

CURRENT COMMENT.

The Evening Post, the only administrative organ in Colorado, was compelled to temporarily suspend on account of the present business stringency.
ADDITIONAL IRELAND has written to the University of Paris, asking a retraction of certain statements regarding his position towards Mgr. Sattoli and his policy.
The New York World prints a list of twenty banks which have resumed business, also a list of about fifty maturing certificates of deposit which have resumed operations since August 13.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Glenned By Telegraph and Mail.
PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.
It is feared that the delay of the president in appointing strin-lan office officials may interfere seriously with opening the Cherokee strip.
MARRIAGE. The well known actress, died at New York recently. In private life she was Mrs. D. Shepherd, her husband being better known under his stage name of R. D. MacLean.
This foundation for the many rumors regarding the health of the president is found in the fact which has been made public on July 11, he had an operation for the removal of a growth inside his left jaw, a portion of the bone being cut away.

DECLARATIONS.

The public debt statement showed an increase during the month of August of $10,445,928.
A HOTEL in Sambach, in the Wurtemberg Black forest, was burned recently. Sixty young women were in the house when the fire broke out. Most of them escaped, but a number lost their lives.
INSPECTOR FAISON has submitted to Hoke Smith a report of the Greencrook entered into with the Choctaw nation whereby two of the convicts are to be executed and the others allowed to proceed guilty to manslaughter.
Gov. TUNNEY, of Tennessee, has decided to remove the state troops from Coal Creek mines and put a small civil guard in their place.
CERAR RAPIDS and other Iowa towns are suffering from a sugar famine.
The Kook Island has been admitted to membership in the Southwestern Traffic association.

THE TRAIN MEN ACT BRAVELY.

They Repulse the Robbers and Capture One - Conflicting Accounts as to Whether the Bandits Got Anything or Not.
ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6.-Another train was held up last night on the St. Louis and Pacific coast road, this time with a different result. The demand for a captured robber.
Express train No. 1 on the Frisco west-bound was flagged with a red light a few miles east of Pacific, which is about thirty miles west of St. Louis. The train came to a standstill and two men held the engine crew at bay while a third went to the express car and demanded admittance.
The messenger refused to open the door. The demand then came from one of the engine guards to blow her open.
This command was almost instantly followed by a deafening report and the woodwork of the car was wrecked. Then the three robbers joined forces and tried to enter the car, but were impeded by the wreck.
At this juncture the conductor and a brakeman rushed up to the robbers with their revolvers and commanded them to surrender. The robbers answered with a poorly-directed fusillade, which the two brave train men gave back with interest.
The robbers' resistance unavailing, the robbers and two of them took to their heels. The third was overpowered and made a prisoner. So far as known no one was hurt.

FRISCO AGAIN.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6.-Another train was held up last night on the St. Louis and Pacific coast road, this time with a different result. The demand for a captured robber.
Express train No. 1 on the Frisco west-bound was flagged with a red light a few miles east of Pacific, which is about thirty miles west of St. Louis. The train came to a standstill and two men held the engine crew at bay while a third went to the express car and demanded admittance.
The messenger refused to open the door. The demand then came from one of the engine guards to blow her open.
This command was almost instantly followed by a deafening report and the woodwork of the car was wrecked. Then the three robbers joined forces and tried to enter the car, but were impeded by the wreck.
At this juncture the conductor and a brakeman rushed up to the robbers with their revolvers and commanded them to surrender. The robbers answered with a poorly-directed fusillade, which the two brave train men gave back with interest.
The robbers' resistance unavailing, the robbers and two of them took to their heels. The third was overpowered and made a prisoner. So far as known no one was hurt.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Proceedings of the Extra Session - What Both Houses Are Doing.
In the Senate on the 29th Mr. Voorhes, of the Franco committee, reported the house bill repealing part of the Sherman act with an amendment in the nature of a substitute before the senate bill offered by Mr. Voorhes. Mr. Stewart's resolution directing the secretary of the treasury to inform the senate whether there is danger of a deficiency in revenue for the current year gave rise to a lengthy debate, but was finally referred.
Senator Gordon then spoke in favor of the unconditional repeal bill and Senator Tuller spoke in favor of the amendment. The house is engaged considering the report of the committee on the history of the act. The house has also passed a bill to amend the act of August 18, 1870, which relates to the duties on the importation of silver.
The Senate on the 29th passed a bill to amend the act of August 18, 1870, which relates to the duties on the importation of silver.
The Senate on the 29th passed a bill to amend the act of August 18, 1870, which relates to the duties on the importation of silver.

THE PARADE.

The Grand Army Captures Indianapolis, Ind.
THIRTY THOUSAND VETERANS MARCH.
The Order of Procession Through the Flag-Decorated Streets - The Annual Report Shows a Net Decrease of 2,657.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 6.-The blue-coated veterans have captured the city, but the capitulation of the Hoosier capital has been peaceful and voluntary one, unaccompanied by the roaring cannon, except that employed in bidding the invaders welcome.
The sun had scarcely risen when the people began to gather along the parade line of march. The police had been out before them and had stretched wire cables along the streets to keep the crowd away from the marchers.
The procession came down the flag-covered streets with 100 mounted police in the lead, followed by Gen. J. R. Carnahan, grand marshal, and his staff of mounted men, all in full dress uniforms. Their canopy, a naval vessel, was behind them a great host representing the Monitor, with a banner bearing the words of Farragut: "Damn the torpedoes, go ahead."
When the expedition was introduced it was greeted with a volley of cheers that was thrice repeated. It is apologetic to his fellow-citizens for having remained so long at the seashore, while they were working hard for the success of the encampment; admitted that the glory of the greatest day of the war was not his, but that of the "shirk" indulged in some interesting reminiscences regarding the park and surrounding neighborhood in the days of the war, and eulogized the bravery and devotion to country of the Indiana troops.
"No Indiana soldier," said he, "need be ashamed to open to the world, in friendly competition, with the records of sister states, the story of Indiana's part in the war. The greatest glory of the war was not his, but that of the 'shirk' indulged in some interesting reminiscences regarding the park and surrounding neighborhood in the days of the war, and eulogized the bravery and devotion to country of the Indiana troops."
The night that is familiar to all attendants at encampments, "Old Abe," the war eagle that has been carried in every parade, alive or stuffed, for the past twenty-seven years, was again at the head of the parade, and the grand old eagle, with its wings spread, was the beauty of it all was that these regiments from Indiana and those from Illinois, and these from Ohio were not Indiana's soldiers, but soldiers of the United States. The cause was one, the glory is one, and visiting comrades from other states, we are not here to exalt ourselves, but to take your hands as comrades and share with you the glory of the greatest day of the war that was ever achieved by war in human history. If there is any man anywhere who does not honor the union veteran he does not live in Indiana. If there is any man anywhere who does not respect the soldier, or would detract in the smallest degree from the merits of his service he is not here to-day. You are not on this on our streets. If there is any man anywhere who does not honor the union veteran he does not live in Indiana. If there is any man anywhere who does not respect the soldier, or would detract in the smallest degree from the merits of his service he is not here to-day. You are not on this on our streets. If there is any man anywhere who does not honor the union veteran he does not live in Indiana. If there is any man anywhere who does not respect the soldier, or would detract in the smallest degree from the merits of his service he is not here to-day. You are not on this on our streets.

THE OLD SOLDIERS.

The National Encampment of the G. A. R. is formally opened at Indianapolis, Ind.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 6.-Thanks to the weather and the successful carrying out of the admirable arrangements performed by the local committee, the twenty-seventh national encampment of the G. A. R. opened auspiciously. So far as the number of visitors from outside points is concerned, the success of the encampment is already assured. All day long the railroads poured a stream of people into the Hoosier capital, and somewhere in the neighborhood of 30,000 people must have been turned loose into the streets of Indianapolis.
Almost on the very spot of the Military park where, thirty-one years ago, the citizens presented to Col. Harrison and his newly organized Seventh regiment of volunteers the standards of Indiana and the United States, the parade before them to the west was the president yesterday afternoon dedicated Camp Vinton, the name bestowed upon some 800 tents in which reunions of regiments and old soldiers' societies will be held in full blast for the remainder of the week. About 5,000 people participated in the exercises, which included a parade by W. A. Ketchum, Gen. C. T. Wilder, for whom the camp was named, and the grand marshal, unveiled by the band and the raising of the stars and stripes to the top of a towering pole.
When the expedition was introduced it was greeted with a volley of cheers that was thrice repeated. It is apologetic to his fellow-citizens for having remained so long at the seashore, while they were working hard for the success of the encampment; admitted that the glory of the greatest day of the war was not his, but that of the "shirk" indulged in some interesting reminiscences regarding the park and surrounding neighborhood in the days of the war, and eulogized the bravery and devotion to country of the Indiana troops.
The night that is familiar to all attendants at encampments, "Old Abe," the war eagle that has been carried in every parade, alive or stuffed, for the past twenty-seven years, was again at the head of the parade, and the grand old eagle, with its wings spread, was the beauty of it all was that these regiments from Indiana and those from Illinois, and these from Ohio were not Indiana's soldiers, but soldiers of the United States. The cause was one, the glory is one, and visiting comrades from other states, we are not here to exalt ourselves, but to take your hands as comrades and share with you the glory of the greatest day of the war that was ever achieved by war in human history. If there is any man anywhere who does not honor the union veteran he does not live in Indiana. If there is any man anywhere who does not respect the soldier, or would detract in the smallest degree from the merits of his service he is not here to-day. You are not on this on our streets. If there is any man anywhere who does not honor the union veteran he does not live in Indiana. If there is any man anywhere who does not respect the soldier, or would detract in the smallest degree from the merits of his service he is not here to-day. You are not on this on our streets.