IS B.&O. ROAD PLANNING BRANCH?

Stories Are in Circulation That Eastern Carrier Is Making Eyes at Keokuk and Western.

WOULD BE OF BENEFIT

Eastern Promoters Have Been Considering Branch in This Section of State, It Is Declared.

That the Baltimore and Ohio has its eye on the Keokuk and Western in case the suit against the Burlington ends in a divorce of the two roads is a bit of railroad gossip which is buzzing around just now. It is given a little credence by the fact that New York promoters have been in Burlington recently, talking about building from Beardstown west.

The B. & O. by building from Beardstown into Keokuk would have an outlet by way of the Keokuk and Western into Omaha, where they would join the Union Pacific. This would be a direct route into the west for this eastern carrier, and the fact that the story has been given credence frequently of late make it look as though something of the sort may be contemplated.

It has been suggested among other things that the B. & O. has been interested or is interested in the proposed Marsh line. The fact that the line which it is declared will be built from Beardstown west, may be electrified makes it look as if there might be something to this general rumor.

At any rate, if the B. & O. built from Beardstown to Keokuk, in almost a direct line, and then was able to get out over the present K. & W. it would have a fine chance for western connections.

The Burlington Gazette recently printed a story to the effect that promoters from the east, Capell and Co., are backing a project to build from Beardstown to Burlington via Fort Madison. What its object would be in a line of this sort, more than serving the oil fields in Illinois, does not seem to be clear.

If this line is built, the Gazette says that the motive power will be gasoline motors, geared directly to the trucks.

PERSONALS.

Miss Genevieve Ewers is visiting in St. Louis, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Frier.

George Kepner, who resided in Keokuk for a few years while the dam was being constructed, is in the city visiting with old friends. He is en route to Dallas, Texas, where he will be located for a year or more.

LIGHT RAINFALL COMES TO KEOKUK

Only .26 Fell Last Night When Whole Lot More Was Needed.

What started to be a million dollar rain fell last night. The only trouble was there wasn't enough of it. The instruments at the weather bureau office record a fall of 0.26 during the night. Rain commenced to fall shortly after 6:30 o'clock. It fell at intervals during the evening.

The rain lowered the temperature perceptibly last night and early this morning was cooler. The lowest temperature last night was 63. The highest yesterday was 87.

Canada Will Help England.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 31.—Canada is making ready to aid the mother country if England is drawn into war. Following a special meeting of the military council it was announced today that preliminary plans had been made for sending a first contingent of 20,000 or 25,000 men. Permanent forces at Halifax and other points have been ordered held in readiness for mobilization orders. The Halifax garrison was today ordered back from camp. Minister of Militia Hughes said the first detachment of Canadian troops could leave within two or three weeks if necessary.
