What is an "alterative"? A medicine that alters or changes unhealthy action to healthy action. Ayer's Sarsaparilla does all this without stimulation. BRITISH AMBASSADOR MAY VISIT HONOLULU IN THE NEAR FUTURE

It is possible that Hon. James Bryce, British ambassador to the United States, with Mrs. Bryce will make a visit to Honolulu in the near future. At the local British consulate, Consul Harrington has not heard of their coming as yet, but this news may be re-

News comes from Washington that the distinguished diplomat and his wife are to make an Australian trip in the very near future and that he will try to arrange his plans so as to stay several days in San Francisco to look over preparations for the Panpacific expo-

If the Bryces leave before the inauguration of the new Oceanic steamship service between San Francisco and Australia, they would not be able to visit Honolulu in sailing from the California port.

From the tenor of the Washington dispatch it appears that they will sail from San Francisco, and not from Van-couver on the Canadian-Australian line.

FEDERAL JURORS SORE AT PRESENT SYSTEM

(From Thursday's Advertiser.) Honolulu has as temporary residents some very "sore" citizens, who have been summoned here from other islands. to spend their time either doing nothing while waiting to be summoned as jurors in a federal case, or serving in Major, C. Judging by the comments made by some of these jurors, the jury system would not last long, as it is conducted under the federal law, if they had a shape to yet a put chance to vote on it. "We sat in a criminal case a week ago," said one juror, "in which days were spent on the proposition of where the alleged crime was committed. The jurors, of course, were normally listerested in the proposition of whether the defendant was guilty or not. But they had to listen to lengthy testimony, and to study maps, to ascertain first where the crime might have been committed. It arrowars that under the law a differ. PASSENGERS.

The charge that her husband is "aegotiating to commit bigamy," is set forth in a libel for divorce filed yesterday by Mrs. Mary Aki Lee Wing. She says that he is about to marry another woman in China, and sets forth this fact, in addition to a charge of desertion, as a reason why she should be freed from the bonds of matrimony. Mrs. Wing's petition declares that she married Wing in Honolulu in 1909. Since that he has deserted her, and to cap the climax, she says, he is "negotiating according to Chinose custom for a second marriage with a certain Per T. K. K. S. S. DISCOVER MILLIONS IN SOIL

What It Will Do.

In putting the sand in its present form upon the soil of Hawaii," said Doctor Wilcox, yesterday "the agri-culturist would be adding no element which would be injurious to the fertility of his land for without other ingredients it will raise the ordinary crops. It will loosen up the heavy soils and let in air where it is needed, and then it contains just about the right proportion of the potash which we have been importing and mixing srifficially with the other elements of our lands. We do not understand why the lava yields so little, and the cinder so much otash and we were disappointed and that the potash in the cinder was not directly soluble so that it could be extracted and used in its pure form for the manufacture of fertilizers."

The chemists of the experiment sta-tion have been working with lava cin-der for some weeks and have withheld judgment until they were certain of their ground for, common as potash may seem, it is rare enough in avail-able forms and its discovery in Hawaii in available form is as sensational a discovery in the eyes of the sugar plan-ters, pineapple growers, farmers and others who collect their wealth from the lands as the finding of gold in the lava hills.

DEATH TO "FAKE"

The first step taken by the Hawaiian Dredging Company to prepare for excavating the additional 200 feet of drydock basin just authorized by congress under an appropriation of more than six hundred thousand dollars, will be the dismantling of the dredge Gaylord, and using the dredging machinery on the job.

The Gaylord was built especially to do work on the bar at the entrance to Pearl Harbor Channel, but since the completion of that big contract the Hawaiian Dredging Company found itself with dredging machines. On its hands which would be useless. When the news came that congress wanted a thousand-foot drydock instead of one $800 feet long, the company found itself with dredging machines. The suprame court disagrees with Judge Parsona in very emphatic language. The syliabus says:

The occupying of a house on a certain piece of land, for the length of time required to obtain the proper meaning of the term, but for the purpose merely or making a showing to obtain a patent to the land and with the intention of going to live elsewhere immediately upon the expiration of that time, does not constitute a compliance with the requirements, the suprame gour dence and 'home.' Even stronger are the expressions of the court with regard to the matter of the contract with Hakalau plantation, and the duty of those who try to be homesteaders to do their own farming. History of Case.

The Henderson case has been note waters it may be used to tow the dredger Governor from Honolulu to Kahului, where it will be put to work on the Hawaiian Dredging Company's contract with the federal government to dredge out the harbor. Points Raised.

The four points raised against th homesteader were, first that he had no planted the number of trees called fo banded the land laws; second, that had not made the land his real home third, that he had violated the law by practically assigning his homestend the plantation, and fourth, that he had not cultivated the land as require by law. On the comparatively unit by law. On the comparatively unimportant tree planting question the court holds that the homesteader's action was all right, but on all the other it holds against him. In discussin these points, laying down rules to be followed for all future homesteading the court says:

year, the fact that the appellee did not begin to live there until the last possible day and ceased to do so on the carliest possible day, taken in connection with what will hereafter appear with reference to the disposition he made of the land lends a color to the character of his residence on the land quite disadvantageous to his claim that he made the place his home. It all tends to show that he took no interest in the place and that it was not regarded by him as a fixed place of abode with the present intention there to remain.' It indicates, on the contrary, an intention to make a technical compliance with what seems to have been pliance with what seems to have been a distasteful requirement of his agreement, and shows a kind of residence which in the last analysis, was merely which in the last analysis, was merely colorable and entirely lacking in the essential element of good faith. The occupying of a house on a certain piece of land for the length of time required to obtain title, without making it a home within the proper meaning of the term during that period, but for the purpose merely of making a showing to obtain a patent to the land, and with the intention of going to live elsewhere immediately upon the expiration of that time, does not constitute a compliance with a requirement to maintain a home on the premises, for the intention and good faith inseparably involved in the idea of the maintenance of a home are not present.

It must be done by hum or by his servants or agents for him. The crops grown must be his crops and not those of another.

"It has been urged upon us that it would be a great hardship upon the appellee should it be held that he is not entitled to receive a patent to the land. But the appellee had the law before him. If he did not understand it he should have sought advice. If he has acted pursuant to popular impression that title to public laad may be acquired by law to be performed he is the victim of an erroneous idea. In any event we have only to expound the law as we find it—
