Election of officers of the Modern Woodman lodge, Camp 622, will be held Wednesday evening this week. This will be the annual election. At the same meeting a matter of rates will be discussed by the members so that the delegate from the local camp may present the views of the Keokuk order at the head camp meeting to be held in Chicago, some time soon.

The missionary services conducted last evening by the C. W. B. M. at the First Christian church were very instructive and interesting and a large audience enjoyed the splendidly prepared program. Thursday evening of this week the Brotherhood of that church will hold a regular session when topics of interest will be discussed.

Special C. W. B. M. services were a feature of the evening at the Bank Street Christian church last Sunday. The ladies of the Auxillary prepared a very fine program and Miss Jessie Van Steenwyk and Mrs. Stevens sang a duet and the male quartette rendered special service in song. The pastor, Geo. A. Reinhardt, delivered a missionary sermon, which resulted in a good substantial offering for the Woman's Christian Board of Missions.

J. M. England, a young seventeen-year-old seal clerk at Hannibal, Mo., was killed Sunday morning at 6:35 when an extra freight train which reached Keokuk at 10:20 backed over him while the youth was crossing the tracks in the Hannibal yards. Both legs of the seal clerk were cut off near the hips and he died a short time after being injured. The extra train, it was learned from Engineer Lambert who was speaking to Keokuk railroad men about the sad catastrophe, was backing up and England thinking he could get across in time, took the risk and met death.

Here is what A. L. Urlick, president of the Iowa Federation of Labor, says of the McNamara case: "Organized labor believed in the innocence of the McNamaras, and until their guilt was established was willing to make every sacrifice to procure for them a fair trial. They have now confessed their guilt and have proven themselves unworthy of any further concern. Organized labor had confidence in the men because they never in the councils of labor indicated any disposition to tactics and policies foreign to the true principles of organized labor. They have imposed upon our movement and can now suffer the consequences of their illegal actions. They will receive no further support or concern. With relation to the effect upon the organized labor movement, it will mean much censure and criticism on the part of our opponents, but after all is said it will remain simply an incident of a few men violating the true principles of organized labor and the doing of things by methods denounced by all sincere and honest members. Their illegal acts are of a kind with the acts of men in all human institutions who stray away from the true teachings of their order."
