BODY OF LOUIS HARTEL TO ARRIVE

Former Keokuk Citizen will be Buried in Keokuk—Member of Puckechetuck Lodge.

This morning at 7:35 o'clock, the body of Louis Hartel will arrive here from Cherryvale, Kans., accompanied by his widow Mrs. Emma Hartel; Mrs. Harter's sister Mrs. Bertha Delahoyde and daughter-in-law Mrs. Madge Thixton Hartel.

Mr. Hartel was born in Keokuk,

Feb. 4, 1863. He was married to Emma Schlotter Feb. 17, 1886. Their only son, Chester Louis Hartel, died at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schlotter in this city Sept. 12, 1912.

Mr. Hartel was taken suddenly ill only a few days ago while leaving for a fishing trip near his home in Kansas. He was formerly engaged in the shoe business here with J. V. D. Maas and was well known by many in the city. Mr. Hartel was a member of Puckechetuck lodge No. 43, he joined the Masons at Cherryvale.

BRIDGIE WEBBER STABBED IN BACK

He Will Recover but will Not Tell Who Reached Out and Struck Him.

[United Press Leased Wire Service.] NEW YORK, June 14.—The lower east side was seething tonight with the spirit of the old gang, "Bridgie" Webber, the "squealer" who helped to send Police Lieutenant Becker and four men up the river for the murder of Herman Rosenthal where they now await the electric chair, lay in his home with a stab wound in the back. Somewhere from out the night a hand reached for Webber to avenge. Webber will recover from the wound inflicted when a six inch blade was thrust into his back and though the police failed in efforts to induce Webber to tell who he suspected they knew it was useless. Webber will not squeal again.

CITY NEWS.

—Timothy J. Hickey, Keokuk's large street commissioner, is entirely thankful today that he wasn't submerged by the waters of the Mississippi just above the dam on Saturday afternoon and the first to be given a free bath near the new government lock. Just as a boat was about to pass through the lock, the big councilman stepped out onto the lock gate to cross. Of a sudden, the gates started to sink away into the depths of the lock interior and feeling himself go down, Mr. Hickey shouted for help, at the same time grasping wildly for a pipe that was sticking up above the gate. The lock tender noticing the predicament of the street commissioner, postponed the trip into the deep for the latter and the affair was at an end.

Somewhat Difficult. It is just about as easy to buy refinement as it is to grasp a sunbeam.
