1836.—1886.

His Majesty's Jubilee Birthday!

Grand Reception at Iolani Palace.

HANDSOME DISPLAY OF PRESENTS.

Magnificent Display of Fire Works!

GRAND TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION OF THE HONOLULU FIRE DEPARTMENT.

INCIDENTS, ETC.

THE MIDNIGHT BLAZE.

The celebration of the King's fiftieth birthday commenced on Tuesday, Nov. 16, at 12 o'clock midnight, by the ringing of bells, firing a salute, bonfires on Punchbowl hill and the firing of bombs, accompanied by music at intervals. This midnight innovation lasted about an hour. Owing to the muddy state of the streets, from Monday's rain, there was not a very general turnout—most people contenting themselves by getting up and taking a look from their doors, and then turning in again, to refresh themselves by sleep for the festivities to commence in the morning.

THE WEATHER, ETC.

The weather on Tuesday looked threatening early in the day, but fortunately no rain fell until nightfall, when there was for a short time a smart downpour, rendering the streets at places almost impassable for pedestrians. The electric light has been introduced, for the jubilee, into the palace and the grounds—each of the principal gates having a brilliant light over it, adding much toward enlivening the scenes and incidents taking place during the evening. On Tuesday evening however, this factor was dispensed with after 8 o'clock, to give better effect to the brilliancy of the fireworks. Many present upon noticing its absence thought the apparatus had failed to work, but the above explanation will correct this theory.

THE PRELUDE.

On Monday evening an informal visit was made by the members of the Nihon Society, who presented His Majesty with their congratulations and a highly ornamented calabash. After this, F. P. Hastings, Esq., Charge d' Affaires of the United States Legation, presented to His Majesty the felicitations of the President of the United States. His Excellency W. M. Gibson also proffered his congratulations, and presented His Majesty with a pair of highly polished elephant tusks, neatly mounted with silver, and suitably inscribed. The palace was highly and tastefully decorated with flowers and evergreens. A profusion of bunting between the arches and around the columns was also displayed. The grounds were in the finest order. The Royal Standard, the National ensign, and His Majesty's private flag were displayed from the different turrets of the palace.

SALUTES.

The day was ushered in by a Royal Salute at sunrise, another at noon, and again at sunset.

DELEGATIONS CALL.

The first delegation to call on His Majesty was the police force of the city, headed by Marshal Kaulukou and Deputy Marshal Dayton, at 6 a. m. The force was received by His Majesty at the front entrance, and the Marshal presented the congratulations of the police to His Majesty together with the present of a handsome book on a velvet cushion containing a Hawaiian Postal Savings' Bank order for $570 in gold. His Majesty responded as follows:
Hon. J. L. Kaulukou, Marshal of the Kingdom; Mr. Dayton, Deputy Marshal; Sheriffs, Deputy Sheriffs, and members of the police force, Aloha—Your gift to me this morning I accept with feelings of pleasure. I shall always cherish it in my heart as a memento, coming as it does on this day. From what I have heard and what I know of the Police Department of the Kingdom, I am assured that it is at the present time in a very efficient state, and that is what is wanted. Under your supervision, Mr. Marshal, and with the assistance of your subordinates, I hope you will promote peace throughout the country. I give you my aloha nui loa.

THE BAND.
