

SUDDEN DEATH OF M. V. RILEY

Good Citizen Passed Away Shortly After 12 O'clock This Afternoon to Sorrow of Friends.

WAS ABOUT TOWN TODAY

Transacted Business This Morning and His Sudden Demise Came With Little Warning to Family.

The happy and cheerful Riley home, 818 Orleans street was very suddenly darkened shortly after noon today when the death angel came and carried away the beloved husband and father, Martin V. Riley, the well known real estate man of Keokuk and a veteran of the civil war.

The death of Mr. Riley came very suddenly and with no warning to members of the immediate family, although they were aware that his heart was weak and he might die suddenly at any time.

This morning Mr. Riley had business connected with a real estate deal and for the greater part of the time was about town attending to it. He returned home shortly after 12 o'clock and as he neared his home grew suddenly ill and weak. It was a hard struggle for him to reach the house and he was assisted by willing hands and taken to his room. His death followed very quickly and to the sorrow of his wife and children and hundreds of friends he closed his eyes in a last sleep.

Had Deep Trouble. Mr. Riley has had heart trouble for some time past and from time to time he was confined to his home for short spells. During the past week he has enjoyed very good health and was able to be around town attending to business interests.

Few men in Keokuk enjoyed the respect of citizens more than did this man. He was quiet and reserved but came to the front when duty called him. He was upright and honest in business matters and had always enjoyed prosperity.

Mr. Riley was a friend of all and his enemies, if he had any, were unknown. A kind word was always at hand for every one and he was beloved by friends and his family.

Mr. Riley was a member of the Trinity M. E. church, of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the Woodmen. In both church and lodge circles he enjoyed the esteem of his fellow men and took quite an active interest in the affairs of all three.

Members of Company K. Martin V. Riley was sixty-nine years of age and his life was an active one. During the civil war he served as a member of Company K of the Fifty-first infantry and enlisted in Chicago, December of 1860. He was present at the battle of Stone river and was a prisoner during the war in Danville, Richmond and Andersonville prisons. Mr. Riley could relate his prison life in a most interesting manner and some years ago wrote a series of articles for The Gate City, in which he vividly pictured incidents of the war. For two years he was a prisoner.

For four years Mr. Riley was sheriff of Hancock county and a short time after giving up the reins of office came to Keokuk. For eighteen years he had made Keokuk his home and during that time was active in business circles.

He served the city as alderman, being elected by the Republicans of the third ward.

Married in 1866. His marriage to Miss May Paylor occurred on December 20, 1866, and to this union are living two children: daughter Alberta, and son, George in addition to the two children, there remain his beloved wife, sister in Carthage, Ill., and one grandchild.

In the death of Mr. Riley Keokuk has lost a good citizen and the sympathy of all is extended to the bereaved relatives.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

IMPROVING POTATOES.

Three Methods for Improving this Staple Vegetable.

Three methods for improving the potato are in use: (1) Crossing desirable plants and comparing their seedlings under controlled conditions. (2) Selecting extreme fluctuations among the plants and tubers of a variety. (3) Finding and isolating sudden changes or mutations.

That advance is possible by the first method is admitted from the results of its use by the best breeders. Theoretically, the new varieties obtained are merely new combinations of qualities which were held by the germ cells of the two parents. If our knowledge of inheritance in the potato were adequate, we could make the proper combination to obtain what we wish at will, but at present we can not do this because our knowledge of manifest characters is meager and because many characters are latent or hidden in our present varieties and need combining with other characters in order to develop. Therefore, until a firm foundation is laid in the science of heredity, we can do little more than make random crosses between varieties known to possess desirable characters, and compare their progeny with great care.

In this comparison it is well to be extremely conservative about drawing conclusions. Not only should every condition of environment be made as uniform as possible, but it should be remembered that there are stages of growth during the life of the plant when surrounding conditions affect it in different ways. And these differences are not hereditary qualities. For example, one variety grows rapidly and its tubers are half grown at a certain time, while at the same time another variety has just begun to set its tubers. A drought at this time kills the one variety but does not affect the other. The first, however, may really be the best variety and hasty conclusions to the opposite would be premature.

The real effect of selecting fluctuations within a variety (such as selecting the heaviest tubers to improve the yield, is still questionable. It seems definitely settled that the use of diseased and immature tubers as seed has an injurious effect upon the succeeding crop, but there is no evidence that planting the best tubers or planting tubers from the best-yielding plants will increase the yield of the variety. Such an inheritance would necessitate the supposition that germ cells of a large tuber have a different constitution from those of a small tuber of the same variety, and there is no warrant for such an assumption.

Wide variations or bud mutations are rare and have never produced anything especially valuable. They are at present more worthy the study of the scientist than the attention of the practical potato breeder.

The universal belief that a potato variety must degenerate through continued bud propagation appears to have little ground either in theory or practice. The degeneration that sometimes does take place is due to effects through the use of tubers which are abnormal, from inhospitable soil or climate, or from the ravages of insects or fungi on the plants. The old idea that a change of seed is necessary, is also a mistaken one.—E. M. East.

FOR NEXT SEASON.

An Idea for Fruit Drying That's Worth Saving.

No dried fruit tastes so good as that dried by the sun in the open air. But the old-fashioned back yard is not open tables in the ing the fruit on method of exposure—flies simply make it their feeding ground. Use the device shown herewith—small frames three feet square, with wire netting bottoms. One can be arranged above another in the manner shown, says the Farm Journal, and all can be covered with a sheet of cotton mosquito netting. The air can then circulate in every direction through the trays, but insects can not soil the fruit.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN. Grape vines can be pruned at this season. Cuttings can be made of the trimmings. Each cutting should contain four buds.

General pruning and cleaning up in the orchard can be done now. Remove and burn all dead bush and trimmings. Collect and burn all dry decayed fruit, called "mummies." They carry spores of disease, which will cause next year's fruit crop to blight and rot. Spray fruit trees with the lime-sulphur wash to kill San Jose scale. The lime-sulphur wash painted on the tree trunks will also prevent entrance of tree borers next spring.

Look Out for the Berry Bushes. If your locality is infested with rabbits, it should be remembered that they are just as likely to gnaw the blackberry and raspberry bushes (and the rose bushes) that are left uncovered, as they are to girdle the fruit trees. Small patches may be covered but large fields are a difficult problem. A combination of "gun and boy" is often a good solution.
