

ARE GLAD TO BE BACK HOME AGAIN

Mrs. and Mrs. T. F. Brady Arrive in Keokuk After a Year Spent in Russia, Before the War.

HARD TIME TO LEAVE

Saw Little of the War, But Suffered Many Inconveniences Because of It, When Leaving the Country.

"We saw little of the war and outside of being inconvenienced in a number of ways, were little affected by it," said T. F. Brady, formerly of this city, who arrived here yesterday with his wife, formerly Miss Helen Bartruff, after spending the last two years in central Russia and Petrograd.

Mr. and Mrs. Brady left Petrograd February 11 and reached Chicago Wednesday of last week, after having spent nearly three weeks in London. They reached here yesterday and are now at the home of Mrs. Bartruff, 512 High street.

"Of course, we had to go through many inspections and examinations before leaving St. Petersburg," said Mr. Brady. "Our passports had to be signed and examined by many officials, our baggage inspected a number of times and very rigid examinations made of everything we had before we could leave. But the officials always treated us most kindly and very courteously."

"We were in central Russia at the time the war broke out and had been living in Russia for over a year at that time. Soon after war was declared, we left for St. Petersburg, remaining there until the time of our departure for this country."

"St. Petersburg shows little effect of the war. We saw many wounded soldiers who had been brought there from the front and I talked to a number of Russian officers. Their greatest difficulty at the present time is that of equipping their men. Russia could easily put a million more men in the war if they could equip them. It is the belief in St. Petersburg that as soon as a passageway is forced through the Dardanelles, that there will be little trouble in securing all the munitions of war that will be needed by the Russian government."

is a Popular War. "This is popular war with the Russians. It is not like the war with Japan in this respect. Russians want the war, they are enthusiastic over it and all factions in the country are strongly united in the support of the government in the war at the present time."

"The people of Russia are absolutely confident of the ultimate defeat of the Germans. In their belief, it is merely a question of time until Germany will be conquered. If it does not come within the next few months they believe it will come within a year. And if it does not come this year, it will come next year. They are unshaken in their faith in the allies to win. Their country is one of immense resources and they realize that this may prove one of the factors that will determine the winner of the war."

"The government order against the sale of liquor in Russia is a popular one with the people and is proving a great thing. The sale of every kind of intoxicating liquor has been absolutely prohibited by this order, so that it is now impossible to buy any kind of an intoxicating drink in the country."

As a whole, the Russian people are ignorant and illiterate. It has been their custom to grow their sorrows in vodka. But the prohibition of the sale of liquor will, in the course of a short time, have a great effect upon the conditions of the people, in my belief. They seem to be awakening—to be coming to a realization of their position, and already a big improvement is noticeable."

Jews Still Mistrusted. "There is little if any change in the condition of Jews in Russia and their treatment seems to have been unaffected by the war. There still is discrimination against the Jews as there was before the outbreak of the war. There are, however, a great many Jews in the Russian army and the Jews of all nations seem to be absolutely united in their support of the allies."

"The people of the United States are probably better informed in the news of the war than those who have been living in Russia. I am sure that I know nothing that has not been published in American newspapers. The censorship of news in all the warring nations is very strict and are practically limited to the official communications that are published by the French and Russian military departments. We get in St. Petersburg, however, the reports issued by the German government, although as a rule they are printed in a tone of satire."

"American and English people in Russia are treated with the greatest consideration. There is no nation of people more polite and courteous than the Russians. Americans are practically the same as English to the Russians. If you speak the English language you are an Englishman in the mind of the Russians. They think of Englishmen and Americans as brothers."

Leaving Russia. Mr. Brady stated that he and Mrs.

Brady left St. Petersburg on February 11, traveling by land to the west coast of Norway, where they embarked in a Norwegian steamer for England. They were on the North sea at the time the blockade went into effect, but he stated that they did not encounter any submarines and did not see any mines. They had absolutely no trouble on their voyage to England outside of some bad weather, he said. They arrived at New Castle and proceeded at once for London, reaching that city February 17, six days after leaving St. Petersburg. They remained in London until March 7. Their ship, the Adriatic, was to have sailed on the third, but was delayed until the seventh on account of labor troubles and strikes in England. There have been so many men taken from England by the war that labor troubles furnish a very serious problem to the English government, Mr. Brady said. They finally sailed on the seventh, coming to Chicago and then to this city. The parents of both Mr. and Mrs. Brady live in this city.

Mr. Brady is employed by Swift and Company and was a representative of that company in Russia at the time of the outbreak of the war. He said that he did not know whether or not he would be sent back there and that his plans for the future have not been discussed so far. He expects, however, to be here at least for a few days longer.

Mr. Brady said he was sorry not to be able to give out any more definite information about the war. "We saw so very little of it that you probably know as much about it as I do," he said. "There is one thing I can tell you, though, and that is that Mrs. Brady and I are mighty glad to get back home."

CAN CARRY BOOZE IN SUBMARINES

Under Water Boats and Airships Allowed to Bring It Over from Illinois Next Year.

[United Press Leased Wire Service.] DES MOINES, Iowa, March 22.—The senate today passed the fifth of the long line of bills intended to enforce prohibition. This is the bill to confiscate autos found with beer or other booze. An amendment by Thompson to add aeroplanes and submarines was defeated.

Senator Chase has offered a bill to reduce the tax levies. He would reduce the general county fund from six to four mills, general county road tax from two to one and a half mills and all other taxes in proportion.

Senator Parker has offered three bills to affect the situation as to conflict between workmen's compensation law and firemen's and policemen's pensions funds.

Among senate bills introduced today were the following:

By Chase, to repeal the law as to duties of the retrenchment and reform committee.

By military committee authorizing soldiers' monuments to be paid for out of soldiers relief fund.

In the house today, the Anderson bill to pension the blind at $150 a year, was passed, 55 to 17.

The Kane bill to create the office of probation officer and assistants was passed.

The house refused, because of the lack of a constitutional majority of 55, to pass the bill for the erection of a pedestal for a monument to the late George D. Perkins of Sioux City, in the state house park.

Henry Bronson, of Manchester, and Senator Hagerman, each have five votes and until this deadlock is broken, no national committeeman will be selected. It was reported that Nick Reed, of Ottumwa, would not be a candidate and that W. W. Marsh, of Waterloo, would win the big job, but then again Reed may capture the plum.

SCHEDULE WILL BE RELEASED ON FRIDAY

President Justice Praises Directors for Their Harmonious Action in Adopting Chart.

The Central association schedule will be released Friday of this week, President M. E. Justice announced this morning. The schedule was adopted as first framed, not one of the clubs objecting to it. The schedule provides for sixty-five home games for each club. Four clubs have one holiday game and four others two holiday games. All clubs have nine Sunday games at home.

In speaking of the action of the directors on the schedule, Mr. Justice said this morning, "It is no wonder the Central association holds its high reputation among the minor leagues of the country with our directors acting in such harmony as this. They are all willing to take an even break on anything that comes up and none of the directors are looking for chances to get the best of the other clubs."

America's Foremost News-Weekly

Twenty-five years ago this month the first number of THE LITERARY DIGEST was published. To-day, a million busy people read it because they know that it gives all the facts on all sides of all subjects. They know that to keep reliably informed on every important phase of all important happenings throughout the world, they must read THE LITERARY DIGEST, for there is no other weekly like it. "It supplies a want felt alike by professional and lay readers," testifies Justice Holmes, of the United States Supreme Court.

THE LITERARY DIGEST reproduces illustrations, cartoons, maps, and portraits—it reprints every significant utterance of European statesmen and diplomats—it shows the points of view of the countries engaged in the war by translating and reprinting important articles, documents, and news-facts from the newspapers of these countries.

"If a man were marooned upon a desert island and had access to but one periodical—THE LITERARY DIGEST—he would keep better informed on what the world is thinking and doing than would the average man in the city with hundreds of periodicals at his command," is the way in which one enthusiast expresses his appreciation of it.

While the DIGEST is just now specializing on the absorbing news of the war, it also gives each week all sides and shades of opinion concerning important happenings in the worlds of Science, Politics, Invention, Sport, Art, Literature, Religion, Education, Industry, etc. It is profusely illustrated and handsomely printed.

Money and Autos. Manchester Press: A friend of ours called attention to an interesting fact the other day. We were discussing the money stringency and trying to find a cause for it. This man referred to the statistics showing that there are something like 108,000 automobiles in Iowa. There are ninety-nine counties in the state. If Delaware is an average county, it has an investment in automobiles of over $1,000,000. Some of these cars are utility vehicles, but the greater part of them are used for pleasure. Each car represents, no doubt, an average depreciation of 25 percent annually, and the thousand cars in the county, assuming that to be the number, burn up a large sum annually in gasoline and oil. A million dollar outlay by one county on good roads, for instance, would be considered a heavy drain on its supply of money, so while we are looking around for an excuse for the scarcity of the useful it may lie at our very door. But if you own an automobile, do you want to go back to the horse?
