GUNN RECITAL IS MOST ENJOYABLE

One of America's Most Eminent Pianists Was Heard Last Night in Lecture Recital Here.

MUSIC CLUB AUSPICES

Program Was Chronological in Arrangement and Included Old and Modern School Composers.

[By Clara Gertrude Fry.]

Last evening in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium, one of the most interesting and instructive programs of the year was presented when Mr. Glenn Dillard Gunn, pianist, appeared in lecture recital under the auspices of the Monday Music club. The program was of remarkable scope, including composers from the classical, romantic and ultra modern eras.

Bach, representative of the strictly classical in art form; Schubert, Chopin and Beethoven, the romantic period, and Debussy, the modern French school, and our own MacDowell.

Mr. Gunn is not only a pianist of remarkable technical attainments but is an eminent authority on matters musical, possessing a versatility that makes him at home in all departments of piano literature. He is also a member of the extension faculty of the University of Chicago. His playing, last evening, displayed his marked scholarship, his interpretation of every number on the program had the polish and insight that pronounced him a most refined artist and a master of pianistic art.

His playing is dazzling in its brilliancy, his touch soft and caressing yet resolute—a combination of tonal qualities which causes the delicate nuances of shading to stand out in bold relief.

The arrangement of the program might be termed "chronological," beginning as it did with Bach and closing with the modern school. Bach, melodically considered, was a genius of the highest type—he brought the art form termed "fugue" to perfection. It was an adaptation of the Netherlandish art of canonic imitation combined with more modern ideas of tonal completeness and finesse. Beethoven's seriousness of purpose and depth of mind are evident in every note of his compositions—as a tone poet he is without a peer. Schubert, one of the principal founders of the modern imaginative and romantic school, is noted for the astonishing spontaneity of his compositions, especially in the department of songs; his instrumental compositions show the marked influence of the "Lied." Chopin belongs strictly to the romantic period; his works are necessarily song-like in character, the treatment always graceful with splendid and strong contrasts.

On Dividing Line. Brahms stands on the border land dividing the classical from the romantic and modern; early in his career as composer, he was considered an advocate of the modern trend, but his instrumental compositions represent more strictly the classical principles in regard to form. Within the last two decades his compositions have become more appreciated and it is an established fact that the enormous demands in technique are beyond the reach of any but the greatest of virtuosi. Liszt, known in the musical world as a reformer, evinces his reformation in composition in his treatment of the sonata.

Deviating from the accepted sonata form he created a lyric and dramatic movement which he termed "Sonata." The tremendous B minor Sonata is one of perhaps, three of his greatest works for the piano—the other two are his Concertos in E flat and A major. The Celtic Sonata, by MacDowell, is as masterful a composition as ever emanated from the brain of a composer; its seriousness and solidity of thought places the American composer among the foremost composers in piano literature.

Debussy, who is so fond of the harmonies to be derived from the use of the whole tone scale, employs a welcome variety of tonal qualities—whimsical, shadowy and well balanced emotional innovations, which call for mental pictures and throw aside the restrictions with which the piano has been bound, causing the single instrument to display the tone color reflected in orchestral effects.

Mr. Gunn's explanatory talk covered the entire range of pianistic literature and musical history.

The program was as follows:
 Fantasia and Fuga, G minor..... Bach-Liszt
 Andante favori..... Beethoven
 Scherzo in B minor..... Chopin
 Bear Dance..... Bella Bartoc
 Moment Musical..... Schubert
 Capriccio..... Brahms
 Andante from "Celtic" sonata..... MacDowell
 "Fagades"..... Debussy
 "Laufenburg"..... D'Indy
 Sonata in B minor (in one movement)..... Liszt
 The club hostesses were: Miss Clara Gertrude Fry, Miss Mary Louise Westcott.

The house committee was: Miss Elizabeth Collier, Mr. H. T. Graham.

Just as Well, Perhaps. Waterloo Times-Tribune: It may be just as well if the Illinois house doesn't elect a speaker and cannot get organized for business.

READY TO PASS BRIDGE ORDINANCE

City Council Expects to Pass Ordinance Tomorrow—Bridge Company Ready With Check.

LETTER FROM GILMAN

Secretary-Treasurer of Bridge Company Writes Moorhead—Thanks Those Who Helped Bill.

The city ordinance contemplated in the contract between the city and the Keokuk and Hamilton Bridge company and providing for a landing of the Iowa approach within this city, will probably be passed tomorrow when it is expected the bridge company will turn over to the city a check for $2,200, the amount called for in the contract which is to pay the cost of constructing the viaduct on this side of the bridge.

Mayor Moorhead recently took the matter up with Theodore Gilman, secretary of the bridge company, stating that it was the desire of the council to pass the ordinance on March 17 and requesting that the check of the bridge company be ready for the city at that time. In reply to this letter he received the following from Mr. Gilman:

Hon. S. W. Moorhead, Mayor, Keokuk, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—I am in receipt of your letter of the 9th inst., and notice that the ordinance contemplated in our contract will be taken up for passage March 17 when I expect to be ready to make the payment of the $2,200 as called for in the contract. This ordinance has been carefully considered by us and by our counsel, Judge Hughes, and with the slight changes he suggests and to which we think there will be no objection, the measure is satisfactory to us.

It takes a great load off my mind that I was able to set our bill through congress in the last days of the session when there was so much work pressing for attention.

The bridge company desires to thank you and the mayor of Hamilton for your telegram to Mr. Kennedy who helped to smooth the way for the bill. We are also indebted to Senator Cummins for assistance in this matter and to Mr. Kennedy for his active exertions in behalf of the bill.

Judge Adams told me positively that we could expect no legislation this session of congress, but when he found that all opposition was removed, he promptly had the bill, which was introduced by Mr. Kennedy, considered favorably by his committee and passed by the house. For the attitude of the Inter-City Bridge company in waiving of opposition to our bill we are grateful to them and Mr. Joy for the letters they sent to Senators Cummins, Kenyon and Representative Kennedy and Judge Adams.

Very truly yours,

THEODORE GILMAN, Treasurer.

At that time it was believed that a witness from Chicago who had been telegraphed for, would be heard from.

For Freckled, Rough or Spotty Complexions

The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which delicate skins are subject after exposure to wind or sun, often appearing in early spring, readily be gotten rid of. Merciolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any drugstore. There's no more effective way of banishing freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weather, worry or illness are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in 4 pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvelous transformation.

AMUSEMENTS

Hippodrome Theater—Mrs. Leslie Carter in Du Barry Tomorrow.

Campbell Gollan, who plays that most romantic of blacklegs, the exquisites Comte Jean Du Barry, in George Kleins' beautiful six-part feature "Du Barry," which comes to the Hippodrome theatre tomorrow, had his first experience before the motion picture camera in his old familiar role, in the Kleins studios at Grugliasso, Italy, last summer. With Mrs. Leslie Carter, Hamilton Revelle, Richard Thornton and other members of the original cast that made the stage play so celebrated, Gollan went through the various scenes using the off-repeated lines of the play wherever possible. In the Petit Lever scene where Mrs. Carter hides the wounded Cosse in her bed, only to be discovered by Du Barry, the language of the play was used by the three characters with all the ease of long familiarity.

But a motion picture built from a play contains many scenes, the action of which is made plain on the stage by words. Hence there were moments when it was difficult to find the proper words and Campbell Gollan tells of one such experience which occurred in Naples, Italy.

"I was notified one morning to get dressed and make up in my revolutionary garb for a 'hurry-up' scene. I jumped into an automobile and was speedily whisked to a remote part of Naples where I was unceremoniously hustled to the top of a rock pile in the midst of a great crowd of wild-looking Neapolitans dressed as French revolutionists. One of our Italian directors assisted me to mount the stones and in his very limited English indicated that I was to incite these people to violence. I looked around helplessly at that mob. Such a mob! Quite the wildest-looking aggregation I have ever seen. They were shouting and clamoring and waving their swords, sticks, synthes and guns in a most disconcerting manner. My mind became a perfect blank until above that din I heard the director's first whistle which meant for me to get ready. I could think of absolutely nothing to say. Then the second whistle sounded shrill and clear and to my utter amazement I found myself vehemently addressing that crowd with—'Marc Antony's oration from 'Julius Caesar.' It was an inspiration. The strange English language suddenly struck the crowd dumb and the ditherto unruly multitude stood aghast. I heard the camera grinding away and casting a hurried look in its direction, saw Mr. Kleins with Mrs. Carter and Hamilton Revelle convulsed with laughter. I continued to borrow from Shakespeare until near the end of the scene and then in my choicest Italian yelled, 'Now boys rip the tar out of it—at which they tore loose again! And this they tell me is one of the best scenes in the picture.'—Advertisement.

Wizard of Oz Coming.

On Monday, March 22, a benefit will be given in the Grand opera house for the Keokuk Visiting Nurse association. The picture is in five reels and is "The New Wizard of Oz." Our old friends, the Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman, are to pay us another visit. This time it will be on the film, for they could not withstand the temptation of becoming movie actors. In this film, which will be the special attraction, we will see our friends in chapter of their lives which has never yet been divulged. Their grotesque and marvelous adventures in the land of Oz, where they overturn the throne of King Krewl and finally end their exploits by the Scarecrow being crowned king, is a tale in the telling of which there is not a dull moment. We advise every friend of this famous trio—Dorothy, the Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman—to be at the theatre early so that they will be sure of a seat. There will be two afternoon matinees at 2:30 and 4 o'clock, and three evening performances at 7, 8 and 9:15. There is no advance in price, the regular rate 5 and 10c will be charged. The picture is interesting and entertaining, not only for children but for grown ups as well.—Advertisement.

SUCCESS.

'Tis the coward who quits to misfortune, 'Tis the knave who changes each day, 'Tis the fool who wins half the battle, Then throws all his chances away.

There is little in life but labor, And tomorrow may find that a dream; Success is the bride of Endeavor, And luck—but a meteor's gleam.

The time to succeed is when others are discouraged, show traces of tire; The battle is fought in the home-stretch— And won—twixt the flag and the wire!

Daily Stock Letter. [Copyright 1915 by the New York Evening Post.]

NEW YORK, March 16.—The stock exchange had news enough to reflect today, if it had been in a mood for reflecting; but it apparently was not. Our state department deprecatory but perfect attitude towards the British government embargo; increasing signs that Italy is about to go to war; the slightly better situation as regards Mexico, the destruction of another German sea rover—any of these occurrences might have evoked some response in prices. The stock market, however, remained inert and fractional fluctuations were again the rule.

Little of interest occurred in foreign exchange. Although the London discount rate was still firmer, sterling exchange gave no tangible response. Exchange on Berlin recovered 3/4 cent further. The rate is now 2 1/2 cents above the low level of March 1, though still abnormally depreciated.
