Purser Wheeler Denies Three Times That He Was In Wrecked Vessel

Three persons who were aboard the Chiyo when she was wrecked at Hongkong March 31 were in the T. K. K. steamer Kaimosi yesterday morning and sailed for San Francisco last evening.

They were J. B. Wheeler, acting purser of the Chiyo and now purser of the Persia, Mrs. Nettie Keating, stewardess of the Chiyo, and B. A. Stanton, flight clerk of the Chiyo.

Mr. Wheeler maintained an attitude that was curious, at least. He denied once that he was in the Chiyo when she was wrecked, affirming that he left her at Yokohama; he denied it twice; he denied it three. Yet he was in her, he reasons is known or even can be conjectured for his denials, although he said to an acquaintance that he could say nothing until he had seen General Manager Avery at San Francisco.

He also affirmed that persons from the Chiyo were in the Persia when she was wrecked, but that there were two ladies himself: Mr. Stanton and Mrs. Keating.

Mr. Keating was the last woman to leave the wrecked steamer, going into a lifeboat and thence into a British destroyer. She and her stewardess were praised highly for their work among the women. Mr. Stanton remained aboard the Chiyo with the rest of the crew until Saturday night, April 1, the vessel having struck at four-twenty o'clock the morning of March 31. Saturday evening calm seas were becoming increasingly rough, and the men took to the rocks. Dr. E. C. Honston, Chiyo's surgeon, clung to a rock ledge for eight hours, a few feet above the sea.

When the men remained for some time, Chinese slipped into the water and were lost, it was stated.

Former reports were affirmed that there was no confusion at the wreck and that everything went extremely smooth.

Ken Clark Is Passenger
A passenger in the Persia was Ken Clark, former purser of the Manchu and Chiyo, which he left to go to the Chiyo, but she was wrecked while he was on his way to Japan.

The first day's hearing at Hongkong had been concluded when the Persia departed from Yokohama, it was said, but no news as to what was brought out was known. Reports agreed that First Officer Sakai was on the bridge when the liner struck, but one man said that Captain Bent had been on the bridge for some minutes when the disaster came.

Capt. Y. Maki of the Persia said that the T. K. K. had applied to the department of communications for permission to place the Anyo Maru on the Chiyo's run, as already published here, but that he did not know what would be done. If the Anyo is shifted it will be when she returns to Japan from South America, whether she is bound now.

Professed Secrecy Maintained
Professed secrecy was being maintained as to the loss. The Japanese officers of the Chiyo in particular would say nothing. In the Anyo Maru, Dr. Houten and Steward Al Evans, the Persia reported. Captain Bent is not expected immediately, if he comes this way at all.

The Persia brought booklets of views of the wreck, many of which had been published here. Some of the passengers on the Chiyo, all of which were saved, was 4,700,000.

What Tokio Arah Says
The Advertiser published Saturday translation of a report in the Osaka Mainichi on the wreck. One of the Tokyo Arah says:

The chief officer who was in actual control of the ship when the accident occurred had strict orders from the captain to wake him at five in the morning, meanwhile keeping watch to the course. Five o'clock would have been about the time the vessel steered toward the west, with the main light-house on its starboard.

AVIATORS RELATE THEIR EXPERIENCES

Air Scouts With Army in Mexico Find Their Engines Not Powerful Enough

COLUMBUS, New Mexico.—Some of the unprecedented difficulties of air scouting under actual war conditions were pointed out by Lieut. T. S. Bowen, when he was brought to the military base because of injuries suffered at Casma Grandes.

Reduction of the air at high altitudes is the big obstacle met by the air scouts chasing Villa and his bandit hordes. The airmen fly at about 5,000 feet. In the Casma Grandes the altitude is that. In flight the scouts are more than 10,000 feet above sea level. At this great height breathing becomes difficult and bleeding at the ears and nose is frequent.

Lieut. Bowen is one of the first United States army men to fly under actual war conditions. He comes from Frankfort, Ky. His injuries were suffered when the machine side slipped at 35 feet. His nose was broken, and his eye injured. From his cot in the hospital Lieut. Bowen told his story: "Soon Forced To Land

"It was evening when I crossed the border," he said. "I started climbing at once. At 5,000 feet the roar of the engine almost deafened me. The air was so light the propellers could get to hold. I was to have gone to Casma Grandes, but was forced to land at La Anconson.

"I settled and circled cautiously. The landing was ticklish because it was so dark. I made the flight in about an hour.

"Next morning I started again. The plane wouldn't speed up. I could see Lake Guzman far below and about 20 miles away.

"The air was bitter cold, although the sun was glaring. Below it was hot. It was when I started from Casma Grandes that I fell. The plane side-slipped. I wasn't high enough to recover the balance.

"Lieut. Bowen offered criticism of the planes in use by the aero corps. He said they were not powerful enough for military purposes.

Like a page torn from a book of romance were the adventures of Lieut. Robert H. Willis, as related by Bowen. Willis was lost several days after he landed in the desert.

"I was Off His Landing Gear
"Willis was forced to land on a sand duff and tore off the landing gear. He hid in the brush all day. That night he wandered through the desert. He had three days' rations and a canteen of water.

"Approaching the night he came upon a 'railroad.' He saw a burning tie and proceeded to examine his map. Three armed Mexicans came running and shouted to him. Willis jumped down the embankment and hid in a brush. All night he stayed, shivering and suffering from the cold. All next day he hid, suffering from the heat of the blazing sun.

"The sun shined down he started again and at two a. m., came upon a camp of our boys."

Lieut. Bowen added that the airmen were scouting sixty-five miles ahead of the cavalry column.

Mr. Hutton was a good officer, a splendid clerk, and his work in the department is sincerely missed," said Deputy Sheriff Julius Aesch yesterday. "It is certainly going to take a good man to fill his place."

FRIEND OF YOUNG BOYS
RECEIVES APPOINTMENT
AS PROBATION OFFICER

W. H. Hutton, formerly clerk to the captain of detectives and active in the Honolulu Boy Scouts, being scoutmaster of Troop 4, was appointed probation officer of the juvenile court to succeed John C. Anderson, at noon yesterday by Judge W. L. Whitney.

Out of a list of thirty applicants Mr. Hutton's name was given first consideration, owing to his long observations of and close association with boys.

"The honor system is my motto," said Probation Officer Hutton, speaking of his appointment. "In San Francisco I was called 'Dad' by the boys, and some of those who were boys then, and under my supervision, are now in Honolulu and holding excellent positions. Every Boy Has Good Point

"No matter how unruly or tough a boy may be, there is always a good point in him that can be located, and in using kindness and persistent persuasion, lasting results will always be obtained, which means a better boy, and a better future citizen. The home life of the boy should also be investigated thoroughly, and the parents, some of whom, through ignorance, neglect their children, should be instructed in the proper care of their child."

Mr. Hutton came to Honolulu in 1912, from San Francisco, resigning the position of superintendent of the boys' department of the South Park Club. His association with boys dates back as far as 1892, when he was appointed secretary of the boys' department at the Oakland Y. M. C. A., which position he held for five years, and in connection with his Y. M. C. A. work he was an active participant in the People's Place institutional church work.

Returns To Favorite Work
He then resigned from active work for a period, but the "good turn" boys again called him, and as instructor of the Columbia Park Boys' Club, he organized one of the best boys' baseball teams in San Francisco. Some of the members of the Olympic baseball team which visited Honolulu recently were proteges of Hutton.

An experimental boys' playground was next installed in San Francisco, with Mr. Hutton at its head, and after proving itself successful, money was appropriated by W. R. Hearst, and the first public playground for the south of Market district was organized with Hutton as superintendent.

Shortly before coming to Honolulu he held a position similar to his new appointment, that of probation officer of the juvenile court in San Francisco. Mr. Hutton is also a contributor to the Boys' Life, and other juvenile magazines.

Happy To Get Position
"I am actually happy to be back with the boys again," said Mr. Hutton, "and my only regret is leaving the detective squad, especially Captain of Detectives McDuffie, as my relations with him have been most pleasant."

The vacancy created in the detective department by the resignation of W. H. Hutton, the newly appointed probation officer, has caused six applications to be mailed to the office of the deputy sheriff up to yesterday afternoon.

"Mr. Hutton was a good officer, a splendid clerk, and his work in the department is sincerely missed," said Deputy Sheriff Julius Aesch yesterday. "It is certainly going to take a good man to fill his place."

England always began the legal year on March 25 until the change of style in 1752, the custom having prevailed from that early period when throughout the western world the year's present third month was its first.
