

UNVEILING OF SHERIDAN STATUE

Ceremonies Held at Washington and Participated in by All Marines and Soldiers Stationed Near the City.

ON DID UNVEILING

President Roosevelt Spoke and Eulogized the General For His Heroism—General Porter Also Spoke.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Lieutenant P. H. Sheridan this afternoon unveiled the statue of his father, General Sheridan. Wright presided. Roosevelt was present and spoke.

General Horace Porter spoke. All the marines and soldiers stationed near Washington took part. The president's address was as follows:

It is eminently fitting that the nation's illustrious men, the men who have been the eyes of our people, should be fittingly commemorated here at the National Capital.

I am glad indeed to take part in the unveiling of this statue to General Sheridan. His name will always stand high on the list of American heroes.

Not only was he a great general, but he showed his greatness in that touch of originality which we call genius.

Indeed this quality of brilliance has been in one sense a disadvantage to his reputation, for it has tended to overshadow his solid ability.

To think of him only as the shining cavalry leader, whereas he is in reality not only that, but also a great commander.

Of course, the fact in his career most readily recognized was his mastery in the necessarily modern art of handling masses of modern cavalry so as to give them the fullest possible effect, not only in the ordinary operations of cavalry which precede and follow a battle, but in the battle itself.

But in addition he showed in the civil war that he was a first-class army commander, both as a subordinate of Grant and then in independent command.

His record in the Valley campaign, and again from Five Forks to Appomattox, is one difficult to parallel in military history.

After the close of the great war, in a field where there was no glory to be won by the general in chief, he rendered a signal service which has gone almost unnoticed.

In the tedious weary Indian wars on the Great Plains it was he who developed in thoroughgoing fashion the system of campaigning in winter, which, at the cost of bitter hardship and peril, finally broke down the wretched strength of those formidable warriors, the horse Indians.

His career was typically American, from plain beginnings he rose to the highest military position in our land. We honor his memory itself; and moreover, as in the case of the other great commanders of his day, his career symbolizes the careers of all those men who in the years of the nation's direct need sprang to the front to risk everything, including life itself, and to spend the days of their strongest young manhood in laborious conflict for an ideal.

Often we Americans are taunted with having only a material ideal. The empty glory of the taunt is sufficiently shown by the presence here today of you men of the Grand Army, you the comrades of the dead general, the men who served with and under him.

In all history we have no greater instance of subordination of self, of the exalting of a lofty ideal over merely material well-being among the people of a great nation, than was shown by your own people in the civil war.

And you, the men who wore the blue, would be the first to say that this same lofty indifference to the things of the body, when compared to the things of the soul, was shown by your brothers who wore the gray. Dreadful was the suffering, dreadful the loss, of the civil war. Yet it stands alone among wars in this, that, now that the wounds are healed, the memory of the mighty deeds of valor performed on one side no less than on the other has become the common heritage of all our people in every quarter of this country.

The completeness with which this truth is shown by what is occurring here today. We meet together to raise a monument to a great Union general, in the presence of many of the survivors of the Union army; and the secretary of war, the man at the head of the army, who, by virtue of his office, occupies a special relation to the celebration, is himself a man who fought in the Confederate service. Few indeed have been the countries where such a conjunction would

Pain Weakens

Headache, rheumatism, neuralgia, or pains of any nature weaken the system—they are a strain upon the nerves. Almost instant relief can be obtained by taking Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills, and without any bad after-effects. Take one on first indication of an attack—it will ward it off. They are a pleasant little tablet, sold by druggists everywhere, 25 doses 25 cents; never sold in bulk.

"I was subject to constant headaches for a period of four years. At times I was almost unlit for the work in which I am engaged, that of a station agent. Through the advice of a friend I tried Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and the result has been that I have entirely eradicated my system of those continuous headaches that follow a continual mental strain. They have done for me all that is claimed for them."

O. L. RUSSELL, Art. C. & N. W. Ry., Battle Creek, Ia.

"I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for a year now for neuralgia and find there is nothing like them. They surely have been a blessing to me."

have been possible, and blessed indeed are we that in our beloved land it is not only possible, but seems so entirely natural as to excite no comment whatever.

There is another point in General Sheridan's career which it is good for all of us to remember. Whereas Grant, Sherman and Thomas were of the old native American stock, the parents of Sheridan, like the parents of Farragut, were born on the other side of the water.

Any one of the five was just as much a type of the real American, of what is best in America, as the other four. We should keep steadily before our minds the fact that Americanism is a question of principle, of purpose, of idealism, of character; that it is not a matter of birthplace, or creed, or line of descent.

Here in this country the representatives of many old world races are being fused together into a new type, a type the main features of which are already determined and were determined at the time of the Revolutionary war; for the crucible in which all the new types are melted into one was shaped from 1776 to 1789 and our nationality was definitely fixed in all its essentials by the men of Washington's day.

The strains will not continue to exist separately in this country as in the old world. They will be combined in one; and of this new type those men will best represent what is loftiest in the nation's past, what is finest in her hope for the future, who stand each solely on his worth as a man who scorn to do evil to others, and who refuse to submit to wrongdoing themselves; who have in them no taint of weakness; who never fear to fight when fighting is demanded by a sound and high morality, but who hope by their lives to bring ever nearer the day when justice and peace shall prevail with our own borders and in our relations with all foreign powers.

Much of the usefulness of any career must lie in the impress that it makes upon, and the lessons that it teaches to, the generations that come later. We of this generation have our own problems to solve, and the condition of our solving them is that we shall all work together as American citizens without regard to differences of section or creed or birthplace, copying not the divisions which so lamentably sundered our fathers one from another, but the spirit of burning devotion to duty which drove them forward, each to do the right as it was given him to see the right in the great years when Grant, Farragut, Sherman, Thomas and Sheridan, Lee and Jackson, and the Johnstons, the valiant men of the north and the valiant men of the south, fought to a finish the great Civil war. They did not themselves realize, in the bitterness of struggle, that the blood and the grim suffering marked the death throes of what was worn out, and the birth pangs of a new and more glorious national life. Mighty is the heritage which we have received from the men of the mighty days. We, in our turn, must gird up our loins to meet the new issues with the same stern courage and resolute adherence to an ideal, which marked our fathers who belonged to the generation of the man in whose honor we commemorate this monument today.

Ten Years of Eczema. Reports on eczema dating back ten years show the value of external treatment. Druggist McGrath, Boston, this city, can tell any sufferer what reports they have been getting from patients who used oil of wintergreen, thymol and glycerin, in liquid form, as compounded in D. D. O. Prescription. It would be interesting to know whether any person cured as much as ten years ago has had another touch of the disease.

ARC LIGHTS ON DECEMBER 12

Manager A. D. Ayers of the Electric Company Hopes to Have Things Started by That Time.

LAST TWO CARS ARRIVED

First Two Cars of Shipment Arrived a Week Ago and the Last Two Arrived Yesterday.

Yesterday morning the last two cars of machinery for the electric light plant arrived from Norfolk, Va., and were transferred to the power plant switch and will be unloaded today and tomorrow to get in readiness to place on the foundation which has been completed.

Good news that the engine will be ready and giving the arc lights to the city has been announced by Manager A. D. Ayres of the electric light company. This will be even earlier than the manager expected and will be good news to all.

The first two cars of the engine arrived from Norfolk about ten days ago and a large force of men have been working steadily unloading and getting the machinery in place to put on the large concrete base which has been put in new, the old one having been taken out on account of being too small for the new Corliss engine which is larger than the Fleming which was taken out after the accident. The engine which has just been shipped here is a thousand horsepower engine and besides running the arc light will furnish power for the interurban cars.

With the arrival of the engine complete the work will go on fast now and the date set at December 12 for the turning on of the arcs will probably be shortened by several days.

The first shipment of the engine arriving a week ago Tuesday and the last shipment of yesterday making four cars in all completed the shipment. New switch board supplies were secured at Quincy by Manager Ayers and the equipment in this department of the plant will be entirely new and of the best material, insuring safety in every way. The new engine also has a commendable feature on account of having no belting connected with it and insures safety in this way to employes and others about the plant.
