League Stars Draw Princely Salaries During the Few Months of the Year in Which They Work.

COULD NOT DO BETTER

Many of Them Could Not Earn One Third During the Entire Year, While Some Make Fortunes in Game.

Fans and fanettes of Keokuk who got the bug last year and the habit of passing the pay window to see the Indians do or be done, will see a much better aggregation assembled to do credit to the city and send forth our athletic name to a wider field. Manager Belt has assembled many youngsters—the cream of the brush as it were—to show the Central Association what a baseball machine can really accomplish. Its stars on a silver dollar to the hole in a doughnut that Frank Belt will give his team a tilt that will land the heroes of Chief Keokuk well up in that devoted column. Take a slant, even with a pessimistic eye, at the squad there assembled on that glorious battle field to which Keokuk's astute fans will flock on a warm summer's afternoon, and you will be refreshed with the speed displayed and even surprised, for Belt has gathered together a good band of ball players. The loss of LaVelle is keenly felt at the present time, but Belt probably made a wise move, as no one is more familiar with the detriment to a team and the disaster to follow, in having a man who is a "booster," than Keokuk's manager. The season will open on May 4, which is just one week from today, and then Keokuk will be ready for the melee. The odds on Keokuk have been placed at slight figures by the bookmakers and Keokuk fans make the Indians one of the favorites.

Even though a few of the decisions were questionable yet none of the Indians ventured to grow loquacious with "his umps" yesterday afternoon in the game between the regulars and "yannigans." The man holding the indicator was no less a person than Ed Woolley, a director of the local baseball club. How Director Woolley came to be an umpire is not known, but it is rumored about town that he is about to sign a contract for President Justice. Miller got a beauty for three sacks in the game yesterday, and one of the players in the infield mentioned the fact that the tall first baseman had not touched first. It mattered little that Umpire Woolley was watching the flight of the ball and wondering if it would ever come to earth, for he called Miller out for making such a long bingle in a practice game.

Manager Belt had the entire squad out and divided into two teams yesterday. The regulars won easily, but the workout was a good one, and the manager was well pleased with the work. He stated in the afternoon that the pitchers would have to cut loose from now on, and no "stalling" would go. The twirlers have had plenty of time to get the kinks out of their arms and all will have to curve them over from now on.

Ball players draw big salaries. The public never has had a very clear idea of just what the players receive in their envelopes on the first and fifteenth of every month from April until October. Many think that every well known player gets at least $4,000 and that the most famous stars draw from $5,000 to $10,000. And the public's sympathy has all been with the player until very lately. There have been so many phoney holdouts, retirements and threats to jump to the outlaw league by players who never intended to do anything but jump in the band wagon when the proper time came that the dear old public has switched its sympathy—or quite a chunk of it—to the club owners, who have outgrown the position of slave owners and barterers in "human chattels."

Still others think the players are doing pretty well to drag down as much as $3,200 for a season on the diamond. If all the big league pay rolls were summed up and an average taken it would be found that the players received about $3,000 to $3,200 apiece for the six months' work or play, whichever way one happens to look at it.

Does $3,000 seem like a pretty fair remuneration for a season's work? The public is divided on that, but probably there are as many who would say that an average of $3,000 is just.

Joe Tinker of the Cubs—and he is one of those players whose contract calls for quite a bit more than $3,000—went to the defense of the magnates not long ago and said that they were more than generous in paying salaries.

"When I think," said Tinker, "of the way I used to work as a lather for $18 a week, before I became a professional baseball player, I have to stop and shake hands with myself for my luck in being able to draw major league money. I couldn't earn the money the Chicago club pays me doing anything else if I didn't have my baseball reputation to fall back on. And I want to say that the ball player has a pretty good time earning that salary. At least I do, for I love to play ball. Being paid a good salary for doing the pleasantest task on earth is what I call a pretty fine arrangement. I am satisfied, and I think right down in their hearts all the players have a good deal to be thankful for."

The surprise given Jack Doyle's father when he first saw his son Johnny play a game typifies the light in which a part of the fans view the ball player's life. Jack had been mighty good to his parents, and every pay day sent part of his salary to the old folks at Holyoke, Mass.

Then knew he was getting a big salary and his father thought Jack must be working like a slave to earn so much more money than he had in the mills around Holyoke. One day when the Brooklyn club, which Jack was with at this time visited Boston for a series, Jack went down to Holyoke to visit his parents and persuaded his father to return to the city with him and watch a game.

The old gentleman went. The first shock was at the luxurious quarters which the players occupied—at no expense to themselves. Then came the game. The elder Doyle was disgusted. It wasn't what he thought it was going to be. He believed the thousands of fans utterly crazy when they got excited during the heated moments of the play.

With the game over—won by a timely hit by Jack—the senior Doyle was greatly relieved. Not at Brooklyn's victory or his son's fine base hit, but at the chances to consult his son on an important matter.

"Jack, do you really tell me that the money you have been sending us is honestly earned?" asked Mr. Doyle, senior, in great anxiety.

"Why, sure," said Jack, surprised that he hadn't been congratulated for winning a hard game. "But why do you ask?"

"Well, I just couldn't believe it was possible for you to be getting all that money for kicking up dices in those short pants. I am glad your Aunt Mary didn't see you." It was too easy for the old gentleman.

How many ball players would be able to earn $3,000 in other lines of endeavor? There are some, but mighty few. Fielder Jones is passing up a salary of $10,000 to look after business interests, but business interests made possible by judicious investment of the money he earned as a ball player. Mike Donlin, with his wife, Mabel Hite, has been making $1,000 a week all winter, but merely on the strength of his baseball reputation. Take away the baseball popularity earned on the ball field and few of the players could gather the shekels as bountifully as they do by playing ball.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Health Talks

No man is stronger than his stomach. Make your stomach strong and you thereby fortify your system against the attacks of a long list of diseases which originate in the stomach and must be reached, if at all through the stomach. Thus torpid, or lazy liver, biliousness, dyspepsia, impure blood and various skin affections originate in weak stomach and consequent poor nutrition. The same is true of certain bronchial, throat and lung affections.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Strengthens the stomach, invigorates the liver, purifies the blood making it rich, red and vitalizing and thereby curing the above and kindred affections.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines—sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Golden Medical Discovery." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of, but you don't and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. To him its only a difference of profit. Therefore, insist on having Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If not promptly supplied trade elsewhere.

The Quincy Herald throws the following light on the Quincy-Keokuk game between the respective high schools Saturday afternoon: The Quincy High school base ball team defeated the High school team from Keokuk, Ia., at Baldwin park Saturday afternoon by the score of 6 to 0. The visitors were weak both in the field and at bat, while the locals showed up very much better than in the game a week ago with the Quincy Elks who won 14 to 1. As the score indicates, the game Saturday was one-sided—too much so to make it interesting. The Gate City team had fairly good men to officiate on the slab, and the backstop was all right in his place. But the men in both the in and out-field seldom caught or held the ball, and frequently threw wild. The locals had a couple of earned runs, no more. The others were gifts.

Men were at work plowing the ground in front of the grandstand bringing it to a lower level for the erection of boxes. A number will be constructed in front of the grandstand and an extra charge of ten cents will be made for them during the season.

"Young Joseph," considered the best light weight fighter in England, was given the decision over "Young Otto," of New York, after twenty rounds of fighting last night. The bout took place in London.
