

What About That Dandruff?

There is just this much about it: Dandruff is a germ disease, is most untidy, annoying, and leads to baldness. When chronic, it is very stubborn, but surely yields to thorough and energetic treatment.

PRESIDENT-ELECT PUBLICITY MAN

Will Talk Bight Out, But Not To Varied Congresses—Change Coming.

By Ernest G. Walker.

(Mail Special to The Advertiser.)

WASHINGTON, December 19.—(Congress and Presidents and cabinet members and all that are not giving Washington a fraction of concern at the present moment as compared with one certain man. Every-time President-to-be Woodrow Wilson speaks out a large population in Washington (those who for reasons of politics or for other reasons reside here most of the year around) take particular and special notice.

Men change when they get into the White House, to be sure, but it is dawdling upon people that the President-to-be is a man of determination, who knows his own mind. He is talking freely about numerous details of administration at Washington, with which he can not be familiar at first hand, but regarding which, none the less, he has well defined opinions.

When the President-elect issued his deti to any financier who attempted to start things (especially a panic) thrills of elation and of dejection permeated respectively the radicals and the conservatives at Washington. But right on the heels of that came a statement from Princeton that the new President would not deliver speeches and addresses to all kinds of banquets and associations which assemble in the Capitol by the Potomac, but would talk chiefly when he had something of moment to say.

Now half the enjoyment in life to thousands upon thousands of people in the United States is in a trip they take down to Washington once a year to attend some "Congress" or association and to feast one evening at a laden banquet board, where the President comes and adds dignity and gaiety to the performance.

Perhaps it is asking a little too much of a President to attend on such functions. There is no particular reason why the highest official in the land should be dragged before all sorts of gatherings, simply because they are within earshot of the Capitol. Of course the same thing is done in other cities, except that they do not "catch" the President quite so easily outside of the District of Columbia. He has to be invited at a time when he can make the journey, and it is not so easy to arrange all the details, even if the President is willing to go.

SUPERVISORS-ELECT CAUCUS UNCERTAINLY

On just whom the "political can" will be tied among the Republican county officeholders was not fully decided last night at a session of the supervisors-elect, but it was acknowledged that the mayor is wavering and uncertain as to what he will do with the fire department, and Chief Thurston's fate still hangs in the balance.

The position of building and plumbing inspector was fully discussed, as it was also several evenings ago, when a favor of giving the job to a Democrat, vote of four to three was made in Alameda, the defeated Democrat candidate in the last campaign for the house of representatives, being first in line.

While the supervisors-elect may not immediately replace Building Inspector Michletstein, he may be allowed to remain for sometime until the Democrats can find a man competent enough to fill the position.

There was considerable discussion concerning the budget and the question now is how much will be allowed the road department per month. The supervisors-elect are almost all in favor of a definite allowance per month for the building of permanent streets and roads in the city.

It was stated by a Democrat who claims to be close to the inner councils that the supervisors-elect will not appoint any Republican to office. He stated that this is an ultimatum which the supervisors are determined to make effective.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Carter are visiting in Honolulu. Mr. Carter is superintendent of Armour and Company of Seattle.

Every President who takes up his big tasks for the first time has soon to determine what his methods of working shall be. He is the boss of a mighty big plant. He has nine big lieutenants in the members of his cabinet with plenty of other officials, stationed at various places, upon whom he can call for almost any amount or kind of work he chooses. If he trusts all these officials and has faith in their capacities for performance, he may transfer to their shoulders numerous official burdens. Or he may choose to pile high the load upon his own shoulders and struggle along under it.

Comparatively speaking, neither Roosevelt nor Taft, as Presidents, were hard workers. They were willing that others should take some of the worry and do much of the patient application to duty. They could not, of course, and did not, shirk the responsibility, but when it came to a task of investigating and concluding, Smith, or Jones, or Thompson, known to be a tried and faithful official, was summoned and told "to go to it." After days, or weeks, or months, he brought a bulky report, nicely typewritten, perhaps also briefed, and it was put upon the President's table. If men had to be sent for to give testimony or advice, Smith, or Jones, or Thompson, whatever his name might be, was empowered to summon them and extract whatever information they had to impart.

Some Presidents have chosen to conduct proceedings in person, although after all is said, there is no particular reason why they should. It is largely a detail work and the President, as executive of the establishment, should not be tied down to such routine. Mr. Wilson declares that his office door will be open to anyone who has legitimate business, and if he carries out that program he must, of necessity, do much of the investigating and inquiring which constitutes so large a portion of the work of administration at Washington.

The incoming President is a great publicity man and evidently there are to be mighty few whispered conferences in the corner room where he has his office. The White House stenographers will be kept mighty busy, for there is a rule, which presumably Mr. Wilson will follow, that all important conversations with visitors shall be taken down. Then, if there comes up some notable question in that connection later, it is possible to tell just what the President said and what he did not say.

Another shock to congressional Washington will be the new President's decision not to do much handshaking with tourists and others. He does not propose to be on view to the curiosity seekers. This, however, will be a great disappointment to many worthy people, who come down to Washington only once in a great while and (some of them) only once in their lives and like to improve the opportunity to see their President, if only to shake hands and hear from him the words "How do you do?"

It has become axiomatic that Presidents make a great number of friends in this way and that it is politically worth while. Every President has wearied physically of this handshaking task. It makes considerable inroads upon his time and endurance and saps his nervous vitality. But tens of thousands of people are pleased annually by his opportunity to meet the President. Senators and representatives have been accustomed to go to the White House to intercede for their visitors.

Perhaps Mr. Wilson will have to surrender after a while, Senators and representatives, it should be remembered, have the prerogative of calling upon the President and taking a friend along with them. They will certainly persist in doing that, whatever the rules may be against general receptions. And when spring is at hand and the high school students are coming to Washington in great droves, the occupant of the White House will be a determined man indeed if he can withstand the appeals to allow the East room to be filled up with these visitors and to come around and shake their hands as they are presented to him. Being a lifelong schoolmaster himself, and always an accessible man as well as an affable one, it will be surprising indeed if he does not capitulate.

But of all the refreshing innovations of the new President proposes, the one that he intends to let the newspaper correspondents quote him directly is the most radical. It will change the status in Washington most positively. Cabinet officials and others must follow suit. Dispatches starting off "It is said," or "An eminent administration authority declares," and all that form or writing will disappear.

WILL BE TICKLED TO SEE GOVERNOR AGAIN

Acting Governor Keeping on the Jump to Catch Up With Business.

Ernest A. Mott-Smith, secretary of the Territory, and, during the absence of Governor Walter F. Frear, acting chief executive of the Islands, looks anxiously forward to the return of his chief.

"There has not been a day since the absence of the Governor that we have been entirely caught up with the work," said the acting-Governor yesterday. He has succeeded, however, not only in doing the work of his own office, but keeping up with all the details of the chief executive's office as well.

"Reports are now beginning to come in," he continued. "Budgets are being prepared and examined preparatory to the convening of the legislature and it will be quite a relief when the Governor finally returns."

The United States revenue cutter Thetis, conveying Governor Frear and former Attorney General Lindsay, is now speeding as fast as its canvas and auxiliary power can bring it from the Bird Islands. It was planned to make brief stops at several of the smaller islands en route home and a day or more may be required for this work. Acting-Governor Mott-Smith believes the party will arrive here not later than January 7.

DELEGATE CONTINUES ANTI-FREAR CRUSADE

Confirmation of the reappointment of Governor Frear is now said to be opposed directly by Delegate Kalaniano'ole. The latter has been at Washington for some time. Information believed to be reliable was received from the mainland yesterday to the effect that the principal opposition to the appointment is coming from Hawaii's Delegate.

The appointment is now in the senate committee on Territories. This committee is composed of twelve members, five of whom are Democrats. In view of the fact that the charges preferred by Delegate Kalaniano'ole were not substantiated by the investigation made by Secretary of the Interior Fisher, it was looked upon by the friends of Governor Frear as an indication that any protest made by the Delegate would not be given any heed by the senate committee.

It is believed, now, however, that the appointment will never come out of the committee.

COMMERCIAL BRISK BUYING MARKS NEW YEAR'S OPENING Wall Street Perks Up; Prices Advance and Market Closes Firm.

(By Federal Wireless Telegraph.) NEW YORK, January 2.—(Special to The Advertiser)—Wall Street began the New Year cheerfully today and there was a varied demand for stocks.

Business in the first hour amounted to 110,000 shares, which approximate a total transaction of some recent days. Sentiment was influenced by the advances of Americans in the London market and the confident assertion of trade authorities as to immediate prospects. After prices had risen 1/2 to 2 1/2 points, bear selling of Southern Pacific stopped the advance. The market yielded but little and became dull.

Money rates continued moderately fine, call loans opening at six per cent. Bonds were steady. Notable strength developed in various quarters in the latter part of the day. Active issues, including Steel, Reading, Union Pacific and Coppers all went higher; in addition to these there was a large assortment of inactive shares that advanced some.

The market closed firm. Canadian Pacific improved nearly 7 points, and there were gains of one to two points quite generally among the representative stocks.

TORNADO INSURANCE FOR GREAT CRANE

Local Agency Lands Fine Policy to Protect Contractors From Storm.

For the first time in the history of the insurance business in this Territory a tornado policy has been issued here. It was closed yesterday by the von Hamm-Young Company through A. W. Brown, manager of its insurance department, for the Hartford Insurance Company in behalf of the Wellman-Seaver-Morgan Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, contractors who are completing in this harbor the great $350,000 floating crane for the navy department, to be used in Pearl Harbor.

The amount of the policy which insures the crane against damage or loss from any wandering tornado which may strike these Islands is $100,000, and the premium is reported to be a heavy one. The policy is such that in case of damage to the crane the contractors will be indemnified for any loss due to a tornado. The policy arrived from the mainland yesterday.

Several companies are understood to have been seeking this policy and insurance circles here were much interested in the outcome of the efforts to make this new record.

DUN'S REVIEW OF THE TRADE FROM HAWAII

San Francisco is making a remarkable record in its export trade by the deep-water routes, says Dun's Review, on December 14. The value of this trade for October was $11,282,900, which is considerably more than for any previous month during the year, and only once before was the total of $11,000,000 reported, and that was in the previous year. The pace set in October was fully maintained in November, when the exports showed a value of $11,500,000. Included in this total is a value of $1,558,700 for merchandise and produce shipped to domestic Atlantic ports through Mexico and the Panama Canal Zone, and $1,500,000 to the Hawaiian Islands.

Deliveries of Hawaiian sugar at San Francisco in November were 2,943,308 lbs., the smallest total for any month in many years. The grinding season closed earlier than usual, and the season-

By vote, Dec. 30, 1912, the directors reduced the Haiku regular monthly dividend to one-half of one per cent.

By vote, Dec. 30, 1912, the directors reduced the Paia regular monthly dividend to one-half of one per cent.

By vote, Dec. 30, 1912, the directors rescinded the resolution declaring an extra dividend of three-quarters of one per cent Dec. 31, for Kahuku.

Acting of the crop was more prompt. The first of the new crop for 1913 arrived at Honolulu from Oahu on November 9th, and deliveries of the same are now due at this port. Receipts of Hawaiian sugar at San Francisco for the first eleven months of 1912 were 519,640,200 lbs., to which should be added 12,920,900 lbs. from the same crop which came to hand in December, 1911. This is the largest quantity of that grade ever landed at this port in any one year. The Sugar Factors Company reports the last Hawaiian sugar crop at 570,800 tons and estimates the crop for 1913 at 549,400 tons.

VERY LITTLE TRADING.

Oahu was practically the only stock in evidence yesterday, either between boards or at the session of the exchange. It sold all through the day at 23.90 flat, the bottom mark so far. Between boards 100 shares changed hands, while at the session forty shares went in three lots. The other stocks sold were all between boards. Olan going 4.00 flat, and thirty of Onomea at 32.00.
