Letter from Sauk Centre.

SAUK CENTRE, Oct. 4th, 1862.
"Mrs SWISHELM—In your paper of the 28th ult., I find a short and very personal article from John B. Marvin, A. Q. M. of the "Northern Rangers," in which he speaks very derisively of Capt. Ramdell, and a company of State Militia, organized by the citizens of this place and vicinity, for the protection of the live and property of one and all in this section of the country.

It is nothing but common justice to the people here, who have so nobly made a stand instead of fleeing from the homes of many others have done; that we should be defended against such unmanly assault, from a body of men claiming to be a military organization; but upon the principle of judging a tree by its fruits, we should call them a band of outlaws, whose avowed purpose is not to protect property and give confidence to the people, but to destroy the one and frighten the other.

As regards breaking into deserted houses I do not know that Capt. Freeman and his company have been guilty of such outrages, for we have not been an eye witness to such scenes; but it is a universal fact that on the road from here to Alexandria and the valley below us, nearly every house has been broken into, and everything of value either carried away or destroyed.

Here we would have it distinctly understood that we do not charge all of these acts to Capt. Freeman, for Capt. Fergus's company was seen while in the act of committing such depredations.

After Capt. Freeman returned to St. Cloud, from Paynesville, Forest City, &c., he was ordered immediately to Fort Abercrombie. Did he obey orders? No! he came as far as Sauk Centre, and waited for reinforcements fearing to go through alone.

Sixty mounted men afraid to go to Abercrombie all alone.
Capt. Freeman requested Capt. Ramdell, to detail thirty men from our company to go through with him, and return alone, leaving but twenty men here, to protect the women and children, rightly claiming protection at our hands, nearly every member of the company having a family of his own. This of course our captain could not grant, but ten women volunteered to see them safely through to the Fort and no doubt would have done so had their services been accepted. Could any request have been more unjust than this. Look for a moment at our geographical position. Situated thus could we not reasonably expect an attack here, as soon as a body of sixty mounted men, would, as where on the road between here and Abercrombie. Yet with all these facts staring him in the face, Capt. Freeman had the hardihood, to ask for what few men we had, to protect him and his company, leaving our women and children exposed to the tomahaws, and scalping knife of the savage. To use their own language "we have no connection with them" and I pray God we never may.

The first act of Capt. Freeman after his arrival was an attempt to impress horses for the use of his company, when we had but few, the most of which we kept in use to scour the country, and ascertain if possible the whereabouts of our savage foes. This is the kind of protection we have received from Capt. Freeman.

As to the courage of the Northern Rangers we may well doubt, by the following incident.
Mr. Gager and a few others had gone back to Alexandria to procure some articles they had left there and hurry up one or two families who were due here at noon of the day Capt. Freeman's company arrived. We concluded to go in search of them the following morning. Lieut. Taylor informed Capt. Ramdell that night as he was leaving on the stage for St. Cloud that twenty-five men would be detained, by Capt. Freeman, to go in search of Gager and his company. When Capt. Ramdell wished to know when the expedition would be ready to start (as he wished to send what men he could mount along) Capt. Freeman informed him that he (Capt. Freeman) would not send any men. So Capt. Ramdell proceeded without any further delay to mount what men he could (save in all). When ready to start, Capt. Freeman came up, when Capt. Ramdell asked if he could not send ten men along with ours, or five or one and make our force that much stronger, when Capt. Freeman replied, "to tell you the truth captain, my men feel timid and don't wish to go unless a big crowd goes." ...

...to our five brave men under command of Serjt. McLaughlin started on their journey.

Things are now progressing smoothly here. We have erected a stockade fort two hundred feet square, and ten feet high intended to be bullet proof. Capt. McCoy's company is stationed here, and will soon commence to erect barracks for winter quarters.

I hope the day is not far distant, when this bellicose Indian rebellion shall be put down; and the Sioux nation either exterminated or driven beyond the Rocky mountains. Then will our beautiful valley relieved from its thralldom, burst forth into a new life, and with its extended fields and numerous flocks and herds, lend new strength and glory to the mighty West.

I am yours Respectfully,
E. A. HARMON,
Orderly Serjt. Sauk Centre Militia.

Anecdotes of Abercrombie

During one of the attacks on Abercrombie Mr. Edwin Wright entered a stable to protect his horses just as an Indian entered at an opposite door. Mr. Wright fired but missed him, when he coolly fixed his eye on that of his adversary while he took deliberate aim and fired he Mr. Wright dodging and receiving the ball in his shoulder as he moved steadily up, when, wounded as he was he transfixed the red skin with his bayonet.

The orderly sergeant of the company there during one of the fights called attention of P. Lamb to an Indian on horseback a half mile off, and taking aim with his howitzer threw a shell at him. It fell directly under the horse and burst lifting horse and rider and scattering them in fragments. The remains of the horse were afterwards found, but the Indian had been carried off.

Farmers not Subject to Peddler's License.

The question has been raised as to whether farmers, who bring their produce into cities to sell would be required to take out a peddler's license. In answer to an inquiry, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue sent the following reply:
TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Office of Internal Revenue,
Washington, Sept. 29th, 1862.
SIR: In reply to your inquiry contained in your letter of 26th inst. I have to say that farmers, who sell the produce of their own farms in the manner mentioned by you, are not subject to a peddler's license.

Very Respectfully,
GEORGE S. BOUTWELL,
Commissioner of Int. Rev.

From the "Battery Boys."

The recruits from this place and Anoka for the Second Minnesota Battery, under charge of Lieut. Woodbury, went directly from Fort Snelling to Corinth, expecting to find the Battery in Mississippi. Upon their arrival at Corinth, however, they learned that it was somewhere in Kentucky, so they proceeded immediately to Louisville, and reached that place in the midst of the great panic which convulsed that city from Briggs's threatened attack. They, with a number of recruits for the Fourth Michigan Battery, were at once formed into an infantry company, and employed for the defense of the city.

Then they were marched and counter-marched, and by way of amusement were one night taken to a sand bar in the Ohio river, and allowed "to lay on their arms." The boys were, for the most part, well. The letter from which we quote is one written by Wm. Kinkead to a friend in this place, and is dated Sept. 26th. Mr. K says: "At Louisville Barracks we have one of our number in the hospital—Philip Harris, of Oak Grove, Anoka Co. Albert Gowdy has been quite unwell for some days, but remains with us. R. Ch. Bloomfield is well and carries a heavy knapsack equal to almost any of us."

From another letter of Sept. 30th written by the same person, we learn that the boys have joined their Battery, which entered Louisville on the 28th, with Buell's army. He concludes: "We are under marching orders for—don't know where. Horses harnessed, wagons loaded, etc.—Harris for the army of the Ohio!" All letters for the Battery should be directed "Army of the Ohio"

Blackwood—This all magazine for September comes to us with a ten page biographical romance entitled "President Jefferson Davis," who is introduced as "the first President of the Confederate States."

According to Blackwood Jeff. is a hero of the first water—a rare and rather astonishing combination of the cardinal virtues. The animus of the article may be gathered from the following extract:

In the plenitude of their power the sovereign States created the Federal Government. Unscrupulous politicians converted it into a government of uses. That which they deemed expedient they deemed just. Encroachment succeeded encroachment in rapid succession. The Federalists of the North desired strength in Congress, in order that they might virtually consummate consolidation, and thereby force the South to become their vassal.

What martyrs those oppressed southerners have been. As Blackwood reflects the sentiments of the High Church party if not the dominant party in England, this biography looks as though President Lincoln's three month's lie to the rebellion might prove fatal to the government.

Rev. Sterrett will preach at the Seminary, at the same time.

DIED.—A noon-to-day (Friday) the 10th, James S. White, a well known merchant of Upper Town.

We have seen a statement of the official trial in one of the principal counties in this State of twenty-five Grain and Stock Scales. They were the ordinary out-door or Wagon Scales, and were tested just as they were found in common use, thus making it one of the best practical tests. Sixteen of them were of Fairbanks make, and nine of various other kinds. The result showed a remarkable degree of accuracy in those of Fairbanks' make, while all the others were condemned as not sufficiently accurate for use. The importance of this fact will be appreciated without comment. We publish it because it is one in which the public are interested.—Chicago Tribune.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—BY VIRTUE OF A decree issued out of and under the seal of the district court of the 4th Judicial district in and for the county of Stearns, State of Minnesota, upon a judgment docketed in said county on the 30th day of August, A. New ELEVATORS.—In addition to the present extensive facilities in Chicago for receiving grain we learn that two first class Elevators are being built on the South Branch of our leading warehouse firms, to be completed in a few months, and to be furnished throughout with the most approved machinery, including twenty three of Fairbanks' 500 bushel Hopper scales, which is a sufficient guaranty that correct weight will be given. Besides the elevators, Messrs. Fairbanks have set in this city in a little more than a year, about seventy 500 bushel Hopper scales, and a dozen or so smaller ones, making over a hundred in all. So perfect is the machinery, that each scale may be loaded and unloaded in ten or twelve minutes, which gives some idea of the enormous amount of grain which may be weighed upon them all in a single day. Let the Farmers of the Northwest raise their immense crops of grain, and the railroads and canal transport it to Chicago; there is no doubt but our means for receiving, storing and shipping it will keep pace with the demand.—Chicago Bee Journal.
