California, Oregon and Washington States Are Much Interested in the Prohibition Amendment.

ELECTION ON TUESDAY

Both Sides Claim Victory and the Liquor Question Has Overshadowed All Else in the Campaign.

[United Press Leased Wire Service.] SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—In four more days, the voters of California will decide whether the saloons, breweries and wineries of the state must go, or whether California will remain in the wet column. The liquor interests are so confident that the prohibition amendment will be defeated that they are offering five to one that conditions will remain as they are now.

The prohibition amendment is overshadowing in interest all other amendments on the ballot and even the race between gubernatorial, senatorial and congressional candidates has been forced to take second place. Thousands of dollars are being spent by both prohibitionists and the wets in advertising and stumping campaigns. Anti-prohibitionists say the amendment, if carried, would prove almost a death blow to the drawing power of the Panama-Pacific exposition. Prohibitionists admit that if the amendment is defeated, it will be due more to this argument than to any other one thing.

In Oregon.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 30.—Whether or not Oregon will adopt state-wide prohibition, November 3 was one of the foremost questions in the minds of the voters, when the final work of the campaign was entered into today. Opponents and supporters of the liquor traffic have conducted speaking campaigns throughout the entire state and the advertising column of the newspapers have been extensively utilized by both sides.

Much interest also is being taken in the proposed amendment to abolish capital punishment, as the lives of two men are in the balance.

In Washington.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 30.—As the election draws near, it becomes more apparent here that the prohibition question is the most absorbing of all the political issues to be decided November 2, in this state. A spirited contest has been on and with the arrival of the flying squadron from the east in the interest of prohibition initiative, the fight is at fever heat. Both sides claim victory and a dispassionate view of either side would give both sides ground for their claim.

New Jersey Moose.

TRENTON, Oct. 30.—In the interest of the progressive candidates of the counties embracing the fourth congressional district, Col. Theodore Roosevelt is scheduled to arrive here this afternoon and address the voters of this city. The second regiment armory is to be the scene of the meeting and in view of the fact that this will be the first appearance of the colonel in Trenton since 1912, it was anticipated this morning that a great throng of listeners, representing all parties, would turn out this afternoon to hear what he has to say.

Chronic Dyspepsia.

The following unsolicited testimonial should certainly be sufficient to give hope and courage to persons afflicted with chronic dyspepsia: "I have been a chronic dyspeptic for years, and of all the medicine I have taken, Chamberlain's Tablets have done me more good than anything else," says W. ### HEAVY EXPENSES IN PFANSCHMIDT CASE

Trials Alone Cost Adams County More Than $14,000, It is Figured, Exclusive of Appeal.

The trials of Ray Pfanschmidt have been costly to Adams county, says the Quincy Herald. The cost of the first trial was $5,595.67. The cost of the trial at Macomb was $8,085.50, including the $2,000 paid by Adams county to Walter H. Bennett. In the cost of the first trial the fee of Attorney John E. Wall was not counted because this fee was paid personally by Mr. Kaempfen. With this amount deducted, the actual trial costs in Macomb were smaller than in Adams county. The trials cost Adams county $14,782.17.

The following is the detailed cost of the trial in Macomb, according to the figures of the circuit clerk:

Jurors accepted	$2,231.00

OH, SKINNY! LOOKY HERE

Look here kids—would you know when Hallowe'en comes if you didn't read it in the papers? The police say you wouldn't. They say you wouldn't give them any trouble at all on Hallowe'en if the papers didn't talk so much about it. And say, kids—look what the cops say. They say they're not going to have any special policemen on the job tomorrow night—that they're not going to pay attention to Hallowe'en. But you better look out. You can't always tell about these cops. They might fool you—if they can—so be careful.

TEN DAYS IN JAIL FOR SUPERINTENDENT

Fine of $500 Tacked on for Good Measure in the Contempt Case.

[United Press Leased Wire Service.] CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 30.—Supt. J. J. Frederick, Cleveland public school superintendent, was today sentenced to ten days in jail and fined $500 by Judge Neff for contempt of court in dismissing six school teachers active in forming a teachers' union, in disregard of a court injunction.

This is the first time a school superintendent has been given a jail sentence for such offense. The sentence imposed was the maximum under the contempt statute.

The contempt trial resulted from an injunction issued by Neff, restraining the carrying out of a resolution adopted by the school board barring prohibition teachers from schools. In failing to appoint six teachers, Neff held Frederick was in contempt. Frederick, found guilty Monday, had been given until today to reinstate the ousted teachers. Had he done so Neff intimated Frederick would have received only nominal punishment. Frederick, through counsel, told Neff he would not reappoint the teachers. Neff immediately imposed sentence. The outcome of the case is a tremendous victory for the teachers and for organized labor. The decision set a precedent, expected to be far reaching in its effect as teachers in other cities are fighting for the right to organize.

When "Pigs is Pigs."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—"Pigs is pigs," the comic tale recently popular, was vividly before the interstate commerce commission and representatives of express companies when the commission today opened hearings on new rules proposed, regulating packing and shipping of a widely miscellaneous list of merchandise.

How to ship guinea pigs was one of the questions before the commission. Hasty transport of the animals is an imperative rule of the express companies.

Other questions involved in the hearings were:

Maximum weight limit for shipments of mice; standardizing value of opessums; how to pack duck eggs; protection of live crabs in shipment and treatment of shrimps (edible variety). Regulations for shipping moving picture films were also before the commission.

HONEY IS SOUR ON AMERICANS

Excellent Opportunity to Get Spanish Trade, but Business Men Seem Unequal to the Task.

DON'T USE THEIR WITS

Fine Business Could Be Built Up Just Now if It Were Only Given the Proper Attention.

[By United Press Staff Correspondent.]

MADRID, Spain, Sept. 11.—(By mail to New York.)—If you want to hear Mr. American Business man called names, even to fool and even to blankety-blank-fool, you want to sit in the office of Robertson Honey the American consul here and listen to him and J. M. Gay, who's the vice-consul, tell what they know about Mr. A. B. Man's efforts (?) to do business with Spanish firms.

Robertson Honey has been on the job here since June. He used to be in the district attorney's office in New York and his American gingers is almost getting the best of him. By that I mean that he's likely to break all precedents in the way of attracting the attention of American business men to the chances that are open to them in Spain and the way they're throwing them down. "Ever since this war began," he told me, "German business in Spain, which is the largest, has been chopping off. Spanish firms have been writing to me asking me to get American firms to supply them with what they can't get from Germany."

Mr. Honey can't be a drummer for American firms. The best he can do is to make a little report into the "Trade Opportunity" corner of the consular reports. American business men see it there and sent a letter, written in English, which the Spanish business man throws away. Or, he doesn't even put through postage on his letter, being not even interested enough in foreign business to know how much it costs to send a letter to Spain, and the Spanish business man refuses the letter rather than pay the difference.

It isn't because the Spanish business man cares for the few extra centimes; it's because he doesn't want to do business with a man who doesn't know enough about the matter in hand to be able to pick out the right postage stamp.

There are about fifteen men in Madrid who have built up fine businesses importing various articles from the United States to Spain; there might be many more if American merchants would only do foreign business the way the foreigner wants it done, or, at least, split the difference with him.

Here's an instance of how American business men, unless they get their wits about them, will try to crowd out foreign trade in Spain during the war:

A Spanish architect wanted Americans to bid on fittings for a great public building. They did. They wrote letters in English that went right into the waste basket and sent catalogs in the same language that went right into the furnace. And a man from Germany got a $175,000 job. There's a man here now who has a contract to supply part of the ships clips for rifle bullets and part of the cartridge shells used by the Spanish government. He wrote the American consul and asked him to let American firms know about his needs. The first letter this Spanish gentleman got from a big American business house didn't have enough stamps on it but the Spaniard paid the mailman the difference. He opened the letter and found it was written in English, which he couldn't read and into the waste basket it went and he turned sore on all American business merchants and manufacturers.

"What do they know about shipping rates?" he asked, "if they don't know even about postal rates? And how much do they care for my business if they won't even go to the trouble of writing to me in a language I can understand? There's another man here who has fitted up a great aeroplane factory for the Spanish army, which is planning to have a large fleet of flyers. He has written Consul Honey asking him what American firms can do for him in the way of supplying parts. It is a big contract and I'm scooping the consular reports when I tell about it.

"What's the use?" said Mr. Honey to me. "The firms in the United States who sell such things will probably see my report in the Consular Journal and they'll flood my poor Spanish friends with catalogs he can't read and letters he can't understand. He'll throw the whole unintelligible shooting match into the fire and wait until the European war is over when he can get what he wants from the German or French factories."

I've got another scoop on the consular report, too. Spain is going on a gold basis. It was an announcement that pleased the financial world only two days ago. But, for weeks the

New York.—"The skin on my hand got red and rough. It itched and I began to scratch it. It itched so that sometimes I could not sleep all night. I was suffering very much.
