PLANTATION WANTS WAIPAHU CLEANED

Plan of Improvement Has Been Submitted to Board of Health.

Stating that the sanitary conditions existing at the village of Waipahu are a menace to the health of both those who live there, and in the camps of the Oahu Sugar Company, H. Hackfeld & Co., the agents for the plantation, yesterday addressed a letter to the board of health submitting the results of an investigation by the plantation physician, Doctor McGettigan, and his recommendations.

Orderly Report. Doctor McGettigan divided his report under four heads, dealing respectively with the sewerage conditions, removal of garbage, etc. He also submitted a plan for a sewer system for the village and plantation camps which has been prepared by the plantation engineer.

The board took the matter up briefly, but reserved a fuller discussion until after it has inspected the village under the guidance of Doctor McGettigan and Manager Bull of the plantation, which it will do tomorrow afternoon.

President Pratt mentioned a scheme whereby the board of health could assist the plantation in devising a private sewerage system which could be constructed with the greatest possible return and operated with the least possible expense.

This, however, is one of the things that will be taken up in detail later. The plans call for the sewer's outflow in a stream below the overflow of a dam in the neighborhood from which point the sewerage would run into the bay.

Other points taken up in Doctor McGettigan's report were the enforcement of the city ordinance in relation to buildings and the eradication of certain deck ponds and insanitary lands.

SUN FO HONORED IN YOKOHAMA

The Japan Advertiser of January 30 says: "On Sunday afternoon in Yokohama a reception was tendered to Sun Fo, the son of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, at the Chinese Guild Hall. All the prominent Chinese in Yokohama were present, showing by their attendance how popular the Revolutionary cause is among the Chinese resident in Yokohama."

The Princeton varsity hockey team defeated Harvard, 3 to 2. This makes the series between these two teams a tie as the crimson won the first game by the same score.

ANOTHER PLAGUE CASE ON HAWAII

Another Suspicious One Is Being Watched—Infected Rats Are Found.

A wireless message was received yesterday by the board of health from Chief Sanitary Inspector Bowman of the Island of Hawaii, announcing the appearance of one positive case of bubonic plague and one suspicious case.

Rats infected with plague were found the same day, following closely on the discovery of several infected mice in the same localities.

The wireless received yesterday reads: "Case alive, Honokaa village. Very ill. Neck glands. Suspicious case Honokaa Mill Camp. Question. Two positive (infected) rats, one Honokaa mill stable; other Paaulo, same place. Bowman."

The board of health took the matter up in detail yesterday afternoon at its weekly meeting, and virtually decided to enlist plantation aid, if possible, in an increased effort to exterminate the rodents in the infected district.

The words "neck glands" refer to the evident recurrence of a remarkable feature which distinguishes the cases in this district from plague as it is known in every other part of the world. That is the appearance of bubos on the neck instead of under the arms, a departure from the usual symptoms which Dr. George W. McCoy of the public health and marine hospital service commented upon on his return from an inspection trip through that district several months ago.

A great deal of data has been gathered by and for Doctor McCoy, and if he can possibly find the time he will make a particular study of the disease in the Hamakua district with a view of ascertaining the reason for the difference.

President Pratt advanced yesterday as his opinion the need of a more vigorous rat campaign in those districts where plague rats have been found, and a general discussion ensued as to the help that should be expected from the plantations.

There were no infected rats found at either Paauhaui or Paaulo until last January. Now the wireless reports an infected rat found at the last mentioned place while a letter previously received from Inspector Bowman reports an infected mouse caught at the Paauhaui Japanese Mill Camp and one killed in a house at Paaulo.

MALIHINIS WILL SOJOURN IN JAIL

Monsarrat Provides Two With One Year's Free Ticket—Police Court Notes.

Sentences handed out from the police court bench yesterday morning aggregated a good deal of free labor for the county and the two competitors for Judge Monsarrat's favor who drew the biggest prizes were B. Moore and J. Burns. Both of these gentlemen are malihinis in Hawaii, introducing themselves to the community in general in the police reports which credited them with the theft of $39 worth of clothes and groceries and from one Wagner. They pleaded guilty and the court awarded them one year each in the city jail. The complaint was sworn to by Sergeant of Detectives Kellett.

Lum Yung, the aged Chinaman who is facing a charge of manslaughter for the killing of Gunichi Oki, was committed to the circuit court, his preliminary examination being waived. There is little contest being made for him by his attorneys as the facts surrounding the case are pretty sure to win a "no bill" for him from the grand jury, as he was defending himself from the attacks of three men when the killing occurred.

It was in this case that the chief sprained his back, an injury from which he has not yet totally recovered. He was looking under the bed for the marked money when, as he expresses it, his back caved in and has kept him to his bed for several weeks thereafter.

Simeon Sakaroff received three months in jail for an assault on his wife, wherein he threw a knife at her, cutting her across the forehead. He claimed that she was his property and could do as she pleased with her.

John Piper, charged with an assault on Humane and Hack Officer George H. Holt appeared before the court yesterday morning but his case was continued. His bond has been set at $100. Jack No. 1, a South Sea Islander, was let off with a suspended sentence, P. W. Rider having asked for leniency as the man is ordinarily sober and hard-working. J. Santos, an aged Portuguese on his first appearance, was also given the same favor, while J. Connors, James Murray and T. Trainer had sentence deferred until February 15. They have all promised to ship out on the Erskine M. Phelps and if they are not gone by the fifteenth, a bench warrant will be issued for them (providing they do not appear) and they will be given their sentence.

NINETY THOUSAND TO FIGHT ONE FIRE

Assistant Chief Augustus Deering of the Honolulu fire department has been greatly interested in reading in the firemen's magazines the accounts of the great fire of the Equitable building in New York. He found this report of Chief Kenlon to be of especial interest, showing the cost of fighting the one fire and saving adjoining property:

Salaries, two days, 1000 men, $12,000
100 tons of coal, 800
Damage to apparatus, 45,000
Hose destroyed, 100 lengths, 5,000
Hose damaged (can be repaired), 2,500
Loss of tools, implements, etc., 500
Fixed charges, 26,000
$92,100

Chief Kenlon also estimates that between ten and fifteen million gallons of water were thrown into the building and on adjoining structures, and that the value of the apparatus called to the fire was $375,000.

H. GOODING FIELD BEGINS HIS TASK

Armed with last year's report of the city and county auditor and that compiled for Mayor Fern, H. Gooding Field, the expert statistician and personal representative of the chamber of commerce, has enough reading matter to start in upon his scientific investigation of the municipal departments.

He visited Auditor Bicknell yesterday morning, having first expressed to Mayor Fern a desire to start in with the auditing department. He stated that with the financial budgets obtainable from that office, he would be able to extend his work to the other departments as the figures suggested.

The auditor was in the midst of the preparation of his annual report and asked Mr. Field to defer his examination of that office until the report was ready which will be in about a week. He will then have all his figures compiled and will be able to go over the work with Mr. Field and be up-to-date. Mr. Field will digest the last year's reports of the mayor and auditor by which time new reports will be available.

DAVIES EMPLOYEES ARE UNDER ARREST

Paul Burns and M. Pimental, employees of Theo. H. Davies & Co., were arrested yesterday on warrants charging embezzlement, sworn to by George H. Angus, manager of the hardware department. Following the arrests there were rumors of much larger sums being involved than the amount named in the warrants, which was $50, but according to Angus, the investigations of the company's books show that there is no large shortage.

"The embezzlements only amount to two or three hundred dollars," said Angus last night. "The reports of large sums having been taken are untrue. The arrests were a result of investigations which showed shortages as set forth in the warrants."

Pimental was cashier in the hardware department and Burns was bill clerk. They are said to have played together in the game that was so quickly detected, of embezzling the firm's money. Both the young men have been with the firm for many years, Burns having been an employe since 1902, and they were thoroughly trusted. Burns is a baseball player and well known in local athletic circles.

The Palma Settlement exhibit, to be given on February 26, will be a large affair. Superintendent J. A. Rath is enlisting new exhibits. The College of Hawaii is preparing a milk exhibit. The board of health will have a sanitation and health exhibit, while Food Commissioner Blanchard will contribute a showing of pure and bad foods. There will be a series of entertainments. One evening the public schools will give a musical program. On another slides will be projected on a screen to show bad housing conditions.

HOMESTEAD CASE FINALLY SETTLED

A year after he bought the tract, Henderson moved on to it, from his home in a Hakalau plantation cottage. After two years, during which, it is claimed, his residence on the homestead was only an effort at technical occupancy, he moved back to the same cottage he had had for a home before.

When Henderson came to apply for his final title to the land, the territorial administration took the position that he was not a bona fide homesteader and refused to give him title. Proceedings were brought against the land commissioner to compel the issuance of a title, and Judge Parsons has now held that title must issue.

Turned Over to Plantation. Henderson's contract with Hakalau plantation provided that he might cultivate and sell the product to the plantation, and also contained an agreement that he would do so. It was further provided, however, that if he failed to cultivate, the plantation might "enter into possession" of the premises and do the necessary work, crediting the homesteader with cane produced. At the time the contract was made, the homesteader gave written notice to the plantation that he would not be able to cultivate all his lot, with a request that the plantation proceed to do so.

"The homesteader's sole interest, as he himself stated," says the Territory's brief on the subject, lay in getting his five dollars per acre per year. He also testified that he had not the remotest idea how much cane had been cut at any of all times from his homestead; that he did not know how much fertilizer, if any, had been used or how much it cost; that he did not know what the labor or any of it cost; that he did not know how much sugar was made from the cane or what it was worth; in short, that he did not know any of the details whatever connected with the cultivation beyond the fact that by this agreement he was to receive, from the plantation, this regular stipend, no matter what happened. In short, the plantation has somehow acquired full control over all the planted area, which includes all but the house-lot and the gulch sides."

Plantation the Real Buyer. According to testimony at the hearing Henderson did not have money to make the first payment on the land when he bid at the auction, and he testified that the plantation made the final payment. It was further testified that he made only one of the four payments, the plantation paying the other three.

Another fact which the government relied on, as testified to by one witness, was that at the time of the sale Manager Ross, of Hakalau plantation, was present and indicated to Henderson, by signs, when to bid.

The Law's Provisions. The land laws provide that a freeholder shall not "assign or sublet, conditionally or otherwise, his interest or any part thereof under the freehold agreement." The Organic Act, as amended in 1910, says: "No land for which any such certificate, lease or agreement shall hereafter be issued, or any part thereof or interest therein or control thereof shall, without the written consent of the Commissioner and the Governor, be contracted to or be in any way, directly or indirectly, by process of law or otherwise, conveyed, mortgaged, leased or otherwise transferred to, or held by, or for the benefit of any alien, or corporation."

Officials Surprised. Attorney General Lindsay and Superintendent Marston Campbell, who was land commissioner at the beginning of the Henderson case, appeared to be surprised at the decision when informed of it by The Advertiser yesterday. Lindsay said that the ruling was a highly important one, and he was anxious to read it. It may have a far-reaching effect on future land homesteading plans of the government. Judge Parsons, in a lengthy decision, has apparently gone into details as to what constitutes a "substantial" compliance with the law, and if his views are sustained they will form the rule for such cases all over the Territory.

"I do not recall the special details of the Henderson case," said Campbell. "I am confident that there were no compliance with the law in some of these cases. I know one plantation blacksmith whose homestead was fifteen miles away from where he worked every day, and I suppose he tried to convince the court that he rode thirty miles a day to and from his work."

O. Mizima of Yokohama Specie Bank arrived on the Shinyo yesterday and will make a considerable stay here before continuing to the mainland to look into banking conditions in the large financial centers.
