KELLOGG'S QUIZ OF ROCKEFELLER

Started Out With Interrogations About the Method of Stock Distribution and Owner of Shares.

ARCHBOLD TO BE CALLED

Rockefeller Could Not Remember Contract With Another Company in Which Profits Were to be Cut up.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Rockefeller was called to the stand this morning at the resumption of the Standard hearing. Kellogg questioned the witness concerning the methods of stock distribution. It is expected Rockefeller's testimony will be completed today. Archbold will be the next called when Rockefeller's statements and the previous statements of Archbold will be used as a base by Kellogg for continuing the witness.

Rockefeller admitted he did not own all of the 442,797 shares of the Standard credited to him on the records of the corporation in 1899. He couldn't remember how much he did own, he said. Kellogg shifted suddenly to the policy of the Standard in regulating the competitors production. He said he knew Schofield, Schurmer & Tagle, operators of the refinery. Replying to a question he said he could remember no contract with them made in 1876 in which they agreed not to handle more than 80,000 barrels of crude oil yearly, 42,000 each six months, and that in return they were guaranteed an increase of $75,000 yearly and the Standard was to receive the excess profits of the Cleveland plant up to $60,000, and additional profits to be divided between Schofield, Schurmer & Tagle and the Standard.

He said such a contract may have been made but could not recall. Kellogg called the attention of the witness to the injunction suit asking that Schofield comply with the conditions of the contract.

"I think we had litigation," said the witness, but can't recall the conditions of the contract he said if such an affidavit was made I, as president of the Standard, would have been the person to sign it, then."

Then the witness took refuge behind his falling memory and said he did not recall similar restrictive contracts with the Pioneer Oil company operating in the Cleveland refinery. He did not recall the other affidavits in regard to the Schofield contract.

Kellogg questioned Rockefeller about the connection of Standard officials with the railroads carrying the Standard products. The witness said he could not speak only for himself, but admitted he was a stock and bond holder and a director in a number of roads.

"Do you own stock in the Wisconsin Central?" was asked.

"Don't own stock but may own some bonds," he replied.

He said he owned a few Pennsylvania bonds.

Question: "Could you name the railroads in which you are interested?"

Answer: "I am quite certain I could but presume those gentlemen from the stock exchange back there (pointing back of the court room) would think me foolish if I did so. I have no personal objection to naming them, but should prefer not to publicly announce my investments unless ordered to do so, in which case I should."

Kellogg pressed the point and Rockefeller said: "I have investments of stock in the Delaware & Lackawanna, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Western Maryland, Missouri Pacific, Texas Pacific, Erie first preferred, Colorado & Southern, and a railroad in Mexico, the name of which I can't recall off hand."

Question: Is it true are you a heavy owner of stocks and bonds in the leading railroad's country?"

Answer: "Yes, I should say so."

"I have acquired a bonded indebtedness in a number of railroads in conjunction with other operators who are in the habit of borrowing money on good security and am interested in stocks and railroads to a lesser extent. These stocks and bonds of railroad companies were purchased purely for the purpose of investment and represent a personal choice," Rockefeller added.

He declared in response to a question that other men were more heavily interested in railroad than he. Asked to name them, he said he could not.

"There must be a great many," he said.

"There has been a number of good propositions in stocks and bonds that I had not been privileged to invest in."

A Kellogg laugh followed. Before taking up the railroad phase Kellogg asked if the Standard kept secret its control over the refineries in New York, Philadelphia and Ohio. Rockefeller said such a case was unlikely. His memory was untrustworthy when asked what relation the General Industrial and Syndicate company and the Trading and Investment company, both London which Kellogg said appeared to be interested in the oil business, America. After the railroad question hearing adjourned until the afternoon, Kellogg intimated he might ask a few other questions.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the house, placed himself on record Monday in favor of the revision of the tariff. In accordance with the promise of the republican party platform, and declared that, so far as his vote was concerned, he would see to it that the announced policy of revision will be written in the national laws as soon as possible.

The words of the speaker came at the conclusion of a luncheon given to six rear admirals of the United States navy, by Alexander H. Revell, of Chicago, in the Union League club, at which the need of more battleships and increased efficiency of the fighting forces of the republic were the principal themes of discussion. Speaker Cannon declared himself in favor of an efficient navy and army for the good of the republic. On the tariff question his words were:

Cannon on the Tariff.

"Any change in the revenue laws of the country of necessity is followed by a depression of business. Three years ago I followed the lead of Theodore Roosevelt, who declared there should be no revision of the revenue laws, which means the tariff, until after the next general election. His policy was not to change the existing conditions. The republican platform on which the national contest has been won says to revise the revenue laws. That revision should be due with regard to protection, and a penalty against discriminatory nations.

Stands for Promptness.

"As a member of the next house, a co-ordinate branch of the government equal to the executive and judiciary and I will be there if I live, I am going to go, as far as my vote is concerned, to see to it that the policy of the republican party on this question is written in the national laws as promptly as possible. The laws should be written promptly so that business can adjust itself to changed conditions, for a change will of necessity bring a disturbance."

FIFTY DEATHS IN ARKANSAS STORM

Little Rock, Fort Smith and Other Cities in the Path of a Death Dealing Property Destroying Tornado.

WIDE PATH OF STORM

One Storm Was Passing North and Another South—Two Miles and a Half Swept by the terrific Wind.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Nov. 24.—It is estimated last night that in the storm in northeast Arkansas twenty-five people were killed, fifty injured and a number missing.

The force of the storm was the greatest in the vicinity of Ozark, Kansas, the small town of Cravens, four miles west, being completely wiped out, and four people killed, three fatally injured, and eight missing.

Unconfirmed report from Russellville says fifteen were killed there.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 24.—A dispatch from Russellville, Arkansas, says that between 12 and 20 persons were killed in a tornado which swept Piney, ten miles west of that place Monday and that about 30 other persons were injured. Only vague and indefinite reports have been received. At Berryville three persons were injured.

Storm at Other Points.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 24.—Reports from the storm stricken district at a late hour, are still meagre. It is known, however, that Piney, London, Wallerville, Jethro, Lodi, Lewisville, Paterson and Berryville were struck, and outlying portions of Mulberry, either completely wrecking or laying waste the larger part of these places and destroying the crops throughout the intermediate country.

There were two tornadoes, one north and the other south bound. The death list now placed at at least 20 and property loss hundreds of thousands dollars.

Counties through which the tornado passed are La Fayette, Columbia, Miller, Pike, Howard, Hempstead, Montgomery, Yell, Pope, Johnson, Franklin, and Carroll.

Paths ranging in width two miles to half a mile were swept clean through towns, forests and open country. Some reports stated that nothing had been left in many districts, that homes, timber, buildings, fences and everything had been uprooted and blown to bits.

Additional reports today from the tornado swept section of Arkansas indicate greater damage than the first reports stated. The death list will probably amount to fifty and the injured to 100. The tornadoes have apparently wrought devastation, they coming from the opposite ends of the state, and meeting near Ozark. The worst damage is in that vicinity. A strip eighty miles in length and from two to four miles in width was wrecked. The property loss is expected to reach one million. It is impossible to estimate. The western part of the state suffered the most.
