KEOKUK PAYS HOMAGE TO MEMORY OF SOLDIER DEAD

Patriots Who Are Resting in Fame's Eternal Camping Ground, Remembered Here.

VETERANS' RANKS THIN

They March to Cemetery to Pay Their Tribute to Comrades in Death's Bivouac.

Keokuk paid homage to the soldier dead sleeping in the bivouacs of the dead yesterday. Honor and reverence were bestowed upon the fast thinning lines of living comrades who marched to the National cemetery—some a little more faltering than they did a year ago, and others who were unable to take the long tramp, but who fell into line as the gates were reached. The old colors were once more unfurled, and with their bows of crepe held at the head of the thin column of men, who years ago marched under the gleaming folds of the banner to the southern fields of death and conquest. All strife was forgotten yesterday. All wounds are healed. The only thought was that of homage and honor for the sleeping comrades who never again shall answer the bugle call or step to the beat of the drum. Death is the drummer boy who is now marching with the fragments of that once glorious army, and taps are beating for many.

It was an impressive sight as the parade moved out Main street. There were the National Guard troops in their ratty uniforms, and the boy scouts—the coming soldiers if duty calls. And behind these came the G. A. R. posts. Here and there an old army hat with its cord and tassels was to be seen, and some there were who still wore the blue. The colored veterans who helped to free their brothers in chains were in evidence. One or two grandsons of the old fighters were in line marching with military tread along the street. And the navy of the north was represented by John C. Ferris, in his well known uniform.

The day was ideal. Under a cloudless sky with just enough breeze to make marching not a burden, the parade moved. Flags were displayed in great profusion. Along the route crowds were gathered, and at the cemetery a vast concourse had assembled to greet the marchers. Reverently were the veterans saluted, and with the old order, the old fire, the old spirit, commands were given by the post commanders, and the ranks responded. With colors dipped, the colors at the cemetery at half staff, the veterans stood with heads bowed while the graves of the known, and the monument to the unknown dead were decorated.

March to Cemetery.

The parade was formed shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, by John J. Crimmins, Jr., as marshal of the day and his two aides. First came a platoon of police, followed by the Citizens' band. Behind the musicians came Company L, 54th Iowa National Guard, with Captain R. T. Richardson commanding. A battalion of boy scouts, under Scout Masters Clarence Alling and Ben D. Chapman, followed. The scouts carried their own banners and an American flag. Belknap Post No. 515 followed, and in their trail came Torrence Post No. 2.

In the carriages were W. B. Collins, president of the day; Dr. S. W. Moorhead, mayor of the city; Captain A. H. Evans, and the Hon. J. B. Weaver, of Des Moines, the orator of the day. In the second carriage were C. R. Joy, vice president of the day; Dr. John C. Sage, chaplain of the day; Mrs. Marie Busch, chaplain at the exercises at the monument for the unknown dead, and Councilman F. T. Schmidt. The third carriage contained members of the Women's Relief Corps. Besides the carriages were a number of autos in which the veterans were riding. Col. H. B. Blood, S. H. Johnston and others being in the machines.

Two hundred school children who were to take part in the exercises at the cemetery, were conveyed there by street car. They were under the direction of Prof. P. C. Hayden, supervisor of music in the Keokuk schools. A number of boys and girls who were to decorate the graves of the soldiers and to take part in the exercises at the monument to the unknown dead were conveyed to the cemetery under the direction of Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Rollins and other ladies of the W. R. C.

Veterans Are Saluted.

As the band entered the confines of Oakland cemetery it was playing a dirge, and in slow solemn tread the marchers made their way down the road to the National cemetery. Reaching the gates of this, the final camping grounds of the soldier dead, the platoon of police divided to form a lane through which the soldiers would pass. A few steps up the road Company L and boy scouts did the same thing, standing and saluting as the soldiers passed. Through the lane thus opened passed the old soldiers.

Returning the salute of soldiers, scouts and policemen, the veterans, heads bared, entered the National cemetery, followed the children around to the monument to the unknown dead, where the first exercises of the afternoon were held. Forming a circle about the monument, the children sang "Nearer My God to Thee," and after their song, Mrs. Marie Busch, chaplain, offered a short prayer. The children were each given a bouquet and laid their flowers reverently at the head stone of the graves in the cemetery. This was an impressive and beautiful ceremony with the squad of old soldiers on one side of the quadrangle of graves, and the stacked arms of the guards at the other side.

Homage to Dead.

Wreaths had been placed on the monument to the unknown dead, and the soldier graves in other than the National cemetery had previously been decorated with flags and a bouquet. The bouquets were made up yesterday morning in the various school buildings of the city.

From this part of the cemetery the crowd moved to the speakers' stand situated in a natural amphitheatre. Here the main exercises of the day were carried out. The slopes were lined with people, the speakers' stand was decorated appropriately and the school children's chorus, the girls in white, made a pretty setting for the impressive and beautiful ceremonies which followed.

Exercises at Stand.

Major W. B. Collins, a veteran of the war, was president of the day. In his characteristic way, Major Collins opened the afternoon's exercises. He paid a tribute to the men who were sleeping under the sod, and to those who marched to pay them homage. The Rev. John C. Sage, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, offered a prayer which was fervent and beautiful. Following the chaplain's invocation, the school children's chorus sang "Iowa, Oh Iowa," directed by Professor Hayden.

Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by S. H. Johnston in an impressive manner. The chorus and the concourse of people stood during the singing of the national air, "The Star Spangled Banner." Following this came the address of the day by the Hon. James B. Weaver. Mr. Weaver eloquently sketched the heritage left us by the soldiers and pioneers of the Mississippi valley. He asked that it be kept bright and that we be worthy of it.

The speaker also referred to the prominence of Keokuk and this section of the country in the life of his father, General Weaver. His address is to be found in another part of this paper.

Services Come to Close.

The singing of "America," followed the oration and a benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Sage. The firing squad from Company L, fired a salute over the graves, and taps echoed across the green hills of the National and Oakland cemeteries. Memorial day services were brought to a fitting close. In the words of the poet who wrote the following in the National Magazine:

They are marching with a halting step—
A halting step and slow—
And many in those blue clad ranks
Have hair as white as snow.

DOING THEIR DUTY

Scores of Keokuk Readers are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty. When they fail to do this the kidneys are weak.

Backache and other kidney ills may follow.

Help the kidneys do their work. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—the tested kidney remedy.

Keokuk people endorse their worth.

Mrs. M. E. Clark, 502 South Fifth street, Keokuk, Iowa, says: "I feel justified in giving Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement. This remedy has been used in my family, being procured at Wilkinson & Co.'s Drug Store, and it has brought relief from pain and lameness in the back and trouble with the kidney secretions." If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Clark had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. READ THE GATE CITY

Their youth lies on the battle fields
Of fifty years ago.

Those faded, tattered flags they bear,
All torn by shot and shell,
Are sacred emblems of the dead
Who loved their country well.
How great their love and sacrifice
No human tongue may tell.

Their serried ranks are thinning fast
That once with martial tread
The knapsack and the musket bore
Where Grant and Sherman led.
Their sleep is sound and peaceful
In the bivouac of the dead.

No more the reveille at dawn
Shall rouse them from their sleep;
No more shall wives and sisters
Mourn.
No more shall mothers weep.
Their names upon the roll of fame
Time's hand has graven deep.

And some lie on those hard fought fields
Where now the blue and gray
Clasp hands across those battle lines.
Their blood has washed away,
Where once the tide of battle flowed
Their children's children play.

The passing years speed swiftly,
And silence round them wraps,
And to their listening ears there comes
No sweeter song, perhaps,
Than when the battered bugle sounds
Again the old call "Taps."

THE MARKETS

Financial Review.
[United Press Leased Wire Service.]
NEW YORK, May 30.—Today's holiday on the stock exchange was only a continuation of the holiday the brokers have enjoyed practically all week. Trading was so extremely light that prices for many issues were only nominal.

There were no important changes in any of the leading issues, though some of the less important specialties suffered marked changes in both directions. Prospects for a peaceable solution of the Mexican problem and highly favorable crop news were the most encouraging bits of news.

Rumors that the interstate commerce commission will inform the eastern railroads that it will grant an increase in rates, thought not the five percent asked, helped bolster railroad securities not affected by the present probe of railway affairs.

On the other hand President Wilson's announcement that he will not call off anti-trust legislation was considered discouraging by industrial leaders though they opinion the business condition will revive the last half of the year. These conditions about offset each other, preventing any price changes.

Grain Review.
[United Press Leased Wire Service.]
CHICAGO, May 30.—The flurry that usually precedes the closing out of contracts, caused erratic movements in May futures for all grains this week, but the expected bulge in May wheat did not materialize on the close of the day yesterday. May closed 99 cents, an advance of 1/2 over last week, after touching the dollar mark Thursday, but the Armour crowd was selling at the close, instead of attempting to squeeze shorts as had been predicted.

The glowing crop predictions caused wheat futures for the deferred months to ease off all week. July lost 1/4 and September 1/4 during the week's trading. Shorts covered in May corn just before the closing gong yesterday, to such an extent that prices advanced 4 cents and May showed a 4 cent gain for the week. The deferred months, however, registered losses of 1/2 each for the week.

Oats was strong earlier in the week on reports of dry weather but plenty of moisture in the closing days of the week brought prices down. May lost 2 cents in the closing out process and the other months showed fractional losses for the week's trading.

Provisions slumped gradually all week on account of a heavy run of hogs to the stock yards, losing from 20 to 38 cents, with pork suffering most.
