immediately after the adjournment of the convention the executive committee met and elected T. E. Byrnes, president of the League and T. Bixby, secretary. The headquarters will be at Minneapolis.

The Colored delegates at the convention were John G. Sterritt, M. W. Lewis, T. E. Wilson, John L. Neal, of Minneapolis; E. P. Wade, F. D. Parker and J. Q. Adams of St. Paul. During the discussion on the Logan resolutions, E. P. Wade made a little speech which saved them from going to the committee and secured their unanimous adoption.

Connections Made in Union Depots.

Notwithstanding the wonderful advances made in the past few years in the way of rendering travel by rail pleasant and enjoyable to the last degree, by sleeping cars, parlor cars, dining cars, buffet cars, bouidoir cars, and "all that sort of thing," there is, in certain quarters, one annoyance left, which is about the most unbearable of all. That is to enter a city at evening of a rainy fall day, at midnight in a winter storm, or at 3 A. M. when the mercury is below zero, and find yourself obliged to leave a warm car and ride two miles in an omnibus which ought to be put on some "refrigerator car line," to make your next railroad connection. Travelers who don't enjoy that sort of thing will make no mistake when they buy their tickets over "the Burlington" for all its connections are made in "Union Depots," at Chicago and Peoria with Eastern and Southern lines, at St. Louis and Kansas City with Southern and Southwestern roads, at St. Joseph and Council Bluffs and Western railroads, and at St. Paul and Minneapolis with the great Northwestern railroads. "Union Depots" everywhere, and close connections. Further information can be had by writing to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent C. B. & N. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

CHICAGO.
Doings of a week in the Great Western Metropolis.

Served up for the Edification of our Readers.

Brother Jones didn't know his meeting was loaded, but it was and now he is not feeling well.

A few weeks ago Dr. D. H. Williams, one of the leading Colored physicians of Chicago, in the course of a long interview with a reporter, used the words: "The great mistake which white people make is to judge the whole Colored race by the sleeping-car porter (who is not half so black as he has been painted), by the newboys and roustabouts." In the same interview he said "The Colored people are particularly fond of secret societies and bright regalia."

When Mr. Jones read those remarks of Dr. Williams, his ire was kindled. He saw in them an insult to the sleeping-car porter and secret societies, and he determined to resent it. He had a lot of little dodgers headed with big type scattered broadcast over the city, inviting all members of secret societies, sleeping-car porters, and hotel waiters to meet Sunday, at 2:30, No. 180 Clark street and show Dr. Williams where he was wrong.

At 3 o'clock the meeting was called to order by Mr. Jones, who elected himself chairman, and stepping to the fore with dignified mien, he read a portion of the interview with Dr. Williams and then began to denounce him. "Gentlemen," he said, "an insult and slur on the Colored race has been offered by Dr. Williams. Not only does it appertain to the railroad porter and hotel waiter but to all of us as well. I say now that what Brother Williams said was false, malicious and a lie. It was outrageous."

"Brother Jones," said Mr. Hewitt, "I don't see that Dr. Williams said anything so bad. We do love societies and bright regalia. He doesn't say anything against the Colored man, and I think you have made a great mistake in calling this indignation meeting. It is an outrage to get up and vilify a man in this way. Why don't you read all of the interview without picking out one sentence; it may be he said something that modifies it."

"I read all that relates to the point at issue," replied Mr. Jones.
"No, that won't do; give us a chance to judge for ourselves; don't misrepresent any man."

"I don't," indignantly answered Mr. Jones. "If you think I didn't read it right, read it yourself."
"I'll do it," said Morris Bowman, the attorney, and taking the paper he read all the interview with Dr. Williams. When the whole was read it was found that instead of reviling secret societies or speaking disparagingly of his own race, Dr. Williams had complimented, upheld, and spoken most sensibly of them.

Mr. Emory Snowdon, representing the hotel waiters, jumped on Attorney Jones and gave it to him in such a lively manner that our legal friend began to look down in the mouth.

Then Lawyer Bowman arose and said: "Dr. Williams is a gentleman, and a scholar, and he knows what he is talking about. We must respect our leaders. I am sorry this meeting has been called. I endorse every word Dr. Williams has said. This is a John Jones meeting, conceived and carried out by you, Mr. Chairman, and you have tried to do all the talking. We must call a halt. Don't be led away by a cypher, gentlemen. Brother Jones means well and is on the alert to discover attacks on the race, but he has made a mistake. I am here for justice. Black men do like brass buttons. I say Dr. Williams was right and all in favor of approving his remarks say 'ay.'"

"No you don't," interrupted Jones. "I'm running this meeting, and if there is any motion to be put I'll put 'em."

"Well, why don't you put 'em?" cried all present in a breath.

Mr. Jones insisted that Dr. Williams had insulted the whole Colored race and demanded the passage of a long list of resolutions condemning Dr. Williams in severest terms.
"I move that the resolutions be laid on the table," cried one man as soon as Mr. Jones had finished reading them.
"I second the motion," yelled a number and the crestfallen chairman put the motion which was carried unanimously. When Mr. Jones found that he had been defeated he tried to hedge, saying: "I have spoken disparagingly of Dr. Williams. Personally, he is my friend, but the position he has taken is an insult. Now I didn't say anything against his character, did I? He is a gentleman and—"

"I move that we unanimously endorse every word Dr. Williams said," cried Mr. Hewitt. The motion received a dozen seconds, but Jones hesitated.
"Put the motion," cried several voices.
"Oh don't be afraid, I'll put it sure," and he did put it and it was carried without a dissenting vote. It was a hard dose for Brother Jones but he swallowed it and the meeting adjourned.
