Editor Centerville Republican: In only one campaign did I ever note as much lethargy and indifference indulged in by the Republicans as in this, and we were defeated that time. It was the second time Cleveland was elected. Harrison's administration had been a success. Wages were good, old men said they never saw the time that a day's wages would buy as much of the necessities of life. Farm products were a good price and people thought surely, with the prosperous times we then had the party could not be defeated. The Democrats cried robber tariff. The laboring men are slaves. One of our citizens loudly proclaimed, you are worse slaves than the negroes of the south ever were. The Republicans like the ten virgins slumbered and slept, and when we awoke the morning after election we learned that Mr. Cleveland and a Democratic congress was elected. Oats were quick sale that fall at thirty cents.

The next spring they were twenty cents. I saw sheep sell that fall at Wm Gibson's sale for $8 per head. The next spring a man just south of town sold the same grade of sheep the day Cleveland was inaugurated for $4 per head, and all farm products depreciated in same proportion. Factories closed, prices declined until Mr. Cleveland called congress in extra session to find some way to put a stop to the stagnation in business. He admitted that the money was yet in the country, and that it was a lack of confidence. The lack of confidence was caused by the same cry that we hear now, robber tariff. They could not stop the depression, and the next thing we saw was eleven cent wool, five to eleven cent oats, fifteen cent corn, $2.75 hogs, hands working for seventy-five cents per day when they could get it, armies of men marching through the country hunting work, and in the language of Mr. Cleveland, great hardships and privation to the laboring classes.

Now Mr. Editor, the only way to prevent another such condition of things is for the Republican party to wake up, puncture Mr. Bryan's wind bag, call the farmers together and show them the danger. If such a calamity is to be averted it must be done by the farmers. The labor organizations in the cities, allured as they were before by vague promises are joining the ranks of the enemy. The farmers alone can save the country from the threatened calamity.
