Corriden in Big Sale

The announcement was made Saturday that Manager Daniel Shay of the Kansas City American league team has purchased "Red" Corriden, shortstop, and "Pat" O'Connor, catcher, from Pittsburg for the sum of $6,000.

"Red" Corriden is young, in fact so young that the big leaguers are afraid of him; otherwise he would make some of the veterans hustle to hold a berth were he given an unlimited opportunity of making good.

While Corriden played some ball before coming to Keokuk three years ago, his first professional ball was learned here, and to Keokuk and "Pa" Belt belongs the credit of developing him. For two years he entertained Keokuk fans and was then sold to the St. Louis Americans. He was not for a trial, but was farmed to Omaha, where he played great ball during the season of 1910. A few weeks before it closed Hedges, president of the Browns, called him to St. Louis and on his first day in major league company, played brilliantly. No youngster in recent years ever made such a sensational debut before the big fellows than did Corriden.

St. Louis Asked Waivers

Corriden was given a tryout in several games, but it was hard for him to hold up the great reputation he had made. Fans were for him, but it was not for Hedges to supplant the three-hundred infielders on his club, so early this year waivers were asked. Pittsburg did not waive on the player and Corriden went to the Pirates, the sum paid being $1,500, the regular price. Corriden took his time about signing this year, but finally came to terms, only to be disposed of a few weeks later.

For several months the country talked about "Red" because of his playing in just one game. It was when Cleveland and St. Louis were playing the final game of the season. Lajoie was struggling against Cobb for batting honors. In a double header Lajoie made eight hits, and nearly every one of them was a bunt that went to Corriden. A subsequent investigation cleared "Red" of any scandal connected with the matter.

Belt Gives up Job.

Frank Belt deserted his water power job Friday and on Saturday was seen around local baseball headquarters polishing up on the dope. He will send out transportation April 5, which is Wednesday. The players will roll in Keokuk Sunday and Monday. Belt has given up thinking about Catcher Mason. Nothing has been heard of him for several months, and the Keokuk boss is of the impression that he will give up the game during 1911.

SAM LANGFORD GIVEN ONLY DRAW

No Decision in Twenty Round Fight in Paris Last Night With Sam McVey, the California Negro.

PUNCHES WERE WEAK

Neither Pug Could Land Telling Blows, Although Harry Lewis Says Langford Was the Winner.

[By Harry Lewis, the well known Philadelphia fighter, now sojourning in Paris, written for the United Press.]

PARIS, April 1.—It was a poor decision. That is my opinion of the verdict in tonight's twenty round fight between Langford and the Boston "Tarbaby," and Sam McVey, the Parisian idol. Had I been the referee I would have given the Boston fighter the verdict. It was Langford's fight all the way. Although much smaller, he displayed more science and better generalship throughout the battle. He had McVey running away and when he had the big negro cornered, the latter would resort to a clinch. Langford punished his man severely, while McVey did not strike a hard blow during the contest. That the decision was not a popular one, even though Paris is mad over McVey, was shown by the way the referee's verdict was hooted by the spectators.

It was a cosmopolitan crowd that gathered in to witness the contest. There was a good of money bet on the fight with the Parisians as a rule taking the McVey end, while British sports sent over considerable money to be bet on Langford, because of his great showing against Bill Lang. The fight began by both men sparring in a cautious manner, evidently feeling one another out, the tactics continuing throughout the second round.

Langford began to find his man in the third and fourth rounds and repeatedly sent lefts and rights to McVey's head, escaping without a return. Despite the difference in weight, Langford forced his man around the ring during the fifth and sixth rounds. McVey then began to clinch and Langford used his short arm punches with seeming effect. He sent a hard right to McVey's jaw and repeatedly sent rights and lefts to the kidneys during the clinches.

In the seventh round McVey began to show the effects of Langford's hard punches and when the Boston tarbaby sent a hard right to the jaw, staggering McVey, the big smoke broke for cover. He started to clinch more than ever and Langford, although using his free arm with great force shook off McVey. From the eighth to the eleventh rounds the men began to slow up. Langford was willing, but McVey, showing the marks from the Boston man's heavy punches, continually broke away and forced Langford to chase him around the ring.

Langford came near putting his man out in the twelfth when he landed a number of telling blows to the face, head and stomach, but again McVey resorted to the marathoning stunt.

From the thirteenth to the wind-up Langford began to slow up when he saw that he couldn't corner McVey and the battle became tame. Mc-

Vey continually clinched or ran away from the New England fighter. Langford tried often, but he could not corner his man.

They will probably be matched again.

It was decided to have the fight staged either by Jimmy Coffroth at San Francisco, or Tom McCarey at Los Angeles. A $2,000 side bet was incorporated in the articles.

Johnson Would Fiddle.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 1.—Out at the county jail Jack Johnson, tonight wished for his big fiddle. "I want to play a selection from Lonesome Town," said he. For Jack's last hope of avoiding completion of jail sentence of 25 days passed on him for speeding, vanished today when the supreme court denied his petition for a writ of habeas corpus. The big chocolate drop still acts as chambermaid to the county horses at the jail and will do so until his time is up.

Boat Race to Oxford.

LONDON, April 1.—Cambridge men took their defeat today in the annual boat race with Oxford with less good grace than usual. With six veterans in their boat to three for Oxford, the Cantabs counted upon their crew to stem the dark blue's tide of victory. The Cambridge oarsman performed splendidly, but it was the irony of fate that the Oxford's should prove stronger than expected and win the race in the record breaking time of 18 minutes, 29 seconds, eighteen seconds faster than the Putney to Mortlake route was ever rowed before. More than 100,000 people witnessed the race.

The Oxfordians were clearly in better physical condition and though they rowed a slower stroke than Cambridge, they put far more power into their blades and were able to keep their boat in the lead almost from the start. Had the dark blues known that a record was falling, they undoubtedly could have gone ahead and clipped
