

TYLER AND BUSH MATCHED IN DECISIVE ENGAGEMENT

Third Battle for Supremacy in World's Series Rests With Connie Mack's Young Pitcher.

SCORE TIED UNTIL END

Desperate Battle Fought by Both Teams Who Are Tied to Last of Game.

[By Hal Sheridan, United Press Staff Correspondent.]
PENWAY PARK, BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 12.—Before one of the greatest crowds that ever witnessed a world's series combat, the Braves and Athletics met this afternoon in a game, on which may turn the championship of the world. Victory for the Braves meant that they needed but one more game to dethrone the supposedly invulnerable Athletics. Trouncing of the Braves would give the Mackmen a fighting chance to overhaul the leading Boston men.

The Athletics entered the game in a desperate situation, the Braves determined to climb on toward their annihilation of four straight.

Great Crowd Present.

As the crowd poured in, it was estimated the gathering would number more than 35,000 persons, possibly 38,000. It was one of the greatest outpourings in the history of baseball. The big question was the selection of Mack and Stallings. Rudolph was expected for the Braves, but Tyler was a possibility.

Just before the game, Secretary Nickerson said they could get 39,000 persons in the park this afternoon. Fifteen minutes before the start hardly a vacant seat could be seen and it appeared this figure might be reached. It was a serious question with Connie Mack, this picking of pitchers. When the Athletics started batting practice, Chief Bender was coveting ground third base. It was therefore expected that the Indian was not coming back. Connie therefore had his youngsters to pick from, with Bressler, the southpaw, Shawkey or Bush, regarded as the strongest possibilities.

Evers Receives Auto.

There was hardly a cloud in the sky when the two teams took the field. The huge crowd in general was prepared to cheer and yell at the slightest provocation. Johnny Evers was presented with the Chalmers auto for being the most valuable player to his club in the National league, before the start of the game. This rounds out Johnny's greatest year. With the salary and bonus he received for signing with Boston, John has taken in $35,000 for his year's work. This will almost buy gasoline for his gift today at least. At 1:35 the Royal rosters paraded about the field. They were preceded by two mounted policemen and their band as well as their mascot Indians. It was a remarkable demonstration. Among the 5,000 men massed in solid formation were more than a dozen women who waved banners and cheered with as much energy as their escorts. The Boston throng stopped in front of the Athletic bench and gave rousing cheers with former Mayor Fitzgerald as yell leader. When the Athletics went out for infield practice, Joe Bush and Chief Bender were the Athletic pitchers to warm up on the side line. Tyler and Rudolph were working out for the Braves. It was noticeable, however, that Rudolph was putting much more effort in his work than Tyler. A real picture was present when the band played.

Braves' Sausages.

While the Braves were still at batting practice and the stands were rapidly filling, a Pilgrim Father appeared in the main grand stand. About his hat was a string of frankfurters. Another hung from his neck and he bore a huge sign reading:

"FOR SALE—Braves' sausages—Made from Connie's goat."

The Athletics appeared on the field at 12:50. They were given a great reception by Boston fans. The bleachers cheered them to the echo. Horns were blown, papers and hats waved as Connie's team slipped into its dugout. In the meantime the Braves were peppering the ball for all it was worth. Gowdy, especially was trying to kill it. He drove several into the bleachers. Cather, Connolly, Mame and Schmidt duplicated this feat to the great delight of the crowd. The Braves also put in an extended period at batting practice and hammering at southpaw shoots to be prepared for anything Mack might spring.

A remarkable picture was presented when the band played Star Spangled Banner, this great crowd completely encircling the field, arose as one man. At the conclusion of this picture a mighty wave of cheering burst from thousands of throats. Christmas came a little about the Brave bench. Johnny Evers was presented with a gold bat and Stallings with a gold ball. Hank Gowdy received a watch and Stallings got his second gift in the form of a diamond stud. A few minutes before the start of the game, Bush and Tyler were the only pitchers left warming up.

FIRST INNING.

Athletics—Murphy doubled down the left foul line. He hit a slow ball outside and the sphere shot past just a foot inside third base. Oldring sacrificed on the first ball pitched, Tyler to Schmidt. Tyler almost fumbled the ball but made a quick recovery and beat Oldring by two steps with his throw to first.

Collins was safe and Murphy scored when Connolly dropped Collins' sacrifice fly. He had to move only a few feet for the ball and it was a pure muff.

Baker fanned, swinging mightily at a high one, outside the plate.

McInnis up. Collins stole second. McInnis walked. Collins had leaved several pitches out of Tyler when he was on first and these gave McInnis a good start toward his base on balls.

Walsh up. Collins out. He was caught napping at second, Tyler to Evers. Eddie was sound asleep.

One run, one hit, one error.

Collins' nap pulled the Braves out of a bad hole, the Boston outfit was palpably nervous and Tyler was having trouble with his control when Collins was caught off second.

Boston—Moran flied to Collins, who backed far into right center to take the ball. Moran drew three straight balls and fouled off four before flying.

Evers singled to left center. It was a whopping drive and the Boston fans roared their heads off as he galloped to first.

Connolly fouled to Baker who ran almost to the Athletics' bench to take the ball.

Evers stole second. Whitted fans. No runs, one hit, no errors.

This was the slowest inning of the series to date. Neither Tyler nor Bush appeared certain of their control. Bush especially loitered, walking around the box leisurely between each ball pitched.

SECOND INNING.

Athletics—Walsh out, Tyler to Schmidt. He topped a low ball and sent the easiest kind of a roller to the pitcher.

Barry fouled to Schmidt who made a sterling catch, three feet back of first while running backwards.

Schlag fled to Evers.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

Evers robbed Schang of what looked like a sure hit at the conclusion of the inning. He ran far back into right field, stuck up his glove and dragged Schang's drooping liner from the ozone. Tyler's control was better and the Braves were playing a tighter game.

Boston—Schmidt struck out. Bush got himself into a hole by giving Schmidt three straight balls, but settled down and finally made the big Dutchman swing on a high one outside.

Deal fled to Baker, who almost twisted himself into a knot before he finally got under the ball.

Maranville walked. Bush was having trouble with both his fast ball and curve. He pitched low to the midget and Maranville made him go the limit.

Gowdy up. Gowdy made a two bagger into left field, scoring Maranville. It was a great drive and would have been a home run on any field. Gowdy's ball fell in among the Royal rosters and there was a great scramble to keep it as a souvenir. The man who got it is the proudest man in Boston.

Tyler out, Barry to McInnis. One run, one hit, no errors.

of the Athletics batsmen were simple chances to field.

Boston—Moran out, Baker to McInnis. It was an easy chance, Moran not even running out the hit.

Evers out, Bush to McInnis, Johnny hit the ball squarely on the nose and it traveled direct to the pitcher. He was an easy out.

Connolly lined to Murphy. No runs, no hits, no errors.

It took about forty-six minutes to play the first three innings. Both pitchers were taking their time about delivering the ball. The umpires hustled the batters along, but the pitchers slowed things down after the batter reached the plate.

FOURTH INNING.

Athletics—Collins lined to Evers. Johnny got down on his knees and picked the ball from the breeze just an inch or two from above the ground.

Baker fanned for the second time. Tyler had some trouble in controlling his slow ball.

McInnis doubled into the left field stands. Connolly leaped high in the air in an effort to catch the ball and fell over the low fence into the stands. It was feared that he was injured but he climbed out immediately and pronounced himself O. K.

Walsh singled to left, scoring McInnis.

Barry out, Deal to Schmidt. One run, two hits, no errors.

At this time the sun had completely disappeared and clouds had gathered. It was comparatively dark and there was a feel of rain in the air which did not promise well for tomorrow.

Boston—Whitted out, Collins to McInnis. The ball shot past Bush like a bullet and was headed for safe territory, but Collins ran over and made a wonderful pickup and throw, and got his man easily.

Schmidt singled over second with a count of three and two on him. Bush was forced to put the ball over the plate for the big Dutchman and he squared away and hit it a tremendous crack.

Deal out, Collins to McInnis. It was a slow roller and Collins did not have time to relay the ball to Barry for a force out on Schmidt.

Umpire called Maranville's hit a foul. Maranville hit what looked to be a home run down the right field line, but Umpire Hildebrand who was in a few feet from the plate said the ball was not fair. He held his hand down to indicate where it struck and it was out of the line by inches. The crowd went wild with joy at first and then sank back dejected. Maranville then singled to right center, scoring Schmidt. It was a beautiful placed hit.

The midget reached out after the ball and connected with the end of his bat. Walsh made a game try for it, making a headlong dive when the ball was only about two feet from the ground.

Gowdy up. Maranville stole second and went to third on Schang's low throw. It was a palpable error for the catcher as Collins didn't have a ghost of a chance to stop the ball. Gowdy still up. Gowdy was purposely passed. Bush had too much respect for the lanky backstop's batting prowess. He was afraid the big fellow would smash another into the bleachers. On an attempted double steal Maranville was caught off third.

One run, two hits, one error.

Maranville was off like a shot on his foul hit to right and had completely circled the bases before Hildebrand managed to show that the ball had not struck in fair territory. The play which caught Maranville off third was lightning fast.

FIFTH INNING.

Athletics—Schang flied to Moran. It was a high hit but did not have the power to carry it along.

Bush out, Deal to Schmidt. Bush's drive got to Deal in a fraction of a second and he stopped running when he saw the third sacker field the ball.

Murphy doubled to left center, his second double of the game. The ball looked good for one base, but Murphy sprinted at top speed and made second with time to spare.

Oldring fanned.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

Oldring's punch out in this inning was his fourth of the series. He swung hard but was missing Tyler's shooting a foot. The crowd gave Tyler a great hand as he returned to the bench.

Boston—Tyler out, Bush to McInnis. The southpaw gave the ball a stinging crack, but it proved to be a sharp grounder direct at the pitcher.

Moran out, Barry to McInnis. It was the simplest kind of a chance, Barry being able to make a lazy play on the ball.

Evers singled to left, his second hit of the game. He gave the ball a vicious wallop and it was only the fastest kind of fielding by Oldring which prevented it from going for two bases.

Connolly out, Collins to McInnis on the first ball pitched.

was really a wonderful play. He fell forward on his face while making the throw, his collision with Collins having thrown him from his feet.

Boston—Whitted out, Bush to McInnis, on an easy tap which Bush flied with his gloved hand and got to McInnis far ahead of the runner.

Schmidt flied to Oldring. The ball soared high in the air, but it was an easy catch for Rube.

Deal dropped a double into the field stands just inside the foul line. The fans indulged in a mighty scramble for the ball.

Maranville popped to Schang. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Bush seemed to be getting stronger as the game progressed. He was at his best when the sun was obscured by the clouds for it was then he would use his fast ball most effectively. The general play was also becoming snappier as both teams were keyed to a high tension because of the tied score.

SEVENTH INNING.

Athletics—Walsh fouled to Deal. He hit a high one inside and it glanced off his bat high into the air for an easy chance.

Barry out, Tyler to Schmidt. It was the easiest kind of a chance.

Schlag out, Evers to Schmidt. No runs, no hits, no errors.

At the end of the Athletics' half of the seventh the fans took their stretch, accompanied by tremendous cheers and began pulling for a rally.

Boston—Gowdy out, Barry to McInnis. Gowdy got into a hole by getting two strikes right off the reel and Bush then induced him to strike at a bad one.

Tyler fanned, taking a look at the third strike. It was a fast ball, chest high on the outside corner.

Moran out, Barry to McInnis. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Bush was pitching a much stronger game. Instead of letting the batsmen get him in a hole and then being forced to cut the plate with the ball, he got the sphere over on the jump and got the batsmen in the hole.

EIGHTH INNING.

Athletics—Bush out, Schmidt to Tyler. The ball got past Schmidt, but he ran back and made a pretty throw to Tyler after having knocked down the drive. He hit the first ball pitched.

Murphy flied to Whitted. An easy air liner, which Whitted plucked out of a ray of the sun.

Oldring flied to Moran.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

Boston rosters arose as a man and implored the Braves to put across the winning run in this inning. The Royal rosters and in the left field stand tooted Teasie, while the rosters waved their pennants and sang.

Boston—Evers out, Bush to McInnis. He hit the ball hard, but it bounced directly into Bush's hands.

Connolly out, Barry to McInnis, on a hot smash which the short stop fielded cleverly.

Whitted out, Barry to McInnis. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Bush was in grand form. He had so much smoke on his fast one that the Braves could not see the ball. He retired the side on ten pitched balls, four of which were strikes that were invisible to the batsmen.

NINTH INNING.

Athletics—Collins out, Maranville to Schmidt. The Rabbit beat Eddie out of what looked like a sure hit by gathering his hot grounder with one hand and making a perfect throw. Baker doubled to right on the first ball pitched. The sphere caromed off the right field fence into Moran's hands.

McInnis flied to Connolly in deep left.

Walsh walked. He was purposely passed.

Stallings signalled from the bench for this play, fearing Walsh would have a chance to connect with a ball over the heart of the pan.

Barry fouled to Gowdy.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

DIRECTORS MAKE FIRST STATEMENT

Industrial Association Board First Gun in Campaign for Funds to be Waged Soon.

ASK ONLY REAL NEEDS

Cuts Have Been Made in Everything Possible as This Statement of Proposed Budget Shows.

The first of a series of articles preliminary to the campaign for funds which the industrial association will make, is herewith presented. It will be followed by other articles each day, which will lay before the people of Keokuk the needs and the plans of the association. The first statement follows:

The board of directors of the Keokuk Industrial association, in preparing for the work of the coming year, announces the following budget of office expenses, for the year November first, 1914, to November first, 1915.

|---|------------|
| Salaries (all employed officers) | $3,200.00 |
| Office rent, telephone, electric light and janitor service | 542.00 |
| Incidental account, carfare, auto hire and traveling expenses | 300.00 |
| Office supplies | 240.00 |
| Total | $4,282.00 |

Amount of subscription desired for this coming year is approximately $10,000. Amount to be set apart as a sinking fund for investment in the stock and securities of concerns to be brought to Keokuk, not less for the first year, than $5,000. The exact amount will be the difference between the amount raised and the budget.

A sweeping reduction in the expenses of the Industrial association is contemplated for the coming year. This reduction is advocated because it has been decided that with the decreased movement in industries the country over it is hardly worth while to continue industrial effort on as large a basis as heretofore.

This does not mean a decrease in the effort made by the association heretofore, and being made now, for the rebuilding of the city of Keokuk. It would be disaster even to think of doing away with the association entirely. That would mean the total loss of all the time, effort and money expended by those citizens and business men who are the officials of the organization. It would also mean that when conditions change for the better the country over, it would be necessary to start at the bottom again and build up. This would mean previous effort and money expenditure would be for nothing.

This, however, is not thinkable for Keokuk is bound to grow regardless of the immediate industrial outlook.

Expenses Are Reduced.

In view of the loyal support which has been given to the Industrial association by every individual in Keokuk during the past three and one-half years, the board of directors has, after having thoroughly canvassed the situation, decided that, in order to do justice to the stockholders and subscribing members of the association, and to the citizenship of Keokuk, at large, it is necessary to cut the expenses of the association as much as may be and at the same time assure the continuation of a working organization, constantly on duty, to keep in touch with the industrial situation and be ready to take care of any developments, which may from time to time occur.

The board of directors in making this reduction is planning for a entirely new plan of activity. The finances of the association are low. It is necessary to ask for renewed subscriptions. But a fund of approximately $10,000 for this year is asked, instead of the original amount which was considerably larger. Of course, with the amount of the budget for the coming year, reduced as indicated above, a considerable part of the amount subscribed will be set aside for some particular purpose. It is contemplated that this extra fund will be set aside by an iron clad rule, which may not be broken, for factory investment alone.

It is well known that industries will not move to a city unless there is some inducement offered. The association tried carefully, continuously and without sparing individual labor, to locate industries in Keokuk. A brief summary of the situation will appear later on in the week, showing exactly what could have been done.
