"Mob law differs from all other violations of law just to this: that they break single laws, trample on the rights of individuale, while mob law means the destruction of law itself-of the security of the rights of all. It severe the bords that hold society to-gether. It is anarchy. It is chaos. The mob that inflicts vengenbes on a eriminal is quilty of as much more beinous a wrong than that original. as society is breater than the individsal. Mob law introduces these very very principles which dominate bartarism, and which is the object of government to escape. It negatives the very idea of government. It nows the sords of victioner, of pas-ion, of The two recess must live together. individual revolt against authority. It Shall it be as enemies or friends? "But sport from that there remain the other two tests. The right man must receive the right punishment. Men differ as to the true end of punishment, but civil z-d men, humane men do not differ in the opinion that cruelty even in dealing with the worst criminals is out of place. If a criminal deserves death let him die, but any unnecessary torture does no good. It brutalizes the perpetrature and the community and produces more crimi

"Then there is the third test. The right punishment ought to be inflicted in the right spirit. Is any community likely to be benefited by inculeating this spirit of revenge?

"I desire now to point out on the confrery that there are particular rea sone why the lynching of Negroes by white men is far worse in its effect then mob law in general. There are stead of apologising for it. In the first place, it is setting an example of men to the Negrous themselves, who are peculiarly initative peculia. In the second place, it tends to preventthe Negroes from caltivating smong themselves the spirit of crime It is vastly important that we should get the Negroes themselves down on crime committed by their ownlescole Every thing in the treatment of Negro criminals, to which the Negro can imuly object, is an object in the way of this. It is no answer to this to point out that Negroes themselves have often given their approbation to lynch ing. This only shows they are learning only too well the lesson the super for rece to teaching them.

Leetly, one of the most startling facts in the South today, one most prognant with evil for the farture, is the drifting apart of the two races. autagonism, taking the place of formor mutual sympathy. Whatever open feeling towards the Negroes, no man who desires to be called humans, no man who loves his country or cases even for bis own race, though he hat es everybody else, can view this fact must be as friends.
